Commodity Shortage Reducing U.S. Aid

By Don Kendall

Washington (AP) — For almost 20 years, the Food for Peace program has been hailed by supporters as one of the great humanitarian efforts of all time and by critics as a cleverly disguised vehicle for dumping surplus U.S. farm commodities on poor countries.

The program, which has helped move $22 billion worth of farm products overseas since 1954, is a mixture of both. Its humanitarian benefits for truly needy people are a matter of record, as are its economic gains for American farmers and U.S. trade.

But probably now as never before has Food for Peace been subjected to as complete and varied examination of its merits, both philosophic and monetary.

If there is a basic question, it might be this: Will the United States continue to be a generous provider of low-cost aid to needy countries now that huge farm surpluses have melted, or will the profit motive win out so that even poor countries will have to compete with rich ones for U.S. crop exports?

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., says Food for Peace is a moral program and that it should transcend politics and economics. It is time, he told a recent Senate hearing, that Congress take action to stress the humanitarian aspects of food aid.

One measure of Food for Peace effectiveness has been the amount of federal money spent each year to subsidize shipments of wheat, corn and other commodities to recipient countries.

For several years that has been about $1 billion annually.

But soaring prices have sharply reduced the actual quantities of products made available under Food for Peace.

In the next fiscal year, the Food for Peace budget proposed by President Nixon would continue at about the $1 billion level currently in effect.

But officials think that lower prices for many commodities will permit large quantities to be moved under the program next season. Wheat sales may rise to 46.4 million bushels, for example, but still be far less than in most earlier years.

Lyle P. Schertz, deputy administrator for international economics in the Economic Research Service of the Agriculture Dept., notes that while overall U.S. farm exports have soared to record levels, the actual quantities of cereal grains allocated to Food for Peace have dropped to the lowest levels since the program began in 1954.

In perspective, overall U.S. farm exports in the current fiscal year are expected to exceed $20 billion, up from the previous high of $12.9 billion in 1972-73. Of that amount, Food for Peace shipments will account for only $1 billion, about 5%.

Ten years ago, during the high tide of Food for Peace aid — including massive shipments to India — total U.S. farm exports were valued at less than $6.1 billion. The Food for Peace shipments made up nearly $1.6 billion, or about 20%.

Schertz, writing in the current Foreign Affairs Quarterly, notes that richer, industrialized nations rely more heavily on grain fed to livestock as a protein source, while poor countries consume most of their grain directly.

"All told, the billion people in the rich nations, with Cadillac tastes for livestock products, use practically as much cereal as feed for livestock as the two billion people in the low-income nations use directly, as food," Schertz said.

Schertz said the tight grain supply situation and high prices make it "not now advantageous to U.S. agriculture" to move large quantities of food overseas under aid programs.

Schertz said "it is totally unrealistic" to expect Food for Peace shipments for long term credit to return to the high levels of past years.

But other voices say Food for Peace can be modified to become a major part of a worldwide effort and help poor countries regardless of whether it is more profitable to sell commodities for cash.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., says the question is "whether we will provide foreign food assistance only in times of plenty" or do so even when it hurts a bit.

"Our real test as a nation comes at a time when our sharing is not the easy one of relieving us of surplus," he said.

Kissinger Hopes 'Moderately Upbeat' On Chances for Syrian-Israel Pact

Disengagement Try to Continue

From News Wires

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger received a new, detailed Syrian proposal Saturday for a disengagement of forces with Israel in the Golan Heights.

After discussing the plan with the Syrian emissary, Brig. Gen. Hikmat Chehabi, and with the Egyptian and Soviet foreign ministers, Kissinger said he was "moderately upbeat" about chances for settlement.

He will confer at the State Dept. this morning with Simcha Dinitz, the Israeli ambassador, and go to the Middle East around April 25 to try and bridge the differences between the Syrian proposal and one presented to him March 30 by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

"It was a constructive attempt on their part," Kissinger said of the plan and map brought to him by Chehabi, the Syrian military intelligence chief.

After a brief early-evening session with the general, Kissinger told newsmen the two sides were approaching the halfway point toward an agreement. He said Chehabi had authorized him to pass along the plan to the Israeli side.

In between the two meetings, Kissinger conferred with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and separately with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

"The United States will continue its efforts to bring the two sides together," the secretary told newsmen, "and it continues to consider disengagement between Syrian and Israeli forces the primary objective to be achieved in the Middle East right now."

Kissinger, who saw Chehabi three times, added: "I believe the talks we had here this weekend have furthered this effort."

As Kissinger pursued his diplomacy, Israel sent warplanes against Syria for the second time since the October war. According to Tel Aviv, the planes hit an invading Syrian force that had infiltrated the Golan Heights truce line.

Syrian TV Charge

Adding to the somber backdrop, the Syrian state-controlled television charged Kissinger with paying attention only to "superficial details" rather than the basic issue of Israeli withdrawal from former Arab lands.

A commentator for Damascus television said Syria no longer considers the cease-fire still in effect and "we now consider ourselves at war with Israel."

"The fighting that has been taking place daily on the Golan Heights for more than one month is clear proof of this fact."

And Tass, the Soviet news agency, attributed tensions in the area to "Israel's ruling circles and the external forces backing it."

But Kissinger, Chehabi and Fahmy all beamed smiles at newsmen in the State Dept. lobby and spoke optimistically.

Chehabi, in Arabic, said he agreed with Kissinger's description of their conversations. "I would like to express great appreciation for the secretary's efforts to bring about a just and durable peace in the area," the Syrian general added.

The Syrian Military Command, following clashes with Israeli air and ground forces, vowed Saturday in Damascus to continue its war with Israel until all occupied Arab lands are liberated.

"All in all, today was the biggest day of activity with Syria since the war," a knowledgeable military source in Tel Aviv said.

The Israeli fighters took to the skies only hours after Israeli ground forces raided six villages in southern Lebanon in retaliation for the terrorist attack on Qiryat Shmonah on Thursday. A Lebanese woman and her daughter were reported killed in the raid.

A United Nations spokesman said Saturday night Lebanon has requested an urgent Security Council meeting to discuss the raid. No meeting time has been announced officially, but some members of the council said they have been told it would begin Monday afternoon.

Several U.N. sources said the United States had pressured Lebanon not to ask for the session, fearing a debate would upset Kissinger's Israeli-Syrian disengagement talks.

About dusk Saturday, Israeli artillery opened fire on "suspected concentrations of saboteurs" in southern Lebanon. Villagers in the region said two towns were shelled intermittently for 45 minutes. No casualties were reported.

A small bomb exploded in a hallway outside the Lebanese consulate in Los A Saturday, causing minimal damage and no injuries.

Shortly before the blast, a young woman called the UPI bureau, saying a bomb had been placed at the office and Jewish people "would never be massacred again." She ended the message by asserting, "Never again," a slogan of the Jewish Defense League.

Easter Optimism Echoes In Tornado-Struck City

XENIA, Ohio (AP) — "We will meet in our church with patches on the roof and no windows, and we'll probably be able to see the choir's breath in the cold, but we will be here," said the Rev. James C. Hart, rector of Christ Episcopal Church in downtown Xenia.

His optimism was echoed by other clergymen in Xenia who said that the Easter season will not be a time of mourning, despite the tornado that struck the town 11 days ago.

"Pessimists will be cast out after the first hymn," said the Rev. Raymond D. Pope of the Faith Community United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Howard Rickey, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, said, "There are many tragedies as a result of this tornado. There will be more. But, there will be more miracles than tragedies."

The youthful pastor looked at the shambles of his church — the top story gone, part of the roof ripped off the Sunday school wing, splintered glass, water-stained walls. But he said the loss might have been worse.

"We had 145 of our Kiddie Kollege day-care children in the building," he said. "After sighting the tornado we got them all into the basement — students, teachers and employes. Had they been upstairs it would have been the greatest tragedy of the storm."

The April 3 tornado killed 37 residents of Xenia and injured hundreds more. It cut a swath three-quarters of a mile wide and seven miles long through this southwestern Ohio city of 25,000, causing damage estimated at $75 million or more.

The Rev. Mr. Pope's church on the northside escaped the wrath of the storm, but his home was destroyed and 172 church families suffered heavy damage to homes and businesses.

"I think what I'm going to say is that for the first time many people are really going to be able to understand what resurrection really means," he said.

"You have to realize that Christ was more effective after the resurrection than before, and this storm can be a turning point."

"We lost 14 homes completely, another dozen damaged," said the Rev. Mr. Hart. "We had three injuries, but, thank God, no fatalities. That is what my people are saying. 'Thank God, no one died and we'll put it back together.'"

Steven Adams, music director of the First Church of the Nazarene, wrote a song the day of the storm, the Rev. Mr. Rickey reported.

"He wrote the words after he came from a destroyed building," the reverend said. "Those words are what Easter will be this year:

"We rejoice because we can see. We rejoice because we can breathe. We rejoice because we can reach out and embrace our wives, our husbands, our sons and our daughters.

"We rejoice because, at this very moment, we can feel the pulse of life running through our veins, and the throb of tomorrow's potential coursing through our minds."

U.S.-Soviet Detente Not So Tough

Centreville, Md. (AP) — Whatever course Soviet-American detente may take at the summit, it is taking strong root in this town on Maryland's Eastern Shore, and trees may be the reason.

Staff members of the Soviet Embassy in Washington are planting hundreds of trees during weekends at Pioneer Point, the embassy's retreat on the Chester River. They're getting help from forestry officials and warm support from their Queen Annes County neighbors.

It all started last month when John R. Riley, regional forester for the state, and Jay Dunbar, county forester, received a routine request from a not - so - routine source.

Riley said he and Dunbar were contacted by Soviet representatives who invited them to Pioneer Point to discuss plans for tree planting based on a map of the estate drawn by Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

At the estate, the Soviets offered a luncheon and toasts with Russian vodka, one of which, Riley recalled, was to Smokey Bear.

Over the past two weekends, the embassy staff members have set out 2,000 loblolly pines and 50 walnut seedlings.

"Tree planting is a custom in our country," explained embassy staff member Vladimir Mikoyan. "Every parent teaches the child to plant at least one tree for the good of all people. It is a habit to plant trees wherever possible."

When the Soviets first bought 40 acres and the two main residences on the former John Jacob Rascob estate in 1972, there was some ill feeling among local residents. Today, there is little sing of strain between the two groups.

Mikoyan, who spends weekends at Pioneer Point with his wife and their 8 - month - old daughter, noted that he has passed the same local man on the streets of Centreville two weekends in a row. On the second occasion, Mikoyan said, he was greeted as an old friend.

"It was very nice," he said.

At Subic Bay Naval Base

Former Nebraskan Killed in Ambush

A former Nebraskan was one of the three U.S. Naval officers killed Saturday in an ambush in an isolated corner of the American Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines, 50 miles northwest of Manila.

Cmdr. Leland R. Dobler, formerly of York, was killed by unidentified assailants while inspecting a security road around the northeastern perimeter of the base, according to a Navy spokesman. Also killed were Lt. Charles Jeffries of Virginia Beach, Va., and Capt. T. J. Mitchell, whose hometown was not immediately known.

Cmdr. Dobler's wife Gladys Elaine (Schumacher), formerly of Grant, and five children now live in Gulfport, Miss., where Dobler was based as commanding officer of the Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 133.

His mother Mrs. Art (Marjorie) Dobler, is the only relative still living in York. His brother Ron is flying from San Francisco to Mississippi, where services are pending.

Cmdr. Dobler graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1956, and received his commission as a ROTC graduate. He was a member of the Pi Tau Sigma national honorary mechanical engineering fraternity and the Sigma Tau engineering honorary at U of N.

"There is no indication at this time" Communist Hukbalahap guerrillas killed the officers, the spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Keith Schacher, said in reply to a question from United Press International reporters at Manila. "We are conducting an investigation of this tragic incident and we certainly won't speculate on anything."

"The group was on an inspection tour traveling toward a Seabee (construction battalion) team working on the northern section of the road," Schacher said. He said the ambush site was within the base itself and about seven miles from the base headquarters.

Schacher said members of the Seabee team about half a mile away heard the shooting and rushed to the scene to find the three officers dead.

The naval station was promptly notified and a CH46 medical evacuation helicopter with a doctor flew to the site, the spokesman said. "A Marine unit, an ambulance and a Philippine constabulary (national police) team also rushed to assist," Schacher said.

The scene of the shooting was the foot of a mountainous area south of Mt. Santa Rita about three miles from an American communications relay station. Work on the boundary road began about two months ago so as to clearly mark the perimeter of the base.

Another Seabee team working on the southern section of the boundary road was ordered evacuated from the area after the shooting, Schacher said.

Subic Bay is a major repair and supply base for the U.S. 7th Fleet.

Gasoline Shortage West of Rockies?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vacationing motorists may run into some spot shortages of gasoline this summer, mainly west of the Rockies, but these should not be serious, the Federal Energy Office says.

"The definition of a spot shortage will be a gasoline line," said John Weber, assistant administrator for operations and compliance. But if lines develop, they will be short, and nothing like those of January and February, he said.

The energy office sees none of the kinds of spot shortages that plagued some areas last summer. Colorado, which ran into serious shortages, should not have any problems, Weber said.

Although the energy office has said that enough gasoline will be available for motorists to take vacations this summer if conservation is practiced, Americans will have to be more careful in planning their trips, Weber said.

This will mean calling ahead to check on the availability of gasoline, to see when service stations will be open, and to check on possible limitations on purchases, Weber said.

He suggested that motorists may want to check with the American Automobile Association or with Holiday Inns, which are running checks on gasoline availability.

"By and large, if people are reasonable, we shouldn't have this problem anywhere," Weber said.

He said California may experience some spot shortages this summer because the area west of the Rockies depends on its own refinery output and has no pipelines running from the mid-Continent.

Now, he said, these refineries are producing at a lesser rate of capacity than those on the East Coast, primarily because crude oil is less available.

A new pipeline has solved Colorado's problem and "the Rocky Mountains are awash with gasoline," said Weber.

Weber said he figures that the most anyone would have to wait in line this summer would be 20 minutes.

Motorists may find it a "general pain in the neck" in some areas with shorter gasoline station hours, he said.

Areas depending heavily on tourist trade should have plenty of gasoline, he said, primarily because they had plenty of supplies in 1972, the base year for government gasoline allocations.

Weber said he is concerned that Americans will slacken in their conservation efforts as supplies become more plentiful. But he said the higher prices that motorists will experience this summer should dampen demand

French Election

Poll Shows Mitterand Unlikely To Win Runoff

PARIS (AP) — An opinion poll indicated Saturday that Francois Mitterand, the leftist alliance candidate, would poll the most votes in the first round of the presidential election, but that most Frenchmen thought he could not win the runoff.

According to the poll, the first taken since the death of President Georges Pompidou, Mitterand would win from 38 to 40 per cent of the votes May 5, depending on who his opponent was

But the poll said that Frenchmen thought that either of the Gaullist-oriented candidates, Jacques Chaban-Delmas or Valery Giscard d'Estaing, would beat Mitterand in the second round required May 19 if no candidate wins a majority in the first round.

The poll said that 43 per cent thought Giscard d'Estaing had a better chance to win a runoff than Mitterand who was given 40 per cent. If Chaban-Delmas ran in the run-off, 45 per cent thought he would win and 37 per cent said Mitterand was the likely winner.

The poll was taken Tuesday by the newspaper France-Soir.

Hotto Newso Burretin

Reda Dissa, Iffa Youcanno —And Keepa 'Uppatodatu'

By Leonard Pratt

Tokyo (AP) — A night baseball game is a "nitah," an air conditioner is a "koolah," a dirty movie is a "porno" and if a girl is in the "mudo" she can go to a beauty shop and get a "perma "

The country where this language is spoken is Japan, and some people say that unless you speak English, you'll never understand modern Japanese.

Staying "uppatodatu" in Japan is complicated by the firm conviction that foreign languages — French, German, Spanish and above all English — are classy.

Old people complain they're unable to understand television ads, and those out of the country a few months say they have a lot of catching up to do when they get home.

One of Tokyo's major newspapers reserves space in each day's edition to explain new foreign words used in that paper. These are combined into a dictionary published at year's end. Last year it was 535 pages.

That can get technical, with words like capital gain — "kyapitaru gein" — and syndicated loan — "shinjiketo ron."

"There are some people critical of the introduction of foreign words, but they are in the minority," says a Japanese linguist. "I put them roughly in two main groups: conservative elderly professors and college-educated housewives.

"Why housewives? I don't really know. Perhaps they want to show others that English words are anything but special to them, having been to a university.

"And then there are the emotional complainst in newspaper 'Letters to the Editor's columns. A middle-aged person will write in saying he ordered a hot coffee in good Japanese at a coffee house, only to hear the waiter shout back to the cook, 'One hotto!' "

Another Japanese said foreign words are borrowed because they have the connotation of good quality. "french words are used by the fashion industry here because France has a fine reputation in that field.

The words are used freely in college lectures and in television newscasts. "Many of these words, such as ice cream or hamburger, were borrowed because the objects they describe were new to Japan. Others, like 'i-dee-oro-jee' — ideology — were imported into Japanese because our word for it may have been too broad in meaning and the foreign word was more precise," one Japanese professor commented

Japanese has no possessive pronouns — my, his, ours, theirs. So Japanese has taken over the English words, especially "my."

A family that owns an automobile is a "mycar" family. If you're complaining about not getting paid enough, you could tell the boss you don't have enough money to buy "myhouse." There's even a soft drink called "mylime "

A major department store once installed potted shrubs and blasted off an ad campaign proclaiming "Walk! in green .. Talk! in green "

That makes some sense but what about "47 Days Christmas?"

It's the advertising that's responsible for most of the imports, and the reason there are so many of them is that advertising in Japan creates a style of life.

So when a Japanese "salary man" gets his Christmas "bonas," he can watch the ads on the "terebi" set and decide how to find the best "bargen."

And if the "bonas" isn't enough, he could always charge it. On his "kurejito" card, of course.

Washington — Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., is aiming to put the brakes on his attempt to railroad through the Senate a bill to reimburse Mississippi poultry firms for chickens they killed on orders from the Environmental Protection Agency

Eastland's indemnity measure was derailed by amendments from backers of mushroom growers and other products which would have turned the measure into a legislative Christmas tree. The price tag was rapidly approaching $1 billion. Eastland was forced to put off further consideration of his measure until after Congress returns from its Easter recess.

Bella to Run?

Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., is thinking about running for the U S Senate this year or in 1976.

The congresswoman with the big hats and a voice to match has impressed even her numerous enemies with her quick grasp of the parliamentary ins - and - outs of the House where she has served two terms.

But her outspoken opinions and her image as an abrasive radical would, according to most observers, make her an unlikely winner in a state-wide contest, despite what support she might receive within the city of New York. She would have to run against Sen. Jacob Javits, a liberal Republican, this year or, more likely, against Sen. James Buckley, a conservative in 1976.

Solar Heat Study

To help prepare for the use of solar energy to heat American homes, the National Science Foundation expects to dispatch mobile laboratory on a year-long trip across the country, gauging the availability of sunlight and local needs for energy in various areas

Part of the laboratory is in a trailer equipped with 650 square feet of solar energy panels to collect the sunlight; the rest of the lab is a mini-home or office that will be heated, cooled and supplied with hot water by the power from the panels.

Court Dispute?

A dispute between Supreme Court officals and Supreme Court policemen has come to light with allegations that an aide to Chief Justice Warren Burger has attempted to discourage the policemen from forming a labor union. Court officials deny there was any attempt at intimidation but a number of policemen involved in the unionizing attempt were subjected to intense interviewed by their superiors.

Economics and Transportation

It was no fluke decision that Jantzen, Inc., last week picked Lincoln as the site for a major distribution center for swim and sports wear. The choice was made only after intensive study of cities over the country, including such spots as Omaha, Memphis, Nashville and St. Joseph.

A central location in the country was a factor, no doubt. Jantzen officials stressed that some 45% of their national customers can be delivered in two days from Lincoln and 75% in three days.

This happenstance of location is a natural advantage that Lincoln and all Nebraska should accentuate.

But there is more than the accident of geography involved in this and the decision of other distribution facilities to locate in Lincoln. The key element that Lincoln has to offer such enterprises is becoming increasingly important. It is convenient transportation!

The fact is that Jantzen — as Ace Hardware, which already has located a huge distribution plant in the Union Pacific tract — will be intimately accessible to interstate highway, rail and air transportation.

For Lincoln, the meaning of this should be entirely evident: such means of transportation must be protected, enhanced and developed even if it takes considerable expense and exertion.

It should mean a redoubling of efforts to get a north-south interstate highway along the Highway 77 corridor serving Lincoln.

It should mean pursuing with all possible speed the construction of expressway bypasses on the west, south and east sides of the city, tying in with I-80 on the north for a high speed ring around the city.

Most urgently of all, perhaps, it means that Lincoln must press forward to solve even its internal transportation problems and not shrink from the magnitude of the task involved. This is particularly pertinent to the pending proposal before the City Council to junk the long-delayed Northeast Radial.

In its way, the Radial is as important to Lincoln's future and its economic development as I-80 and the by-passes. For without it, the internal movement in the city will become a jungle of congested streets, none of them able to move the growing crush of traffic between downtown and the burgeoning industrial potential in northeast Lincoln.

With the Radial, the city not only goes far to solve its internal transportation problem — it opens up important sections of the city to the degree of accessibility that is proving so attractive to Jantzen and others.

It is instructive, in this light, to note the plight of Ashland where municipal officials are grappling with an immense problem of getting motor vehicles in and out of town. It prompts City Clerk George Grauerholz to worry: "Anybody thinking of bringing an industry into town would probably look at our access into town and get pretty discouraged."

This is an accurate assessment of the importance that street development, as well as highway accessibility, has for the economic well being of a community.

Lincoln has a right to be pleased with its current successes. It also has an obligation to be alert to its future needs.

Turmoil in Mideast and Beyond

Prime Minister Golda Meir's resignation heralds a difficult time not only for Israel but for other nations, not the least of them the United States.

What kind of government will succeed Mrs. Meir's is an open question. It could be another Labor party-led coalition, or a predominantly rightwing regime. Or something no one can foresee, growing out of new elections if Parliament is dissolved.

Considering the continuing threat of war with Arab neighbors, Israel's welfare might best be served by an emergency government uniting all political parties in a broad coalition.

But whatever emerges, the next few weeks are sure to be a time of tension and turmoil with serious repercussions for most of the world.

For even as the danger of war remains, the delicate negotiations toward peace in the Middle East must go forward. Lack of a stable government in Tel Aviv will make this task harder.

The chief challenge will no doubt fall to the United States and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in particular. He has been a frequent and effective go-between mediating differences that separate Israel and the Arab nations.

No doubt the Soviet Union, too, will play a role. But the cooling of Soviet-U.S. detente offers little hope that Moscow will be fully cooperative in keeping the Mideast lid on the peace effort moving.

So far Kissinger has been able to persuade both the Arabs and Israel to practice restraint. The impatience of the Arabs and the possibility of a new hard-line government in Tel Aviv guarantee only that Kissinger's job will become no easier.

But the secretary is used to working in an atmosphere of political turbulence. A lot of what he has accomplished in international relations has been attained despite the fact that the administration he serves is crippled by Watergate. May he succeed as well in the Mideast even though a vacuum exists in Tel Aviv.

Cronkite Killed Streaking

No one will admit it publicly but next to Kohoutek the biggest flop of 1974 is streaking. It was a media happening for two weeks and then fizzled out.

To find out what went wrong I went to see Stanley Streaker, a university sophomore, who started the whole thing.

"Stanley, I know you had high hopes for streaking when it first started. You predicted it would be as big as the hula hoop rage. Obviously you bombed out. What went wrong?"

"I miscalculated," he said fully clothed. "The one thing I overlooked is that Americans can't be shocked by anything any more. They're so punch-drunk they accept everything without a peep."

"You are victims of a permissive age," I said sympathetically.

"I think the thing that hurt us the most was Walter Cronkite," Stanley said.

"Why Walter Cronkite?"

"Well, when the craze first started, Cronkite got on television and said streaking was in. Now as far as college students are concerned when Walter says something is in that means it's out. I can date our demise to the night Walter told America about streaking."

"So it's all over, Stanley?"

"Yup. We tried to revive it by having someone streak on television at the Academy Awards, but it was a big nothing. Sixty million people just sat there and yawned. When I saw that, I decided to hang up my socks. A man has to know when he's through."

WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Easter Is Victory of Right

Easter is many things. Fundamentally, of course, it commemorates the resurrection of Christ but that action has come to be symbolic of many things for many people.

That symbolism should be especially meaningful at this time — a time when the 1970's might come to be known the decade of the revival of old ethics. The resurrection culminated, in the eyes of Christians, the salvation of mankind.

It was the final act that established the divinity of God and opened the gates of heaven to all those who wanted to walk through them. It was a final conquest of good over bad.

One can see across the land a growing revival of the values that many have long associated with Easter. Those are the values of honesty, integrity and concern for one's fellow man.

For some there is the even more important element of faith in a religious teaching but that can be left to the individual to pursue or not as he sees fit. For everyone, the values that are in addition to any of those that rest upon religion or faith are matters of great concern at this time.

With governmental integrity a shambles, with public confidence in government shaken, with our very existence threatened by centuries of unwarranted abuse of our environment, society is beginning to take a new look at what makes it tick. It is beginning to renounce the kinds of compromise with the truth that have marked much of our recent history as a civilization.

We are beginning to see that there has been too much expediency and too much rationalization in our affairs and that it has almost destroyed us. There is a growing refusal to accept fraud and deceit in the market place, to let corruption in public office go unattended and to let economic considerations dictate the total nature of our lives.

There is a new concern for the truth, for what is right and for each individual's responsibility to other members of the human race. There is a new realization that there will, indeed, be a tomorrow and it will not be rewarding unless we deliberately make it so.

Intolerance today is centering less in the area of discrimination and more upon the variety of crime in our midst. Those who cheat, lie and buy for themselves special favors and considerations are being found out and their conduct branded as reprehensible.

Both public and private affairs of the past several years have spawned a new and meaningful appreciation of the difference between good and evil, of right and wrong. There is now a greater demand for real justice and real equality among all people of all lands.

Easter of 1974 comes, then, at a time when so much of what it is and what it stands for has never been a more prominent part of the affairs of mankind.

When World Famine Comes, U.S. May Wear Black Hat

By William Hines
Chicago Sun-Times Writer

Washington — If 1973 was the start of a worldwide energy crunch with Arab states in the role of "villian," this year or next will see the opening of a global food crisis — and the black hat will be squarely on Uncle Sam's head unless he is careful.

Americans, grumbling about 52-cent bread and $1.69 hamburger, are aware of high prices and occasional supermarket shortages at home. But they remain blissfully (perhaps dangerously) unaware of privation and famine in countries containing perhaps a quarter of the population of the world.

All portents say things are going to get worse, probably soon and perhaps catastrophically, as the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh of Notre Dame University noted last week.

"If you have an energy crisis, you don't take a drive in the country on Sunday afternoon. If you have a food crisis, you die."

Father Hesburgh is trying to rouse public consciousness and goad the official conscience of America over the impending food crisis.

To this end the educator-priest came to Washington in his role of board chairman of the Overseas Development Council to tout a chilling new report called "Agenda for Action 1974." Written by the council staff, it warns there is no time to waste if global starvation is to be averted. The food crisis is upon us now.

Primary responsibility for averting general famine rests with North America, particularly the United States. The U.S. and Canada together export something like 90% of all wheat moving internationally. The U.S. alone provides over 90% of world soybean exports, is a leading supplier of feed grains, and (perhaps more surprisingly) is the world's No. 1 exporter of rice.

A single bad crop year in the U.S. and Canada in the 1970s could precipitate famine that would probably wipe out a sizable share of the 900 million ultra-poor who live in the 40 most "underdeveloped" countries.

For the time being, the report suggests, the world is going to have to place its reliance on North America food supplies. At the same time, a reorientation of basic ideas about international commerce is needed.

Historically, great trading nations have been concerned with access to places where they could sell finished goods, reasonably secure in the knowledge that raw materials would always be available from less advanced countries, usually at low cost.

But recently, culminating in 1973, as "Agenda" points out, "concerns were rapidly shifting from access to markets where finished products could be sold to access to markets where raw materials could be purchased." The Arab action at the time of the Middle East war last fall stimulated this shift.

The Overseas Development Council argues that the U.S. must take the lead in obtaining effective international agreement on an equitable distribution of essential resources throughout the world. Hesburgh speaks of "three F's" as heading the list of these essentials: food, fuel, fertilizer.

Food is the most essential to human survival, and at the same time the most dependent on the other two. Fertilizer, of course, is indispensable in the production of food, but it is not widely understood that modern fertilizers have petroleum as their raw material.

Even without fuel as such for farm machinery, large-scale agriculture simply cannot be carried on without adequate supplies of petroleum-based fertilizer. "Agenda" notes that world prices of chemical fertilizers have risen rapidly in the last year and nations least able to afford it will have to pay several hundred million dollars more for this agricultural essential than in 1973.

This is the worst possible time to cut back on agricultural expansion in the "have-not" nations, but yet there seems to be no alternative immediately in sight. Hesburgh bluntly predicts you will be able, before the year is out, to watch people starving to death on your television set — if your tastes in entertainment run to that.

One of the report's contributors, economist Lester R. Brown, lists three areas of food production where only a "breakthrough" will save the day.

The only way to increase production of beef — a favorite food in more affluent parts of the world — is to "devise (a) commercially feasible means of breeding more than one calf per cow per year (and) there does not appear to be any prospect of an imminent breakthrough on this front," Brown says. Expansion of production through increase in acreage devoted to grazing won't help, he adds: "the grazing capacity of much of the world's pasture land is now almost fully utilized."

Brown goes on: "A second potentially serious constraint on efforts to expand supplies of high quality protein is the inability of scientists to achieve a breakthrough in yields per acre of soybeans," largely because the soybean "is not very responsive to nitrogen fertilizer."

Finally, "oceanic fisheries are no longer expanding very rapidly" — in fact the annual world-wide catch was down in 1973 by about 10% from the all-time high of 1970 — and nobody has even a foggy notion what kind of breakthrough will be required to improve the annual harvest of fish.

Similar depredations from overuse are even more common and widespread on land. An area of Africa called the Sahel — just south of the Sahara Desert — is one example, and the Himalayan foothills of the Indian subcontinent another.

Over population in the Sahel begot overgrazing and deforestation. Goats and other dairy and meat animals denuded the ground cover and, says Brown:

"As a result, the Sahara Desert is shifting southward at an accelerated rate along its 3,500-mile southern fringe. As the desert expands southward, human and livestock populations retreat before it. The result is even greater pressure on the fringe area. This in turn contributes to further denudation and deforestation, setting in process a self-reinforcing cycle."

In India the situation may in the long run be worse because such vast numbers of people are involved. The four principal nations of this subcontinent (India, Bangladesh, Pakistan and Nepal) contain more than three-quarters of a billion human beings — most of them wretchedly poor.

Brown writes:

"During the last 15 years, as human and livestock populations have increased, the subcontinent has been progressively deforested" — leading to increased flooding.

Water, when not a rampaging menace, is an essential to well being. Brown predicts "future efforts to expand fresh water supplies for agricultural purposes increasingly will focus on such techniques as the diversion of rivers (as in the Soviet Union today), desalting sea water, and the manipulation of rainfall patterns to increase the share of rain falling over moisture-deficient agricultural areas."

A hungry African child eats a handful of uncooked flour.

Easier said than done. The hurdles may be summarized thus:

- Diversion of rivers requires, first, rivers to divert, and second, a means to divert them: either backbreaking labor of millions who must be fed to keep them strong, or use of heavy machinery which gulps costly fuel. Russia can do this — and there has been talk of even more ambitious projects in North America — but can India?
- Desalting of sea water requires a large capital outlay for plant and equipment with a substantial annual budget for energy. Once fresh water is obtained from the sea, additional energy must be consumed to transport it to lands requiring irrigation.
- Manipulation of rainfall patterns presents some even stickier problems, not only economic and technological but political. Serious objections lie in the way of such rainmaking, because rain produced over one area may be rain taken away from another.

The Overseas Development Council says the only answer is world cooperation on production and distribution of food, with some sort of guaranteed access for all nations. Hesburgh urges a little self-sacrifice on the part of Americans.

He focuses on a convenient piece of Americana: the McDonald quarter-pounder. One less of these each week for every American would mean a saving in grain (for both the beef in the hamburger and the bread in the roll) equivalent to more than 10 million tons.

This sort of individual self-denial, while dramatically illustrative of the problem, won't be very effective in solving it. The solution will take national and international action.

Hesburgh complained last week that of all the "have" nations of the West, the United States seems the one dragging its feet the most. Foreign aid is cut back, a special "soft" loan kitty in the world bank is unfunded, a new round of talks under GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) marks time.

The food situation being what it is, the world today appears to be one big time bomb — with a short fuse. No pestilence, no plague, no famine in the history of the world has ever been as widespread as the catastrophe that could happen any day now.

Cattle Industry

Ainsworth — The Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star is certainly to be thanked for the comprehensive and detailed article on the present chaotic and very serious financial conditions of the cattle industry (April 7).

It is indeed doubtful as to whether or not the family sized ranch or stockfarm can continue under present financial conditions.

The present prices for all cattle and machinery, and all supplies whether it be protein feeds or fuel or, for the stock farmer, the obtaining of fertilizer at any price, make it almost impossible to continue.

In fact, a young man without considerable resources could not possibly enter the cattle industry.

It is to be hoped the article will bring home to all Nebraskans the plight of one of Nebraska's principle industries.

Menuhin Students

Lincoln — The Nebraska Unit of American String Teachers Assn. (ASTA) thanks Helen Haggie for the excellent publicity given the Lincoln concert of seven young artists of the Yehudi Menuhin School.

The coverage consisted not only of a splendid background article in Focus (March 17) but also of a heart-warming interview with the students and their directors after they arrived in Lincoln from Dallas.

This group of artists is new to Lincoln. Thus, without such fine coverage this concert would have not had the appreciative audience it did have, considering the crowded March calendar, including appearances of the St. Louis Symphony and the Lincoln Symphony the same week.

For publicity for various previous musical programs over a period of years, we also appreciate the help of Sunday Editor Dale Griffing.

Health Care Plan

Crete — As a Canadian and former newspaperman now retired and living here, I found great pleasure in the article on Canada's health care (Sunday Journal and Star, April 7). The writer, William Hines, made a fine presentation.

Medicare in Canada was first set up during the depression years of the '30s at the county level in an area in the southwest corner of Saskatchewan by the people themselves.

It was not until the early '60s that the socialist government then in office established the health plan covering all of the province. There was heated opposition to its enactment by a sizeable group of citizens including the medical profesion.

For a few of the latter years the fees for complete medical and hospital care was set at $36 for an individual and $72 for a family in Saskatchewan. Last year these were cancelled so now everyone in Saskatchewan receives full service free.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The York News Times feels Sen. Carl Curtis is "premature" in calling for repeal of the 55 mph speed limit and "uncertainties" need answering before such a repeal.

"Unless Sen. Curtis has better information than anyone else has distributed, it appears to us that he's knuckling under to pressures from the trucking industry," said the editorial. The editor also was "surprised" that Curtis "would ignore the increasing evidence that human lives are being saved as a result of the lower speed limit."

Gerald Whelan, seeking to become a running mate of Gov. J. J. Exon in November, "leaves us cold as he attempts to do shadow boxing with Sen. Terry Carpenter," writes the editor of the Lexington Clipper.

"Really, Mr. Whelan has sounded more like a Clown Prince than a handpicked heir to the governorship by the present incumbent. Our only signal from the type of campaign being waged by Whelan is that Gov. Exon must feel awfully secure or he wouldn't condone (if he does) having his 'chosen running mate' attempt to do battle with Nebraska's all-time champion rough and tumble battler," the editorial continued.

An Omaha World Herald editorial on the increased food sales tax credit sparked criticism from Sen. James Dickinson, Omaha, on the legislative floor this week.

Sen. Dickinson called the editorial "a vicious distortion of facts" and said the implication was that the sales tax credit on food was raised to help compensate those who will pay more sales taxes because of the recently enacted state aid to education law.

The editorial said in part: "The Legislature has set the credit at $12, on account of the one-cent sales tax increase expected to be caused by the school aid bill. The taxpayer will experience a net loss under the new tax and refund rates."

The editor computed that a family of four spending $180 a month for food pays $54 a year in food sales taxes under the present 2.5% rate (or at $10 a head, a tax credit of $40) but at the 3.5% rate, they would pay $75.60 in annual food sales taxes (at $13 credit, the family would get $52 back).

"So at present rates the Nebraska family would pay a net food tax of $14 a year. Under the new rate and credit formula, the family would pay a net food tax of $23.60 . . . a 40% increase in the food tax rate and in the amount of taxation, while receiving only a 30% increase in the food tax refund.

"The situation appears to be another example of the elusiveness of what is sometimes called 'tax relief.' The Legislature giveth and the Legislature taketh away. Taketh, as usual, gets the edge over giveth," the editorial concluded.

Bourgeois Mitterrand Could Bring Communists Victory

Paris — I had a drink here the other day with Francois Mitterrand, the Socialist leader who, with the backing of the Communists, is running strong for president of France. The circumstances couldn't have been more casual — or more revealing of the political picture in this country.

Mitterrand comes on as almost a caricature of the solid, bourgeois professional man. He lives with his family near the Cathedral of Notre-Dame in an old private home which he is renovating.

His stock of drinks includes bourbon and Irish as well as the usual French digestifs. His small talk ran to questions about which of the two was called whisky in America.

When I asked for soda he produced one of those siphon affairs which are supposed to convert plain water to fizzy water. Like the siphons of most people, Mitterrand's didn't work. Like most men he blamed the trouble on his wife. Then he needled her a little more, in a pleasant luxurious fashion, when it developed there were no cubes in the ice bucket.

His political conversation was above politics and personalities. He did let it slip that he had run for president against Gen. De Gaulle in 1965 and emerged with 45% of the vote.

But he felt it was too close to the death of President Pompidou to indluge in partisan polemics. The more so as he didn't know the exact terms of support he would have from the various parties backing his candidacy.

Behind that elaborately disarming approach lie almost all the main elements of the French political scene. In particular, it is possible to see why Mitterrand has at least a fair chance to become president of France.

His solid, middle-class tone, for one thing, makes a perfect fit with the mixture of prosperity and discontent which obtains here, as in most other Western countries. Because there is discontent — notably with high prices and unequal distribution of income — Mitterrand's social programs exert broad appeal.

Francois Mitterrand

Sunday Journal and Star
Dimension
• Opinion
• Analysis
• Background

Because prosperity has become so ingrained, there is no great fear that a leftwing government would spoil everything. Especially if the government were led by a man of property such as Mitterrand.

His distinctly nonpartisan approach — especially the hint that he was a worthy opponent of De Gaulle back in 1965 and, hence, a man of stature — contrasts advantageously with the infighting which has characterized the candidacies of leaders in the direct line of succession from De Gaulle.

Former Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas has now emerged as the candidate of the Gaullist party. But not before a truly nasty campaign to head him off had been conducted by the Gaullist prime minister, Pierre Messmer, and some of his associates.

As to the matter of terms of party support for his program, there lies the great unknown of the Mitterrand candidacy. The Communists, suspicious of his middle-class tastes and instincts, have tried to make him their prisoner by forcing agreement on a specific program. Mitterrand has resited any but the most vague commitments. Moreover, he has advertised his resistance — the better to demonstrate to middle-class voters that he is independent of the Communists.

Many signs now suggest the Communists are unhappy with Mitterrand. In the end they may decide to throw the election. But if they stay the course, Mitterrand has a fair chance to win.

A Mitterrand victory, of course, would bring the Communists to national office in France for the first time in more than 25 years. That is bound to happen sooner or later. Mitterrand, at least, would keep them under tight rein and on the defensive.

Death Brushes Peace Force

United Nations — The 6,800-man U.N. peace force, an essential ingredient in the stability of the Middle East, had a brush with death last week. It was subjected to a diplomatic mugging, and might not have survived if Egypt had not come to its rescue.

What happened is important because of the light it sheds on the prospects of permanent peace in the Mideast. It shows how fragile the balance of diplomatic forces still is in that part of the world.

The original six-month mandate of UNEF was due to expire April 24. It was obvious, and universally agreed, that the term would have to be extended. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, with British support, sounded out key U.N. delegates on a one-year extension. Egypt was amenable.

The Soviet Union, however, pulled a switch-blade. One year was much too long. Soviet delegate Yakov Malik said he would veto anything longer than six months. And he set severe conditions on even that long a life.

Malik's real reasons were never spelled out persuasively, but other delegates assumed the Kremlin wanted to be in a position to "sell" its consent to UNEF's continuance as frequently as possible, keeping maximum control all the way. Every country with veto power in the U.N. Security Council can set conditions under which it will acquiesce in an extension of the mandate

It was not, however, a straightforward case of the Soviet Union against the rest of the Council. At one point in the private negotiations, Poland — which has a contingent in the force — indicated a willingness to go along with a one-year term. Canada preferred six months.

The reasoning, in Canada's case, was that too much permanence and stability might dilute the incentive for a permanent peace. If temporary arrangements become too comfortable, there is less pressure to improve on them. Cyprus has been a clear example of this phenomenon.

At any rate, the Soviet and Canadian view prevailed. The idea of a one-year mandate was abandoned.

This gives Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and others working for peace a six-months deadline, after which they may or may not have a U.N. buffer to use in keeping Arab and Israeli forces apart. With domestic Israeli politics in turmoil, and the Syrian front active, six months is a short time.

The kind of thing that can happen in six months is illustrated by another dispute which also placed UNEF's longevity in question.

Israel, which did not want "unfriendly" troops (i. e., troops from countries with which Israel has no diplomatic relations) included in UNEF, was miffed to be overruled on the point and has refused to let such troops operate in Israeli-occupied areas, including her zone of limited armament.

The Soviet Union seized upon the dispute last week as a pretext to hold up UNEF's mandate. For a time it seemed the life of the force might not be extended at all unless Israel gave in, which was unlikely. Eventually, at the urging of Egypt and others, the Kremlin agreed to bypass the deadlock and let Waldheim handle the problem.

All this has cast disturbing doubt on the practicality of a permanent U.N. force of the kind that almost certainly would be needed to guarantee a final peace settlement.

The composition of such a force, its freedom of movement, its longevity, and conditions in which it would be withdrawn would all have to be different, and more reliable, than those in effect now.

This adds one more weight to the burden Kissinger has to carry; but it could not be helped. The present UNEF is lucky to be alive.

April 14, 1974

Dear Citizen of Lincoln:

Seldom do you get an extra dividend at the end of the first quarter of the year. The announcement Friday of the decision by the Jantzen Company, Inc. of Portland, Oregon, manufacturers of swimwear and sportswear to locate a major distribution center in Lincoln is certainly such a dividend.

The new payroll dollars generated by Jantzen's 150 to 200 new employees will be spent for groceries, automobiles, furniture, clothing, real estate, entertainment, services, taxes and many other items, thus accomplishing the Chamber's objective of creating new jobs, new payroll dollars and prosperity for everyone in Lincoln.

Basic growth in Lincoln or any other city is determined by the number of children born each year and it is the Chamber's responsibility to have jobs available when our children enter the labor market eighteen to twenty years later.

With quality economic development in Lincoln, everyone benefits.

Sincerely,

JOHN E. OLSSON

Study: Most Families' Tax Loads About Same

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most American families pay about the same percentage of their incomes in taxes, a private study released Saturday says.

Economists Joseph A. Pechman and Benjamin A. Okner of the Brookingf Institution said only the richest 3 to 5 per cent of U.S. families and the poorest 10 per cent pay more than 25 per cent of their income in taxes. Their study covered federal, state and local taxes and included such taxes as sales and property taxes as well as income taxes.

"The U.S. tax system is essentially proportional for the vast majority of families and therefore has little effect on the distribution of income," Pechman and Okner wrote.

The study was based on 1966 state, federal and local tax figures, but the two economists said the findings are just as valid today as they were eight years ago.

Tax changes since then have been roughly offsetting, they said.

"For those who believe in a progressive tax system, these results ought to be revealing," Pechman told reporters. A progressive tax system means that tax rates get higher as a person's income rises.

According to the study, even when tax burdens are shifted — that is, if taxes paid by businesses are shifted to consumers in a variety of ways — tte tax burdens are essentially the same.

"The very rich pay higher average effective tax rates than does the average family, but the difference is large only if the corporation income and property taxes are assumed to be borne by capital," they said.

If it is assumed consumers pay corporation income taxes through higher prices to a large degree, then "the very rich pay tax rates that are only moderately higher than average," they said.

The study used a number of different assumptions to take into account the shifting of the tax burden from one population to another.

The richest 3 to 5 per cent of families pay taxes varying from 50 per cent of income, if little shifting is assumed, to about 30 per cent, when extensive shifting is assumed, according to the study.

The poorest 10 per cent pay a higher percentage of their incomes for all taxes, but the authors said this probably occurs because there are a large number of retirees and others with temporarily low income in this group.

They usually consume more of their current incomes than other groups, and thus pay higher sales taxes, according to the study. When measured over longer periods, the relative tax burden would probably not be as great in the low-income area, the study said.

Public Drinking Ban Is Eyed

Boston (UPI) — One way to cool bunches of unruly young people during long spring and summer nights is to ban public drinking, and there is a trend among Massachusetts communities to enact such laws, a state official says.

Carter Lee of the attorney general's office said that "already this year we've had two dozen applications."

"The reason is complaints from local citizens," said Police Chief Charles F. Hart of Lawrence. "You get young people on main streets, parking lots and parks, drinking on the hoods of their cars, throwing bottles around."

U.S. Faces Milk Shortage—Dechant

Washington (UPI) — The head of the National Farmers Union said Saturday that the nation is facing a milk shortage because of Nixon administration dairy policies.

Tony T. Dechant, the union president, said the price of feed for cows is rising faster than the price of milk. The Agriculture Dept. reported that last month's milk-feed ratio, measuring the relationship between the prices farmers get for milk and what they pay for feed, was at the most unfavorable level for March since 1965.

"Farmer's costs are going up and farm prices are going down," Dechant said in a statement. "A farm disaster is in the making."

He predicted that a continuing decline in milk production will lead to shortages of milk "to match the gasoline shortage and the meat shortage and the wheat shortage and the fertilizer shortage and the baler twine and barbed wire and farm machinery shortages."

Dechant, in a plea for increased farm price supports, urged Congress "to take national food policy out of the hands of the Nixon administration and pass remedial legislation at once" so farmers will be encouraged to make the investments needed to raise food production.

The Agriculture Dept. reported, meanwhile, that milk production is continuing to run below last year's level but the gap between 1973 and 1974 figures is slowly narrowing.

Department statisticians said production in January was 3.2% below a year earlier. In February, the milk flow was 2.9% below 1973 and in March, according to the latest available report, production fell 2.7% short of the same month in 1973.

Atomic Energy Head:

Nixon Energy Goal Tough to Reach

Washington (UPI) — The United States cannot achieve energy independence by 1980 without "a tremendous increase" in technological effort and a lot of good luck with labor and materials, Atomic Energy Commission Chief Dixy Lee Ray said Saturday.

Dr. Ray said nuclear power plants would be generating 20% of U.S. electricity needs in another six years, but President Nixon's announced goal of independence from foreign energy sources by 1980 appeared to be out of reach.

She said the United States has the know-how and the coal, oil and gas resources to become self-sufficient, but "in the sober judgment of most people who recognize what the problems are in doing this, the materials, the components, the manufactured resources and so on probably cannot be assembled and all that accomplished by 1980."

"We would rather imagine that with a considerable effort by 1980 we would have in hand the knowledge and have enough information to be able to choose the appropriate technologies, probably by 1985," she said.

Dr. Ray noted that scientific and technological barriers were not the only problems. Even with "a tremendous increase in the priority developments," she said, it it will be necessary tr deal with difficulties in acquiring such construction materials as cement, reinforcing steel, copper and manufactured components such as valves and tanks and piping. In addition, she said, the availability of skilled labor and the state of environmental protection and tax laws enter into the picture.

Dr. Ray said nuclear energy now is producing close to 6% of U.S. electricity, and with generating plants now under construction or planned, would be supplying 20 to 21% in 1980 and close to 30% by 1985.

But, she said, the electricity produced by nuclear plants in 1985, although less than a third of U.S. requirements, still would be more electricity than consumed by the entire nation in 1935.

Dr. Ray said nuclear power plants "by any sort of measure" were safer than conventional generating facilities and added that to date atomic plants "have a record of 100% safety with respect to nuclear accidents."

Cambodians Weakening

Phnom Penh (UPI) — On the east bank of the Mekong River about four miles northeast of here, elite Cambodian paratroopers are building makeshift rafts so they can escape if the communist-led rebels overrun their position.

They were not told to build the rafts, nor have they been ordered not to. But they are building them to save their lives.

After four years of lingering war in Cambodia, there are signs among government troops who daily bear the brunt of rebel assaults that the power to resist is weakening.

Some observers have predicted a military stalemate by the end of the current dry season. But there have been no signs the rebels will lay down their arms with the coming of July and the monsoons.

Hours Mayors' Prime Gripe

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — He is a white male in his 40s or 50s in a city of 25,000 whose most pressing problem is what to do about garbage and sewage.

He is your average mayor, a nationwide survey by the National League of Cities found, and he and city councilmen are increasingly frustrated by long working hours and time spent away from their families.

The survey, results of which were published in the April issue of the league's magazine, Nation's Cities, is believed to be the most extensive study ever conducted among top-rank municipal officials. Twenty-five percent of the approximately 4,000 questionnaires were returned from the scientifically-selected sample.

The 519 mayors and 512 councilmen who responded cited refuse and solid waste as their number one urban problem, with law enforcement second. Less frequently mentioned on the list of 28 major problems were race relations, fire prevention and air quality.

Councilmen were found to be younger than mayors and a higher percentage held graduate degrees.

On a frustration index, both groups identified time spent away from their families as their prime gripe. In second place were the long hours, a problem compounded by a finding that 78% of the mayors and 94% of the councilmen were elected as part-time officials. Even in cities of more than 100,000, the survey found, only 61.5% of the mayors were full-time.

Citizens most frequently complained to mayors about dog and other pet control problems, while they turned to councilmen most often about traffic matters such as stop signs and lights.

Of the 28 major urban problems sewage and garbage were most important to all cities except those under 10,000 and over 100,000, said the league. In small communities streets and highways were deemed more pressing and public transit and law enforcement in the largest.

"By region of the country, refuse and solid waste led all other major problems in the East, Midwest and South," the survey found. "In the West, however, it ranked behind law enforcement, relations with the county, planning and zoning and streets and highways (tied for fourth) and public transit."

When the problems from the six-page, 70-question sampling were regrouped into broader categories, some differences were noted nationally.

General community development problems — such as housing, redevelopment, parks and zoning — were first on the list of all cities. "It was the only broad category of problems to have such consistency nationwide," the league reported.

Human resources — health care, race relations and social services — was ranked last in the eight broad categories nationwide. However, in cities larger than 100,000 it was in second place. In cities smaller than 100,000, intergovernmental relations ranked second in importance.

President's Tax Report Copies Sold

Washington (AP) — "Examination of President Nixon's Tax Returns For 1969 Through 1972," the Senate-House Internal Revenue Taxation Committee staff's 1,008-page report, is being sold by the Government Printing Office for $6.50 a copy.

It is available at the office's bookstores in Washington, Cleveland, Birmingham, Ala., San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Atlanta, Chicago, Boston, Kansas City, New York, Canton, Ohio, Dallas, Detroit, Phildelphia, Seattle, Milwaukee, and Pueblo, Colo.

An office representative said 5,000 copies have been ordered, and the first 1,000 were distributed to the stores across the country.

They Still Stand For God and Flag, And They're Still Strong as Ever

American Legion, VFW At Home in Midwest

By Kay Bartlett

Oskaloosa, Iowa (AP) — Nat King Cole croons "Ramblin' Rose" on the juke box. Ten men are seated at the bar at 4 o'clock on a Thursday afternoon. Six salt shakers on the 13-stool bar testify that this is primarily a beer-drinker's palace — a healthy pitcher of which goes for a buck.

A mural of America's fighting men serves as the bar's backdrop, testimony that this is the American Legion in Oskaloosa.

Largest of the veterans' associations, with 2.7 million members, the American Legion is alive and well in middle America. Its lobbyists in Washington and in state capitals across the land say they've got more political clout than ever.

The national commander says increasing numbers of Vietnam veterans are joining up and that Legion-supported baseball teams, oratorical contests and Scout troops are still American institutions. And they hope they'll even get Veteran's Day changed back to Nov. 11.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, second largest of the vets' groups, with 1.8 million members, reports an even rosier picture in 1974, the year after soldiers came home from an unpopular war to face disapproval at worst, a White House reception at best and a ho-hum greeting from their countrymen in general.

In the years after World War II, the Legion hit its all-time high of 3.3 million members in 1946. The VFW climbed from a prewar 100,000 to over a million in the middle '40s.

VFW membership is growing faster now than the Legion's. The VFW says it increased its roles by 28,000 in 1973. Legion membership, for the first time in almost a decade, declined in 1973 a drop of 18,000 because deaths of older legionnaires exceeded new membership.

There's an American Legion or a VFW post to serve everyone. One in New York is composed of advertising men; there's a post of FBI agents in Washington, a post of telephone workers, and a post whose main attraction is an annual rodeo. In some communities, the hall is a dingy, smoke-filled room. In others it's more or less a country club.

The Legion post in Oskaloosa, for instance, opens every afternoon at 3 and the regulars drop by. M. L. Curry, a 52-year-old World War II vet, comes just about every afternoon.

Why? "They've got a good group here," says Curry. "I think it's a good organization and they've done a lot for the boys."

Curry says he brought his son and another young man into the organization. "But they don't come in like they used to."

Wayne Keefe, the commander, says attracting the Vietnam veteran is a problem. "He's a new breed of cat, more highly educated. You've got to sit him down and tell him what the Legion can do for him. He wants his money's worth if he's going to join."

And join he apparently does. The Legion claims a half-million of its members are Vietnam vets. The VFW says 450,000 have come aboard.

And from the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW), an organization more into apple wine and pot than apple pie. "Despite their figures, we feel we are the largest group representing the Vietnam vet.

"We represent his sentiments and his position. They still think it's great we sent over 55,000 people there to die," says Brian Adams, a national officer of the VVAW, which claims a membership of 25,000.

Dean Phillips, a 30-year-old Vietnam vet and a former member of the VVAW, belongs to both the Legion and the VFW.

"I'll rub elbows with the right wingers if I have to, but I won't compromise," says Phillips. "They try hard and they work hard."

Phillips, a candidate for the Colorado legislature and a young man whose language must be laundered before being quoted, feels that far too many Vietnam vets don't realize the Legion and the VFW are out there to help them.

"I'm not a flag-waving Legionnaire or one of the VFW boys, but I've got a warm spot for them. I really get into it with them, but I have never seen any of those sons of bitches glorify war."

In Washington the Legion has three registered lobbyists and the VFW has one. Generally, as the GI's alumni organization, the two groups have pretty much the same views.

"We're more militant in pursuing legislation than the American Legion," claims Cooper T. Holt, executive director of the VFW's Washington office. "They don't speak out as they should."

Both veterans' groups are against amnesty in any form. They favor bigger and better benefits for the vet and bigger defense budgets.

"We do pretty well as long as we stick to the germane issues," says Herald Stringer, head of the Legion's lobby. "Years ago, we used to stray pretty far afield."

He recalled the time the Legion called for "immediate and vigorous action" to stop a spruce beetle infestation in the timber country of the far West. And then there was the call to remove some offensive murals on a post office in San Francisco.

"It doesn't help our image to be God-like and censors. The Congress doesn't pay any attention to us on matters like that. We look ridiculous," Stringer said.

To join the VFW, part of that duty must have been in a combat area. The VFW does not admit women. More than 23 million veterans are eligible to join the two organizations.

Membership varies greatly from state to state. North Dakota has a whopping 60% of eligible veterans and Iowa 27%. Other big membership states: South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Indiana, Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire.

Ray Holdsworth, 27, is a Vietnam vet who joined the Oskaloosa post.

"I thought it was a good organization and I served my time and I thought it was my right to join. The age group at first didn't appeal to me," says Holdsworth. "Everybody was so much older, but once I got to know the guys, that didn't make any difference."

Membership in the two organizations is often duplicated. For instance, in Ottumwa, Iowa, there are 1,500 American Legionnaires. There are 400 in the VFW post.

The commander of the VFW post says all VFW members — except one — are also members of the Legion. "And he's just mad at the Legion for something or other."

Those who give of their time and talents to the veterans' groups do so with zeal. Marvin Freese, the VFW's state commander in Iowa, spends three nights a week and three weekends out of four on VFW business. He's elected and unsalaried.

"It's even costing me money but I think it's worth it." His reasons: "Pride and wanting to do something you believe in and perhaps just a bit of showoff thrown in."

Although national headquarters seeks more and more members, VFW Post 9662, on the outskirts of Des Moines, does not. It has 276 members and some 50 to 75 of them drop by the bar every night.

"Sometimes largeness takes away from a post," says Rose Urness, an active member of the 72-woman auxiliary. "This is a very freindly post where everybody knows everybody else."

On a Saturday night, when there might be a spaghetti feed, over 100 members will show up.

The veterans' organizations are for Americanism, youth, the veterans' due and the proper defense of the country. In between, they are some 40 people, 13 with American Legion caps on, sitting in a classroom in the Griswold, Iowa, junior high listening to five teen-agers deliver speeches on the Constitution. Albeit punctuated by one man's snores.

They are the young man who said he joined because his wife wanted to play bingo. They are a firing squad that will lose a day's pay to travel 100 miles to assure a salute at a funeral they feel is a veteran's due. They are responsible for a youngster traveling to Washington or to his state capital to learn how his government operates.

They are the organizations that helped push through the G.I. bill back in 1944 and have lobbied to add benefits ever since. They march in parades, raise flags at high school football games, sponsor baseball and scouting troops.

They are not exactly avant garde and their halls are not exactly discotheques. But they and their purposes survive.

OAS Meeting Faces Touchy Issues

Atlanta (UPI) — The world's oldest regional intergovernmental agency, the Organization of American States (OAS), opens its annual general assembly in Atlanta Friday with some touchy issues threatening to surface.

More than 1,000 visitors, including Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, and perhaps President Nixon, are expected for the 11-day session at the gold-domed Georgia state capitol. Twenty-three Latin American countries, ranging from tiny Barbados to massive Brazil, will be represented.

Venezuela and Colombia are still at odds over who owns the oil-rich continental shelf and territorial waters in the Gulf of Venezuela.

While Mexico's economy is booming, inflation is hurting many of the nations. There were reports of widespread unemployment, hunger and unrest.

Delegates may also have to deal with the emotional issues of full Cuban membership in the OAS and the Panama Canal.

Cuba is still a member, though inactive because the OAS does not recognize Fidel Castro's government. The Cuban flag will fly with the others at the Georgia capitol even though one state legislator has threatened to tear it down.

More likely to spur debate is the question about ownership of the Panama Canal. The United States says it will renegotiate the treaty for the "big ditch" in May, while many Panamanians and other Latin Americans believe it should belong to them alone as a vital natural resource.

Filipinas Like Old (If Rich) Husbands

(c) Chicago Daily News

Manila — Late last year, the martial law administration of President Ferdinand Marcos launched a huge public relations program to counter the terrific beating the Philippines was receiving from the foreign press, particularly in the United States.

A major part of that program was "balikbayan" (return-to-country), which is designed to entice overseas Filipinos to revisit their homeland and see for themselves the changes that have occurred.

The lure is irresistible: a 50% reduction in air fare, tax holidays and hospitality cards that give big discounts in hotels, stores and restaurants in Manila.

They also are treated like visiting royalty, complete with receptions.

Five months later, the program has gone beyond the expectations of its organizers. More than 30,000 out of an estimated 100,000 Filipinos in the United States have used the program and many of them received an added bonus:

Besides getting a chance to see their homeland after many years of absence, many Filipino old-timers received an unexpected rejuvenating shot in the arm — young mail-order brides.

Since the start of balikbayan, there have been many weddings of overseas Filipinos in their late 70s and 80s to Filipinas young enough to be their granddaughters.

The government-controlled news media encouraged the matchmaking by giving wide publicity to photographs of grizzled old men kissing their shy young brides and stories of their Alice-in-wonderland weddings.

One newspaper blared: "This proves that love is blind."

Many young Filipinas, obviously conjuring up visions of wrinkled but dollar-laden old romeos, even advertised in the newspaper for old-timers.

"I am willing to marry a septuagenerian or even an octogenarian sight unseen if he promises to love me forever," declared one young lass.

But the wary old-timers were very selective. They preferred the innocent and unspoiled young girls in the barrios.

So popular have such weddings become that even foreigners are now coming to the Philippines to search for a bride. One Australian recently sought the aid of a newspaper to help him search for a young, beautiful and conservative Filipina who is willing to settle down with him in Australia.

A Japanese engineer flew in from Tokyo to marry the girl he met through correspondence.

A Filipino old-timer in California took advantage of the low air fare to marry a school teacher whom he courted through the mails for 10 years.

Thousands of other Filipinas are still hoping that some dashing but aging balikbayans will yet come their way. The lonely hearts columns of Philippine newspapers and magazines carry long list of Filipinas looking for male friends, preferably foreigners.

Balikbayan, which was scheduled to end in March, has been extended by Marcos due to the clamor for extension of the program. This will give many a desperate Filipina a chance to hook her man — even if he is old enough to be her grandfather.

Kansans Hope to Blow Whistle on Rapist

Lawrence, Kan. (UPI) — A tall, trim young man with wavy brown hair steps into the path of a young woman on an isolated sidewalk as he has done many times before.

He asks for the time or for money, anything to make her stop. Then he begins the familiar scenario of the rapist who has attacked at least 31 women in this placid college town in the past 18 months.

But if "Operation Whistle Stop" goes well, there will be a new ending to that playlet of terror. The program was begun last week by the women of this eastern Kansas town of 40,000. They hope to provide themselves with the protection police cannot provide.

"We have a pretty healthy situation here in terms of the concern," said Casey Eike, coordinator of the program. "Because of the widescale awareness of the problem, we could have a real panic situation. But women are using a viable, productive program instead."

Slide presentations, lectures and discussion groups that demonstrate defense tactics have become more popular in Lawrence than the 75-cent films shown at the University of Kansas each weekend.

Little 75-cent, gold plated whistles that are the first line of defense in "Operation Whistle Stop" are selling in the thousands.

Many women wear them on chains around their necks prepared to blow them loudly if accosted.

So far the rapist has shown little pattern to his attacks. He strikes anywhere, at any time, usually against women from their late teens to late 30s. He has eluded stakeouts and is not afraid of lighted streets.

But Ms. Eike noted the rapist ran from one woman who dropped into a karate stance after his approach, and he ran when another tried to fight him.

"I would say he is a frightened person," she said. "That's why we are encouraging women, at least at first, to fight."

KU dean of women Emily Taylor said one aim of the program is to prove women can handle the situation.

"It's an insult to women to suggest they would automatically panic," Ms. Taylor said. "We're not children, and we're trying to get rid of that notion.

"We're doing something about it. Women are in a better situation here than where they are trying to hide the situation."

Burly policemen have admitted their helplessness. Now they and city and university officials are hoping a woman will get a chance to blow the whistle on the elusive attacker.

Gallup Poll

GOP's Prosperity, Peace Rating Drops

By George Gallup

Princeton, N.J. — Republican party strategists who maintain the perennial issues of peace and prosperity will overshadow Watergate in coming congressional elections can take little comfort from the latest Gallup survey. The findings reported today show the GOP has fallen far behind the Democratic party since 1972 as the party voters see as better able to keep the country prosperous Republicans have also lost ground, but to a lesser extent, on the issue of peace.

Three decades of polling experience have shown "peace" and "prosperity" to be key issues in virtually all the national elections. Furthermore, a close relationship can be found between how the voters rate the two parties in their relative abilities to deal with these two problems and the voters' presidential preferences in election surveys.

On the issue of prosperity, the GOP has declined 19 points since 1972 Two years ago the Republicans held a marginal 38 to 35% lead over the Democrats on this issue Today, however, about half the public (49%) believe the Democrats better able to keep the nation prosperous

The GOP has also slipped since 1972 on the issue of peace, but to a much lesser extent In the 1972 survey, the GOP had a slight edge, 32 to 28%, on this issue Now the edge goes to the Democrats, 33 to 24%.

The Vietnam peace settlement in January 1973 — which boosted President Nixon's popularity to an all-time high — his overtures to Peking and Moscow and, more recently, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's efforts to maintain peace in the Middle East can all be considered to be factors behind the relative stability of the GOP figure on the peace issue in contrast to the party's sharp decline on the issue of prosperity.

The following tables compare the latest results with those recorded in the last survey in which these questions were asked (conducted in mid-September 1972):

Question: "Looking ahead for the next few years, which political party — the Republican or the Democratic — do you think will do the better job of keeping the country prosperous?"

	Rep. %	Dem. %	Same %	No Opin %
Fall 1972	38	35	13	14
Spring 1974	19	49	14	18

Question: "Which political party do you think would be more likely to keep the United States out of World War III — the Republican party or the Democratic party?"

	Rep %	Dem %	Same %	No Opin %
Fall 1972	32	28	26	14
Spring 1974	24	33	19	24

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,537 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities in the nation during the period March 29-April 1.

President's Job Rating Unchanged

Princeton, N J — President Nixon's job rating remains unchanged in the latest Gallup survey

The figures reported today, recorded before the findings of the investigation into Nixon's tax records were released, show 26% of the public approve of the way Nixon is handling his job as president About two-thirds, 65%, disapprove, and 9% have no opinion.

Many Children Hospitalized For Abuse

Denton, Tex (UPI) — Every fifth child admitted to a hospital emergency room suffers from child abuse or neglect, a New Jersey social scientist says

"Violence is built into our society and child abuse, unrecognized as a major problem until the early 1960s, is a part of it," Dr Theo Solomon, director of the Institute of Law and Social Process of Teaneck, N J, told a seminar at Texas Woman's University.

"There are 7 million abused children in the United States today," he said, adding that New York City had 86 child beating deaths last year Another 240 deaths might have been caused by abuse or neglect, he said

Help on Your Problems

Our daughter was a contestant in the Lincoln Junior Miss Pageant in November. She was selected Miss Leadership and was runner-up for the Greater Miss Lincoln title.

She received two unsigned certificates and was to get a trophy, but they said it was broken and would have to be repaired.

Could you help us get the certificates signed and locate the trophy?

—Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Pilfold, Weeping Water

ACTION LINE: Ed Bowe, who was in charge of the pageant, said there have been several problems with the certificates and trophies.

Bowe apologized for the delay and said he will either call or write you immediately and get the matter resolved. He explained that he was not able to do the followup work because he was involved in a job transfer.

ACTION TIP: So you heard a new rattle in your car this morning, eh? Even if you haven't been hearing such things, you might be interested in receiving free monthly copies of Motor Vehicle Defects Investigations from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The cumulative report lists by make, model and year all cars and equipment with possible safety defects under investigation by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

NHTSA encourages consumers to report possible safety defects in their cars by writing to the Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Department of Transportation, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 400 7th St., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590.

Why do KOLN and KMTV advertise Hardee's charbroiled hamburger restaurants when there are none in Lincoln or Omaha? After coming here from the South, where they are in abundance, we got strange looks and snickers whenever we asked about them.

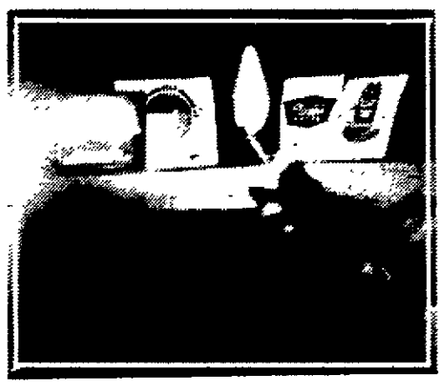
—Pat Black, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You'll get no snickers from Action Line.

A KOLN-TV spokesman explained that the Hardee's ads are not placed locally. Time is purchased from the network, and the commercials are shown nationally, even in locations with no restaurants.

My son has a matchbook collection. Should he take the matches out of the books and throw them away?

—Kathy Ray, Lincoln



ACTION LINE: There seem to be no rules for matchbook collecting.

One could assume, however, that since the matches themselves are all relatively standard and the difference in matchbook covers is the design or message on the cover, the matches could be discarded. This would seem to be the safety-conscious thing to do, anyway.

Action Line thought you might like to know that the paper-book variety of matches was the 1892 invention of Joshua Pussey. Although initially unpopular, the book-match industry in the United States now produces 300 billion matches annually. According to a pair of encyclopedias, the Americana and the Britannica, about 75% of those are handed out free by retail outlets, a custom not practiced in any other country.

And if anybody asks, collectors of book-match covers are called philliberumenists, matchbox label collectors are phillumenists and matchbox collectors are known as cumyxaphists.

Of Bib Overalls, Missing Telephones, Falling Mortar — and Terry

Exeunt 9 Characters From the Unicameral Stage

By Dick Herman

There will be other Legislatures in time to come and other members, with their own characteristics, both enviable and wacky.

And unless there are historians, writing an unfading record, even small legislative hills of a tomorrow will obscure the mountain ranges of yesterday.

But for a period, when state senators fall to spinning yarns amongst themselves in the masculine, club-like warmth and gloom of a late afternoon, they'll be talking about some of the legislators permanently leaving this year.

Nine definitely won't be back in the chairs — although the fabled Terry Carpenter urgently wants to be the presiding officer in 1975 and 1976. He's seeking election as lieutenant governor.

By nearly every assessment, Carpenter ranks as a towering legislative figure. His faults are considered by some the full equal of his talents.

In 18 years, the Scottsbluff businessman has sponsored more bills, authored more laws, created more fights, pioneered more paths, struck more fear, insulted more public figures, spent more public money, inspired more lobbyists, pleased more diverse groups and commanded more attention than any other single senator in Unicameral history.

But what senators may recall are the continuing round of contumacious snarls traded by Carpenter and Omahan Sam Klaver. Or the time Carpenter and the late Albert Fenske of Sunol nearly came to blows. Or the thundering denunciations of timid legislators, captains of industry and assorted governors. Or the occasion Lt. Gov. Phil Sorensen told him to sit down and shut up.

The Bib Overalls Caper

They'll also revive, with glee, the episodes of Richard Proud, outgoing speaker.

There was the morning, to win a $10 bet with fellow senators, Proud wore bib overalls to a day's session. He then proceeded to unload a demogogic and phony speech about establishing rapport with the working man.

Or Proud's furious attack on the press and a resolution of censure. Yet when the vote came, 41 of the 43 senators deliberately decided not to vote. So the uproarious tally was one for the resolution, one against and 41 abstaining — until the tie was broken, 2-1 against.

Proud last year established himself as permanent Enemy No. 1 among supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA). They remember his leadership knocking Nebraska out of the column of pro-ERA states.

What usually is forgotten is Proud's personal efforts years back to secure a new women's physical education building at the University of Nebraska.

During one lunch break, Proud and Omaha Sen. Henry Pedersen walked about the NU campus. They were nearly beaned by a piece of falling masonry from the ancient Grant Memorial Hall, which then served women physical ed programs. Proud immediately insisted that the state fire marshal come over and condemn the place.

That led to an appropriation, unsought by NU brass, for a new women's physical education structure. The building hadn't been high among the University's politically shaped internal priorities. Proud prevailed.

Funny stories about Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa are guaranteed for maybe a decade.

The country-shrewd Nore has been the Legislature's nonstop Cato, warning about the evils of "metro" government, of Communists behind every alfalfa bush, of taking away the citizen's voting rights, for either officers of government or issues.

Members of the Appropriations Committee bring up the day Nore became detached during an inspection of the Norfolk Regional Center. The Genoa farmer-investor couldn't be located anywhere.

The lost was found, ultimately, cheerfully playing bingo with residents of the regional center, winning all the corn.

Egad! No Phones!

In the early days of his career, Nore, like Klaver, was a great user of the telephone. Some legislative leaders suspected the usage was for private, instead of state, business.

Author's Opinion

So it was that one afternoon, during a legislative recess, Nore came to Lincoln for a long bout of telephoning — only to discover the Legislative Council Executive Board has ordered physical removal of the Unicameral phone booths. Unsuspecting, Clerk Hugo Sib caught the reaction.

If Carpenter, Proud and Nore are considered by their colleagues in the "character class," other senators retiring this year are more conventional people, still tinged by unique personality traits and interests.

Beatrice Sen. Fred Carstens has been the foremost spokesman for preservation of the natural environment, Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell the stubborn leader on one side of the state school aid argument.

In his four years, the passionately involved David Stahmer of Omaha helped push to passage major laws affecting those often without legislative champions: the physically and mentally handicapped, jailed indigents, children.

Few legislative debates were so personally tough and bitter as those waged between outgoing Sen. Duke Snyder and his fellow townsman, Ernest Chambers, over the issue of electing Omaha school board and city councilmen by district.

Up against one of the Nebraska Legislature's most articulate figures ever in Chambers, Snyder fired back verbally.

What may most mark Snyder, however, was his switch on the school aid bill this year. That reversal, from nay to aye, allowed the multi - million - dollar measure to pass over a gubernatorial veto.

Now campaigning for the Republican Third Congressional District nomination, retiring Sen. Gerald Stromer of Kearney was the longer in the legislative family. The youthful, quiet former college faculty did not become embroiled in Unicameral gun battles. His principal push — it just barely fell short last year — was for establishment of a fundamental state change, a partisan Legislature.

Another contender for the Republican congressional nomination in the 61-county Third District is Sen. James Waldron, also bowing out of the Unicameral hothouse.

Modern in dress, casual and off-handed in conversation, Waldron is not associated by his colleagues with any one issue through the years, but with peripheral involvement in many — highways, liquor, taxation being particularly cited.

It was Waldron who forced former State Motor Vehicles Director John Kissack to moderate motor vehicle safety inspection rules Waldron considered excessive. That action set the precendent of greater legislative scrutiny of administrative rules and regulations.

The senator with the least tenure ending his career this year is Richard Fellman, Omaha attorney. He was ap-

Poll Predicts Electorate Will Ax Solon Pay Raise

© Sunday Journal and Star, 1974

For present and future members of the Nebraska Legislature, the outlook for a pay increase is not especially bright.

The Poll of Nebraska Opinion indicates Cornhusker voters next month will strongly reject a proposed constitutional amendment permitting legislative salaries to be increased from $4,800 per year to $8,100.

Conducted by SRI Community Response Inc. for The Sunday Journal and Star, the statewide telephone poll reached 918 persons opinions on the question of a legislative pay raise — and most were fixed — were opposed by more than 2 to 1. The total was 65% against, 28% for and 7% uncertain.

Polltakers, who weighted the results to produce a statewide configuration, believe the findings are accurate to within plus or minus 3.2 percentage points.

The constitutional amendment for legislative pay is one of two on the May 14 primary election ballot. Amendment No. 2 asks citizens to declare whether the lieutenant governor — to become a full-time executive officer next year — should retain duties as the Legislature's official president officer.

POLL OF NEBRASKA OPINION

A conclusion possible to draw from the Poll of Nebraska Opinion is that although all segments of the sample group were against the Unicameral salary hike, those most opposed were senior Nebraskans — above 65 years — and those with the lowest incomes.

There was no significant statistical difference between the way Omahans and Lincolnites, or Republicans and Democrats, view the issue.

Not in six years have state senators been permitted by voters to give themselves a pay raise.

But when reminded of that fact, poll respondents were even more pronounced in their opposition to the proposal — 72% against, compared with 65% opposition before the time differential was mentioned.

Of those opposing the pay raise after being informed of the six-year lag in salary increase, 37% explained that they feel the senators need some raise, but not a doubling of salary. Another 22% answered that the proposed raise was too large, while 16% reasoned that "they knew the wage when they took the job."

Respondents in the southern part of the First Congressional District (southeast Nebraska) were most prone to favor the salary increase after being told of the six-year dearth — 41% approving as compared with 29% before the information was given. Lincolnites, however, did not show this same switch.

It was back in 1968 that voters granted lawmakers a pay raise to $400 monthly. Since then, voters have said no — twice. In the 1972 general election, proposed constitutional amendments authorizing senators to set their own wages and granting them per diem compensation were smashingly disapproved.

Polltakers fielded responses not exactly complimentary to state senators.

At least one-third of the sample group considered the jump from $400 to $675 too steep. Another 19% said senators "don't do enough or put in that much time," while 16% more of the group suggested lawmakers have other job-producing income.

Mrs. Elliott Is Named to NU Regents

Gov. J. J. Exon Saturday announced the appointment of Mrs. Camille Elliott of Scottsbluff to the Board of Regents of the University of Nebraska.

Camille Elliott

Mrs. Elliott, wife of the late John G. Elliott, will serve the remaining nine months of her late husband's term. Mr. Elliott died Wednesday in an Omaha hospital.

A new regent will be elected to serve the 7th district in the November election. "Mrs. Elliott is a distinguished and talented lady and will carry on the dedicated work of Jack Elliott in the field of higher education that we have all appreciated and admired for over 20 years," Exon said.

Mrs. Elliott is believed to be the first woman ever appointed to the University Board of Regents.

Two Church-State Cases to Be Reargued

An apparently split Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday will hear oral reargruments on two landmark church-state cases originally presented to it last fall.

What changes the situation this week is that one member of the court is different.

Judge Donald Brodkey of Omaha has been named to fill the vacancy caused by the Jan. 1 resignation of Judge Robert Smith, also of Omaha.

Judge Smith was sitting when the two cases initially were argued. Both were appeals from decisions handed down by Lancaster District Judge Sam Van Pelt.

In one instance, Van Pelt upheld the validity of a state law allowing parochial school students to freely obtain textbooks, on a loan basis, from public schools.

The second case involves use of state funds to subsidize tuition of private college students. Van Pelt ruled the law authorizing that practice unconstitutional.

For a Legislative act to be struck down by the Supreme Court, at least five of the seven jurists must so agree. A simple majority of four can't overturn a legislative enactment.

For some time, legal circles have speculated that the Supreme Court was badly divided on the two cases. Cited was a lack of decision opinions from the judges.

Speculation was that Judge Brodkey may be the determining force in tipping the scales in both cases.

Also Wednesday, the court has scheduled reargument of a Douglas County district court decision dealing with protested tuition payments made at the University of Nebraska at Omaha by a student objecting to a non-resident classification.

Gaylord Bauer contends UNO overcharged him by $703 on tuition payments, classifying him a non-resident when he claimed residency status.

The trial court sided with UNO against Bauer.

Danbury — Just about everybody in these parts knows somebody who knew somebody who saw the "ghost light of Hamburg."

But if there are any live witnesses — and who goes seeking any other kind? — they're as hard to scare up as the mystery thing itself. It seems nobody has seen nothin' for at least 20 years, and there are skeptics even about the last purported sightings.

Legend has it that an eerie "fireball" has been floating up periodically from the old Hamburg cemetery, located just north of Neb 89 between Danbury and Lebanon, since about 1894.

The Sunday Journal and Star of March 15, 1953, took note of the last known time the supposed spook made the scene:

"It appeared last summer to a woman who was coming down Happy Hollow canyon, scared her, but didn't prevent her from noting that it seemed to be floating exactly eight feet above the ground."

Mrs. Sam Walters, enrolled in a University of Nebraska folklore class at the time, wrote of that sighting, as well as other earlier occurrences. The retired teacher now attributes the early stories to natural phenomena and more recent ones to "active imaginations."

On Walters Farm

Since the century-old graveyard is on the Walters farm, she feels that any strange goings-on likely would have come to her attention. Even her husband, who has spent some 70 years on the place, "has never seen anything suspicious.

"Yet so many good honest people claimed to have seen the light at one time that surely something was responsible," said the farm wife. "Maybe it was phosphorus in a hollow tree or gases from decaying vegetation or something like that. And there are times when car lights reflect off a tombstone so that you'd swear you were seeing a lantern or something."

The 1950-ish reports, according to Mrs. Walters, came from "some newcomer families who have since moved away." She is convinced that their minds, stirred up by tales new to them, were playing tricks.

Admittedly unresolved, however, are circa 1900 reports of "a ghost fireball that would even chase people against buildings and then jump over them." The late Mrs. Jennie Duckworth, also a teacher, collected a series of yarns about such terrifying experiences.

"My own Uncle Harry claimed he had seen the light pass above horses at night," said Mrs. Walters' husband. "He insisted it was so bright he could see the horses from its glow."

Didn't Find a Thing

Alfred Haag, Danbury's mayor, a middle-aged garage owner, recalls going to the cemetery "as a curious high schooler who had heard ghost stories from an older man I worked with. He claimed to have seen the light more than once, but we kids were disappointed in not finding a thing."

One Danbury oldster who grew up at Hamburg, a homestead settlement that has long since disappeared, recalls "sitting around as a kid listening to one story after another about that old cemetery."

Walter Remington, 81, especially was impressed by one intriguing account.

"The light was supposed to have risen up from an old cemetery well and would drift off in the distance," he said. "There was supposition that a missing neighbor and his horse had fallen in the well. When somebody finally dug out the well, they sure enough found the remains of a horse — but with no rider."

Could it be that the man, who was never located, actually was the roamer in spirit form?

Aura of Superstition

Remington doesn't know about that, but he recalls that an aura of superstition hovered over the graveyard for decades. Pranksters made the most of its reputation.

It was, for instance, the background for at least one mock hanging. And Remington delights in recounting the time the late Grant Kincaid covered himself with a sheet and hid behind a marker waiting for Hank Clayton, also deceased, to saunter past.

"When Grant jumped out yelling, 'Here I come,' Hank picked up a fence post and yelled back, 'And, by God, here I come.' It was said he chased old Grant clear across the next field."

Recalling descriptions of the light as "sort of like a jack-o' lantern," Remington said he neither saw it or believed that it actually existed. Still, he respected the possibilities.

One night I had to ride past that cemetery" on an errand, he reflected, grinning, "and I will admit this: I was going so damn fast I couldn't have seen a light if there had been one."

New Titles, New Challenges

Acker, Hartung Take Over Top NU Ag Posts

Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Dr. Duane Acker and Dr. Ted Hartung are two University of Nebraska educators with new titles and a lot of problems which they refer to as "challenges."

Acker is the new vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural resources, a complex which includes the College of Agriculture, the experiment stations scattered around Nebraska and the School of Technical Agriculture at Curtis.

Hartung is the new dean of agriculture which is a much different job than that held by Dean Alvin Frolik under the system that existed before the new institute replaced the College of Agriculture.

Some agricultural leaders had felt that a dean might not be necessary under the vice chancellor but Hartung regards his promotion as valid. "It puts agriculture's academic unit on a par with the other colleges in the University. It opens the door to closer relationships we didn't have before," he said.

Acker describes his new title as "a positive step" in the effort of agriculture leaders to gain equality of stature for the agricultural portion of the University. He is acutely aware that many farm leaders feel his position should be a full chancellorship describing his position as the result of the "collective judgment" of the legislature and adds: "Our job is to pick up the tools the Legislature in its wisdom gave us."

Improving the salary of agricultural technicans, of the ag campus faculty and instructors at Curtis are high on the list of Acker's tasks.

Many of the decisions must be made outside of the University system. The state classification system of state employes must be changed to permit an increase in the wages of the technicians at the experimental farms and money must be found somewhere within the University system to pay the increase in salary.

"The highly trained and dedicated technician is essential to efficient research. Without him you have a $15,000 a year man weighing samples. It just isn't possible to use scientists efficiently without good technical personnel," Acker said.

Salary problems with faculty are also "very real" in that the 12-month staff of the farm campus is paid less per working day than the University personnel who work on a 9-month basis.

"We are working on a number of internal methods of solving the problem. Chancellor Zumberge is helping with this and we are to be allowed to use up to $250,000 from the sale of the Havelock Farms to aid in solving the salary inequities under a special authorization of the Legislature. It is only a first step in a series of four or five steps to equalize salaries," Acker said.

Acker regards the use of money from the sale of the Havelock farms "a solution I would not have chosen because it will delay essential improvements at Mead but it is an effort by the Legislature to acknowledge that a problem exists," he said. "It is another case of robbing Peter to pay Paul," he added.

Another area of concern which Acker and his staff intend to deal firmly with is the "proliferation of new programs at the expense of old ones."

"We keep getting additional programs to operate but we don't get any new dollars to run the programs. This means that we have to rob existing programs to get the new ones started. This practice simply must end," Acker said.

The increasing enrolment in the agriculture college is another problem that must be dealt with in the form of additional help for the teaching staff. A carefully prepared list of needs regarded as essential was rejected by the legislative fiscal office in total in its initial presentation to the Legislature.

"We will have to wait until the dust settles when the Legislature goes home and see what the governor vetoes and what survives but resident instruction is a matter of great concern. We are getting increased enrolments and we expect more because more high school counselors are becoming aware of the opportunities available in the agribusiness field," Hartung said.

Dr. Acker also has some ideas he wants to see implemented in the farm college. "We have a lot of educators who have spent most of their lives in school. They are well educated in theory but lack industrial experience. If we can work out a system of exchange so our professors can spend a few months working in the kind of industrial jobs they are training their students for and if we can get people employed in industry to come and lecture or even teach our students we will have a student who is really ready to go when he has his degree," he said.

Acker would like to expand field trips for students so that "a feed specialist will have at least seen soybean meal and meat scraps prepared before he applies for a job in the industry."

Dr. Acker wants to keep the revolving funds generated from sales of animals and crops produced on the experiment stations within the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"Keeping these funds is a reward to the researcher for good management. He will have enough money to run his experiment if he manages it carefully. Any farmer can understand that. It is too easy to just spend appropriated funds if everything has to come from the government. You get more for your experimental dollar with a revolving fund," Acker said.

Acker warns his audiences that "teaching agriculture is an expensive business."

Keeping enough animals on the campus in a surrounding that "will keep us good neighbors is an essential part of the operation. You must have animals available to the students," he said.

One change in the teaching method will be made to give urban students who enter agricultural fields skills farm kids learn at home in the area of livestock care and mechanical skills such as welding and tractor care as a part of their college experience. "Not a vocational type course but practical experience they need to have," he added.

Improvements are also planned for the vocational technical school at Curtis. Dr. Acker said he had hired some graduates of the school and was impressed with the quality of the students.

Improvement in wages to cut turnover of teachers and some improvements in facilities are planned for the Curtis campus.

"It is a big job that I have accepted. It isn't going to be easy and we will need all the help we can get," Acker said.

Most of the first months on the job will be spent acquainting Dr. Acker with the farms, departments and personnel he has in his institute and meeting with groups of farmers and organizations who want to see the agriculture operation at the University improved.

Nebraska Resources

By Harold Simmons

Few things have irritated municipal utility leaders as much in recent years as the failure in the 1974 Legislature of a bill authorizing towns and utilities to join in building power generating plants and transmission lines.

And the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD), principal opponent of the bill, is the villain in the minds of many, although not all, municipal leaders.

Strange enough, just two weeks ago the NPPD monthly board meeting, NPPD officials and board members publicly conceded they had lost the battle to kill LB656.

But like many others, they simply misjudged what senators might do in the frantic closing days of the session.

A dozen Panhandle towns wanted LB656 badly. They viewed it as offering one more alternative in their search for a future supply of electricity.

But with the death of LB656, some in the Panhandle are seriously considering banding together to do just what LB656 would have allowed — and which is now specifically prohibited in state law — and see who wants to challenge them.

Municipal utility leaders were told more than once last week that they may be forced to band together in the future to negotiate with power suppliers.

Three logical groups were outlined: Panhandle towns as one; the towns of Blair, Nebraska City, Tecumseh, Falls City and Auburn as a second; and the remainder of the state as a third.

Facts Tell Different Story

Roland Kampmeier, an electric rate expert from Chattanooga, Tenn., suggested last week that facts, rather than just "common sense," should be the deciding factor in taking steps to conserve energy.

As an example, he said, many people have the idea that electricity is a poor use of energy and therefore it would be wise to switch to some other form of energy for certain functions

On this theory, he said, some people have stopped using electric razors and switched to blades. However, he said, it takes five times more energy to heat the water needed for shaving by hand than to produce the electricity to operate the electric razor.

Likewise, he said, it takes five times more energy to drive your car — even that compact — to the supermarket than to drive an electric golf cart.

Control Costs High

The Nebraska Public Power District plans to spend something in excess of $13 million to install pollution control equipment on the Kramer Station power plant at Bellevue.

Operating and interest costs will push total cost of the project several million dollars higher

It was noted recently that the power plant was built 25 years ago for slightly under $14 million.

Sierra Delay

The Sierra Club challenge to Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) plans to build a power plant near Sutherland Reservoir in western Nebraska has delayed the scheduled start of construction.

And NPPD officials say it is not beyond the possible that more delays mean the plant will not be completed in time to produce power in 1977, when industry officials predict the plant will be needed to offset deficits in power supply in the state

The Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) plans to buy 25% of the power produced at the NPPD plant. By coincidence, OPPD General Manager Ralph Shaw is, and has been for many years, a very serious member of the National Sierra Club.

Senators Will Be Busy Studying 52 Resolutions

The 1974 Legislature is over, but its committees are prepared to embark on various interim studies.

Ranging from public power to water resources, the topics will receive attention and recommendations will go to the 1975 Unicameral.

Here are the 52 resolutions, the topics, introducers and the committees doing the studies:

LB108, to study advantages of establishing a state department or division of aging (Moylan — Health)

LR115, to study problems and relationships of agencies dealing with human services and the feasibility of a single agency to coordinate and control the quality of human services (Murphy — Health)

LR119, to study aviation and its relationship to communications and transportation in the state (C Carsten — Transportation)

LR121, to study alternative sites for the replacement of Niobrara State Park (Burbach — Constitutional Revision)

LR122, to study workmen's compensation laws with emphasis on interim rate changes in small business audits (Duis — Banking, Commerce and Insurance)

LR123, to study bus and rail transportation in the state (Mahoney and Stull — Transportation)

LR124, to study wholesale and retail electrical systems in the state (Stromer — Public Works)

LR126, to study what is necessary to define the rights and obligations of teachers administrators and school officials in contract curriculum (Warner — Education)

LR127, to study centralizing state offices in North Platte and the purchase of a building for that purpose (Waldron — Miscellaneous Subjects)

LR129, to study administrative procedures in county jails and other correctional facilities (Stull — Government)

LR130, to study how to increase efficiency of rules governing the Nebraska Legislature (Duis — Legislative Rules)

LR131, to study certification or licensure and regulation of medical and radiological technologists (Health)

LR132, to study the legal profession in Nebraska (Chambers — Judiciary subcommittee)

LR138, to study the proposal for a wildlife refuge on the Platte River (Stromer, Kelly and Marvel — Public Works)

LR140, to study certification or licensure and regulation of the profession and practice of social work (Cavanaugh — Health)

LR141, to study conflicting interests between public information needs and the privacy of citizens (Cavanaugh — Miscellaneous Subjects)

LR142, to study data relative to the problems of annual legislative sessions (Johnson — Legislative Rules)

LR143, to study all aspects of state inheritance taxation, including estate taxation and federal estate tax apportionment (Luedtke — Judiciary)

LR144, to study modernization and simplification of Nebraska's rules of evidence (Luedtke — Judiciary)

LR145, to study current practices of the mental retardation regions (Health)

LR146, to study all public employe retirement systems with the aim of promoting uniformity and equity (Retirement)

LR148, to study land use legislation to lead to a state plan (Agriculture)

LR149, to study the agricultural economy in the state (Agriculture)

LR150, to study the economic impact of price controls on Nebraska (Agriculture)

LR151, to study what is the most productive use of the state's school lands (Agriculture)

LR152, to study existing child support collection methods (Fellman — Judiciary)

LR153, to study procedures for collection enforcement and administrative and judicial review of the state income and sales tax liabilities (Carpenter and Luedtke — Judiciary)

LR154, to study aviation transportation in the state and the development of public airports (Kelly and Schmidt — Transportation)

LR156, to study Sanitary Improvement Districts to determine if public is served adequately and properly (Miscellaneous Subjects)

LR158, to study through an appointed committee which would hold statewide hearings reaction to the manner in which state aid to education is provided (Marvel and Simpson — Executive Board)

LR159, to study inspection functions currently performed by state agencies (Warner — interim committee by Executive Board)

LR160, to study the transmittal of policy information between state agencies and employes (Maresh, Kelly, Dickinson, Kennedy Carstens Kime and Cavanaugh — Labor)

LR161, to study human services higher education the progress of management information and the improvement of capital construction (Marvel, Clark, Marsh Savage, Stahmer, Whitney — Appropriations)

LR162, to study children's services (Marvel, Clark Savage Marsh Whitney, Stahmer — Appropriations)

LR163, to study the need for defining unfair business practices and creating enforcement mechanisms (Anderson — Revenue)

LR164, to study problems of redistricting the state Supreme Court (Cavanaugh — Miscellaneous Subjects)

LR166, to study legislative needs to bring Nebraska into compliance with the federal Endangered Species Act of 1973 (Anderson — Constitutional Revision)

LR167, to study the need for clarification and codification of the state's hunting and fishing laws (Anderson — Constitutional Revision)

LR168, to study the feasibility of establishing a college of veterinary medicine (Maresh — Agriculture)

LR169, to study compensation laws, including public hearings and private study (Dickinson, Kelly, F. Carstens — Labor)

LR170, to study distribution formulae for state aid to education (Anderson — interim committee by Executive Board)

LR171, to study post secondary educational opportunities (Anderson — Education subcommittee)

LR172, to study Public Power construction contracts and assess current statutory provisions governing them. (Executive Board)

LR173, to study moonlighting by state employes earning $20,000 a year who get $10,000 a year in outside fees (Carpenter — Executive Board)

LR174, to study structural requirements for development of flood protection in the Big Blue River valley (Maresh and Epke — Agriculture)

LR175, to study various areas of Public Power (R Lewis — Executive Board)

LR176, to study the responsibility of coordinating citizens agencies, etc., affecting Watercourses (Duis — Public Works)

LR177, to study rehabilitation services (Health)

LR179, to study the delivery of human services (Stahmer — Health)

LR180, to study credit practices of lending institutions and whether there is credit discrimination against women and minorities (Fowler — Banking, Commerce and Industry)

LR182, to study water resources (Kremer — Public Works)

Driving Licenses Revoked

The Nebraska Motor Vehicles Dept. reported a slight decrease in the number of driving license revocations for March when compared to that same period a year ago.

There were 120 revocations in March compared to 123 a year ago and to 89 in February.

Persons losing their license in March:

pointed to serve in the 1973 and 1974 Legislatures, filling out the term of former Sen. P. J. Morgan.

Fellman last week expressed his departing thoughts in a letter to his legislative associates he said in part:

"I view the Legislature as a magnificant institution of democracy, at times bordering on anarchy, but never on tyranny.

"I have come to have a far greater respect for the collective ability of this body and the conscientious way in which work is approached than I had ever thought as an outsider looking in . . . This Legislature seems to me an almost perfect cross section of the state, showing both the highest of the collective qualities and pettinesses, warts and all.

"To me," Fellman concluded, "the only political body more satisfying to serve in would be the United States Senate."

Spuds Are Few, Prices Are Puffed Up

By Steve Kadel

The common potato. Long an ally of bargain-hunting housewives. It, too, has been added to a growing list of shortages.

And the situation will get worse before it gets better, according to Dr. Robert O'Keefe, horticulture professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The shortage started two years ago when the southern crop was wiped out. That put a big demand and sky-rocketing prices on the northern crop, usually reserved for seed.

O'Keefe said because seed potatoes were needed to satisfy nonplanting demands, the acreage planted throughout the country dropped.

Now, he said, there is an increased demand for acreage but no where to get seed Agriculture Dept. statistics define the problem

As of April 1, the U.S potato supply was 52.9 million hundredweight, down from 77.6 million a month earlier

"It now costs about $400-$500 to plant an acre of potatoes," O'Keefe said "Four to five years ago that's about what your gross income from an acre was"

Seed potatoes now sell for $15 to $20 a hundred pound bag "That's what it costs if you can get them," he said.

It takes 20 bags to plant an acre of potatoes.

"There is just no seed," O'Keefe said. "The higher prices are caused by shortages in four areas — seed, labor, fuel and fertilizer. This coming year potatoes will remain in short supply, but how long it will take to work it out I can't say."

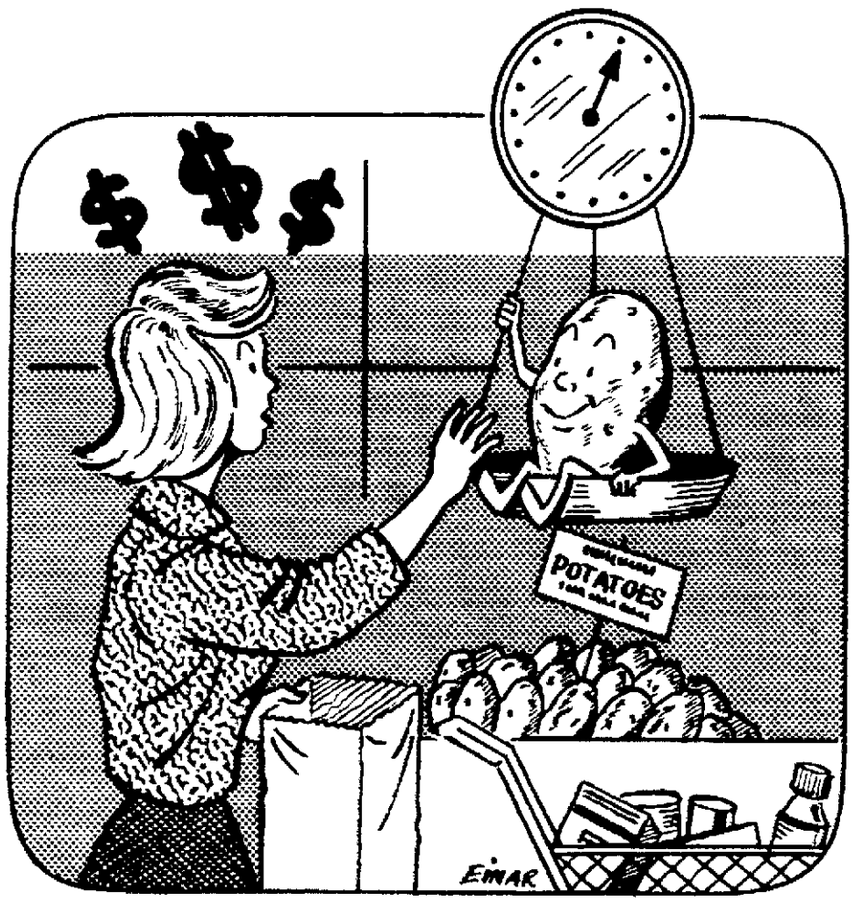
Lloyd Smith, director of produce sales for Hinky Dinky, said "It's been nip and tuck to get what we need for our customers. But as soon as the new southern crop comes in we should see a drastic decline in price, which is now considerably above last year's"

A spot check of Lincoln grocery stores showed that prices for a five pound bag of potatoes have risen an average of 15¢ to 20¢ in the last six weeks Most are now selling for about 95¢

Potato chip prices went up 12 to 20% last week in most Lincoln grocery stores Officials of one company said the price of a twin pack has risen from 69¢ to 85¢ in three months

A Lincoln grocery store manager said he hasn't seen potato chip prices this high since 1953.

Weaver Potato Chip Co raised its prices along with everyone else, but vice president Russel Ritzman said potato prices weren't the only reason.



"All the potatoes we use we grow ourselves at Alliance," he said Rising prices of vegetable oil and packaging were other reasons for last week's price hike, according to Ritzman.

Packaging costs have gone up 25% and vegetable oil has soared from 10¢ a pound to 46¢ a pound. Exporting the ingredients used in vegetable oil has caused a scarcity in this country, he said.

"This is what has raised the price of our potato chips," Ritzman said. "We've raised prices twice and may have to do so again. Potatoes are very scarce and the prices are going sky high."

In-State Trips Are Club Topic

With gas expensive and a lowered speed limit, members of the Lincoln Chapter of the USDA Club will be considering Nebraska vacations at their meeting April 22 in the Elk's Club.

Bruce M. Christenson, field director for the Travel and Tourism Division of the Nebraska Dept. of Economic Development, will present a travelog slide show, depicting the possibilities of a Nebraska vacation.

Wesleyan Hosts Academy of Sciences Meet

The Nebraska Academy of Sciences and affiliated societies will meet Friday and Saturday at Nebraska Wesleyan's Olin Hall of Science.

Dr. Sam Treves, NU professor of Geology, will deliver the annual Maiben Memorial Lecture at the academy's banquet at 6:30 p.m. Dr. Treves, who has made numerous trips to the Antarctic, will discuss Antarctic explorations.

A panel will also discuss "Energy Questions" at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Among the panelists will be Gary Schults, product engineer for Conoco Continental Oil; Dr. George Coleman, associate professor of chemistry at Nebraska Wesleyan University; and Carl Clopek, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

During the conference scientists throughout the state will present papers on anthropology, biological and medical sciences, chemistry, physics, dental research, earth sciences, engineering, the history and philosophy of science, and science teaching.

The Junior Academy of Science, also meeting at Nebraska Wesleyan, April 19-20, will feature scientific papers presented by Nebraska high school students.

Lincolnites Ask Consolidation Of Two Lake California Suits

Lake California is in the news again.

A hearing has been requested for 9 a.m. Friday in Lancaster County District Court on a motion to consolidate two suits involving Pioneer Insurance Co., six Lincoln investors and a quarter-million-dollar mortgage agreement on Lake California property.

The consolidation move was requested by these Lincoln partners in Calco Ltd.: J. W. Mowbray, Jerome Druliner, Jack M. Pace, G. Robert Ross, Adna A. Dobson and Willard Anderson.

Dobson is a partner in Dobson Bros. Construction Co., Druliner a vice president of First Mid America Inc., and Ross a former University of Nebraska System vice president who was named chancellor of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

The first suit dates back to January and involves Calco's petition for a declaratory judgment involving Pioneer and other defendants: Superior Equity Corp., Superior Equity of California (a subsidiary), and Educators Security Insurance Co.

Roger Sack, serving as chief executive officer of each of the defendant corporations, negotiated the agreement with Calco early in 1972.

In a complex series of events, Calco was to be paid a cash fee of $27,000 by Dec. 1, 1973, for acting as an intermediary in a transfer of land and funds between subsidiaries of Superior Equity Corp. Pioneer is the primary holding of Superior Equity.

Pioneer's 1973 annual statement specifically lists this $229,675 promissory note as among $6 million held in connection with Superior Equity's Lake California, a recreational land development.

The second case, filed in March, was a countersuit by Pioneer against Calco asking payment of the $229,000-plus note and interest. due Dec. 1, 1973. The note had been executed between Calco and Educators Security Insurance Co. (Educators was merged into Pioneer in February 1972.)

The original agreement specified this dollar chronology:

Superior Equity of California would deed "to Calco's representative certain California land." Educators Security would then pay mortgage monies ($229,675) to be disbursed "to parties unknown to plaintiff (Calco) for the benefit of Superior Equity of California," with deeds to the same lands from Calco to "undesignated grantees. The deeds from plaintiff's (Calco) representative to remain unrecorded while Superior Equity of California sold said real estate to other parties."

All proceeds of sale were to be applied against mortgage principal and interest and to the payment of taxes and expenses of sale.

Calco was to make no cash payments except the interest payment due Dec. 1, 1973, for which it was to be reimbursed.

"If sale of lots (in Lake California) did not materialize, mortgages were to be foreclosed" against Calco in California "without deficiency judgment."

Calco noted that it had made no interest payment but had paid taxes of $2,640 on the land in February 1973.

On Nov. 30, 1973, Pioneer asked Calco for payment of principal and interest of $266, 080, the filing notes.

Calco said it believes that "defendants have failed to perform their agreements" to sell this real estate, pay the note or foreclose the mortgages, "thereby protecting plaintiff (Calco) from action on its note."

Planners to Consider Five Shopping Center Applications

City-County Planners will have their work cut out for them Wednesday when considering not three but five shopping center applications.

Three existing proposals for centers at 56th and Old Cheney Rd., 27th and Old Cheney Rd. and 84th and O have received the stamp of denial from Planning Director Doug Brogden.

In addition, Brogden has thrown in two applications of his own for centers of a different size at 56th and Old Cheney Rd. and at 27th and Old Cheney Rd.

Brogden is recommending denial of his first proposal and approval of the second.

Brogden based his report on the Hammer-Siler-George economic report which outlined various development strategies available to the city.

The planning commission already has chosen the alternate which would revitalize the downtown, thus restricting shopping center growth.

Under that plan, the center located in a south Lincoln location can only be 315,000-square feet by 1980, eventually expanding to 780,000-square feet by the year 2000. A 71-acre tract would be required.

In addition to holding hearings on the five applications, the commission will consider Brogden's proposal to amend the zoning code to allow the city to have greater control over the staging of shopping center development.

Brogden is recommending that shopping complexes be allowed in the G-1 Planned Commercial district by special use permit only.

He also is recommending the creation of a new zoning district, J-1 Planned Regional Commercial. The district would provide a variety of shoppers goods, including general merchandise, apparel, furniture, home furnishings, other services, office and recreational uses.

He also is recommending the creation of a new zoning district, J-1 Planned Regional Commercial. The district would provide a variety of shoppers goods, including general merchandise, apparel, furniture, home furnishings, other services, office and recreational uses.

And when the commissioners are finished with shopping center development, it also has a regular agenda facing them.

The Near-South Neighborhood Assn. is requesting a change of zone from G Local Business to B Two Family on the south side of Sumner between 24th and 26th and on the north side of Sumner on both sides of 24th. Brogden is recommending approval of the application.

The commission also will hold hearings on:

Changes of Zone

Application of Kenneth Walbridge from B Two Family to C Multiple, at 66th and Platte Ave.

Application of Phillip and Virginia Stettinger, from A-2 Single Family to B Two Family, on West S.

Application of Paul Haith from B Two Family to C Multiple on north side of N between 40th and 42nd.

Application of Lincoln Grain from AA Rural and Public Use to K Light Industry, between Hwy. 34 and BN railroad tracks, west of Oak Creek.

Amendments

Amendment to zoning ordinance amending section to relax Community Unit Plan (CUP) ordinance to allow CUP on tract of land less than ten acres if land is bounded on at least two sides by existing CUP and if the proposed CUP relates more to the adjacent CUP than other subdivisions.

Special Permits

Application of Herbert Heumann to increase density in Elizabeth Plaza, on Holdrege between 52nd and 56th.

Application of the Rev. Gordon Scott for private recreational purposes to locate antique railroad caboose at 8000 A.

Application of Duane Larson Construction Co. to amend community unit plan and preliminary plat of Quail Valley Replat, at 56th and Elkcrest Dr.

Vacations

Proposed street and alley vacations in Park Blvd. between north line of Benton and west line of 9th; Grandview Blvd. between north line of Park Blvd. and south line of Irving; Merritt between east line of 7th and west line of Grandview Blvd.; and all north-south alley in Blk. 1 and all of east-west alleys in Blks. 2 and 3, Humphrey's Park Add.

6 Scholarships Being Offered

Six $300 scholarships for students in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln agriculture and home economics colleges are being offered through the wheat division of the Nebraska Agriculture Dept.

Arlee Phillips, chairman of the advisory committee to the wheat division, said the scholarships will be used to support students doing independent study in wheat research, marketing and utilization.

Wheat division assistant chief, Rollie Rexroth, said applications are available at the Wheat Division, 101 Terminal Building. Application deadline is May 1.

Statehouse Letter

By Dick Herman

If ever you wish an example of grace under pressure, of laughing (and causing others to laugh) amidst great physical pain, for weeks and months and years, remember the example of Larry Johns.

They buried Larry last week. In truth, a man can mock leukemia and death for only so long. But some people prematurely had Johns shuffling off while he was still at the Nebraska Statehouse, trusted handyman and utility infielder of the Tiemann administration.

Johns moved into the sphere of public attention as campaign treasurer for Nobby Tiemann's 1966 campaign run. (Some shift: From selling tires to selling a candidate!) He stayed after the election, becoming state motor vehicle director and Tiemann aide during the next four years.

In those years, Johns was one of the very, very few people on whom the governor could count as totally loyal, totally without a personal axe to grind, as willing to tell Tiemann "no" as "yes." Such individuals are rare for any chief executive. When they additionally come with the rare capacity to make light of life's ocean of troubles, to promote general cheer and balance and humanity, their value is beyond measurement.

Goodnight Lee, and Jeff and . . .

A word of inside instruction for folks who believe all the faces and voices reading the "news" on television belong to honest-to-God newsmen. Those chaps are "presenters,' this typewriter hack was assured last week by an executive of an Omaha television station.

TV people became alarmed when it appeared a bill dropping Nebraska daylight saving time next winter just might pass. That would screw up national network telecast schedules — for Nebraska — or require purchase of expensive video taping equipment. Neither prospect was inviting.

Suddenly, the "anchormen" of Omaha television news shows appeared inside and just outside the legislative chamber. Are you guys reporting or are you lobbying? was the hard question put to two tube personalities. Both ducked. That's when Norm Williams of KMTV came to the rescue, supplying the soothing answer newsmen would never, never lobby but the case of "presenters" is somewhat different.

Incidently, the DST bill was amended in line with the wishes of the television people.

The Gift of Murphy

For the record, the 1974 Legislature overrode Gov. J. J. Exon's vetoes seven of the eight times senators attempted such action.

The very last override, Thursday, deeply involved Sens. Ralph Kelly and John Murphy. When it appeared the move to pass the capital construction bill free and clear of item vetoes had failed by a single vote, Kelly rose to ask a reconsideration. I don't want to be the one man blocking the wishes of 29 colleagues, Kelly said.

Yet that second try still appeared to end at 29 instead of the needed 30. Mprhy, who had passed, then rose to deliver the deciding vote, "biting my thumb the whole way."

That's why the new $6 million fieldhouse at the University of Nebraska at Omaha might properly be named after the South Sioux City Irishman. Gov. Exon had vetoed it. Murphy's willingness to help fellow senators get what they wanted was especially generous, in view of their earlier refusal to pass a pair of bills he was seriously urging — Sunday horse racing at Atokad and revamping of the Equal Opportunity Commission.

Odd Lots

—Chief Justice Paul White has such a booming voice when he gets cranked up a person can hear him through the solid wood door of a closed room, half a corridor away. That was this tourist's experience, again, last week.

—Workers in the executive branch grit their teeth and howl when they learn of legislative staff pay raises of 25% and more, especially when thousands of slobs under the state pay plan are limited to 5% increases next year, plus an extra $25 a month. The new $3 an hour salary established for the nice young people who are legislative pages is exactly the same rate paid by the attorney general and the State Revenue Dept. for law clerks — individuals one step away from legal professionalism.

—Senators got to wondering if Omahan Duke Snyder was auditioning for employment when he decided to help out in the final reading of 36 bills Thursday. Ex-radioman Snyder subbed for the reading clerks. Snyder is leaving the Unicameral this year after a single four-year term.

—In one of the truly wicked thrusts of the legislative year, Sen. John DeCamp interrupted Sen. Terry Carpenter, in full fury against a DeCamp bill, to suggest Carpenter was looking at the wrong television camera, the one that wasn't on.

Ziebarth Campaign Bus Will Run on Gasahol

Wilcox (UPI) — In an effort to prove that "Gasahol is an idea whose time has come," Wayne Ziebarth will use the fuel in his campaign bus during a tour of the Third Congressional District starting Wednesday in Grand Island.

Gasahol contains a 10% blend of grain alcohol as a replacement for lead.

Ziebarth, Democratic candidate for Congress, said, "There are a great number of advantages for Nebraska and Nebraska's economy that can develop if we have the courage to move ahead now to do two things — first, establish a grain alcohol plant in Nebraska; and second, have Nebraskans start using gasahol as a major fuel."

He said he thinks the plant should be in the Third Congressional District where it would be near a source of grain supply.

Ziebarth praised the 1971 Nebraska Legislature which set up a program to establish a gasahol industry and singled out Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood for initiating the idea and then pushing the program.

He also commended the Legislature for working to secure a $125,000 National Service Foundation grant for the University of Nebraska which is conducting gasahol research.

"Among answers the research will seek is what byproducts can be produced and are economically feasible in grain alcohol manufacture," he said.

He noted that 2.65 gallons of grain alcohol can be produced from a bushel of wheat and about the same amount from a bushel of corn or milo. That leaves nearly 90% of the grain for human food and animal feeds and supplements, Ziebarth said, adding that other products may be feasible.

"We need to find out more about exactly what these added products can be and what they will sell for so we can put this whole program together," he said.

He said he hopes that by using gasahol in his campaign "we can contribute to an awareness of the great potential here for our state."

Among other things, Ziebarth said, gasahol could help relieve the energy shortage and would be "a renewable source of energy which would be available for us annually without dependence on new reserve discoveries."

Rate Schedules to Council

Ambulance Fee Discussion Due

After a long wait on the pending business list, ambulance rates will be discussed by the Lincoln City Council at its 1:30 p.m. meeting Monday.

Under terms of a recently passed ordinance, ambulance companies operating in the Capital City must obtain a franchise from the Council. One requirement of that arrangement is that rates must be posted.

Up for public hearing Monday are the rate schedules submitted by Lincoln's two ambulance companies, Shurtleff and Eastern.

Current average charges for service run range around the $45 mark. Under the maximum rates included in the schedules submitted to the Council, the average charge could be as much as $15 above that amount.

When the rate issue first came before the Council, the city lawmakers passed the question along to the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) for a recommendation.

Although it assigned a task force to the question, SeNHPC was never able to settle on a recommendation. The only advice given the Council was that ambulance companies should be allowed to operate at a reasonable profit.

Don Shurtleff Jr., owner and operator of Shurtleff Ambulance Co., said a substantial increase in user fees will be necessary in order for his firm to maintain its current level of service and still operate at a profit.

Both Shurtleff and Eastern Ambulance Service have indicated that, at current rates, they are operating at a loss or near the break-even point.

Shurtleff said one of the options the Council might want to consider is granting a subsidy to ambulance companies to prevent a drastic rate increase.

Marty Miller of Eastern also indicated that the subsidy route is a possible solution to the rate problem. "Our expenses can't be completely covered by user fees without individual user fees being so high that people can't afford it," he said. "The rate should be low enough so it doesn't create a hardship on any of the users."

Miller emphasized that the Eastern rate schedule before the Council is a maximum limit. He said Eastern will make every effort to avoid raising rates to that maximum level.

Shurtleff expressed the same concern but said it would be very difficult to avoid going to the maximum level if his company is to operate in the black.

National Guard Training in Colorado OKd

Nebraska's Army National Guard will travel to Fort Carson, Colo., by military vehicle convoy for its annual summer training in June, according to Maj. Gen. Francis L. Winner, adjutant general for Nebraska.

Winner said Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger has approved the summer training program.

The decision concerning transportation to the training session was delayed until the availability of fuel during the training period could be more accurately forecast.

Winner also said the army guard's 24th medical company is scheduled for two weeks of training at Camp Ripley, Minn., beginning May 25.

A defensive driving course, sponsored by the Lancaster County Chapter ±39 of the American Association of Retired Persons, will be held Thursday and Friday at First United Methodist church, 2723 No. 50th St.

The eight-hour course will begin at 8 a.m. both days and will run until noon.

The course is designed to provide helpful information in day-by-day driving as well as aiding senior citizens in taking their next driver's license test.

Course coordinator is Mrs. Ocie Parsell.

Three Admitted For Observation

The Lancaster County Board of Mental Health heard three cases during the past week. All were represented by attorneys.

One person was admitted for involuntary observation at the Lincoln Regional Center and another was admitted for involuntary observation at the Hastings Regional Center

In the third case, a person was admitted for involuntary observation at the Veterans Hospital in Lincoln.

Metro Memo

By Tom Lansworth

City Clerk Harold Springer has been keeping track of city business for nearly 15 years.

His tenure as city clerk qualifies him as one of the overall experts on city government who can be found in city hall — a qualification important to the general citizenry as well as newspaper reporters.

In keeping with the low profile he likes to have in city government, Springer recently allowed a fairly significant professional recognition to go unnoticed by anyone but his closest associates.

Last month, Springer was officially recognized as a Certified Municipal Clerk by the national organization of municipal clerks.

The recognition, based solely on professional merit and experience, is granted to only a fraction of the city clerks belonging to the national association.

Since Springer doesn't get his job through the election process, and therefore doesn't have to make campaign speeches about his qualifications, he likely would have allowed his professional achievement to go totally unnoticed.

But his friends and employes would have none of that. Congratulations!

Easy Money?

When the City Council last week decided to go along with a request from the Municipal Court for a $12,407 grant to computerize court records, Council Chairwoman Helen Boosalis raised an interesting point.

The city money will be lumped in with federal aid to pay for the computerization study which has a total price tag of approximately $124,000.

The grant from the City Council was necessary as a good-faith gesture for the Municipal Court to be able to apply to the Region II Crime Commission for the federal matching money.

When the issue came before the Council at its informal Monday morning meeting, Boosalis observed the relative ease with which city government commits itself to spending dollars from Washington.

Maybe expenditure of those dollars should be scrutinized just as closely as are appropriations of local tax revenues, she said.

Ah, but if we don't get in the federal money line, someone else will, countered Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf.

But in this case, Boosalis observed, a sizable chunk of city money had to be put up in order to get federal aid.

The Council, she said, should be just as hesitant about spending money in that kind of situation as they are when considering the city budget.

Maybe she's right.

A Mormon Answer

How Can Churches Keep Their Young People?

Sunday Journal and Star
RELIGION
8B April 14, 1974,

By Anita Fussell

"Don't you dare bop my ear again," said the shocking pink hand puppet after taking a good whack on the head from the Easter Bunny.

At the Jim Randall home, 8711 Hickory Lane, an impromptu puppet show featuring two mop-headed puppets and a bunny named Egburt was in full swing.

The show, part of a regular Mormon tradition known as the "family home evening," kept its young audience in giggles until its stage, in a grand finale, collapsed.

"You have to bring along a sense of humor if you come," Randall had warned earlier in response to a request to visit his family the Monday before Easter.

Once a week, devout Latter-day Saints such as Jim and Susan Randall set aside an evening for family fun, study, fellowship and "keeping the lines of communication open."

"Sometimes the evening is a disaster, said Jim, but other times . . ." Those other times include purely fun evenings of roller skating or picnicking.

And no matter how busy Susan or he may be, Jim added, Monday evenings always belong to the family.

Randall estimates that at least 30% of Lincoln's Latter-day Saint families observe such an evening.

Growing Membership

According to the late Louis Cassels, religion writer for UPI, the strong home structure of the Mormons is a key factor in their recent membership growth. This American-born branch of Christianity now tops 3½ million and has spread around the world.

"The Mormons seem to have an answer to the question that concerns every religious body: How do we hold onto our young people?" wrote Cassels before his recent death. Much of the credit, he said, belongs to the Mormon custom known as the "family home evening."

As the head of the radio division of the University of Nebraska department of Agricultural Communication, Randall writes and produces "Farm Facts and Fun" for 55 area radio stations.

As a life long Latter-day Saint, he is a high priest in the order of Melchizedek and a counselor to Bishop Alvin Van Schiess of the Lincoln ward, or parish.

And as a conscientious Mormon father, he relies heavily on the "family home evening" to teach, along with his wife, some basic principles for living to his seven children.

Every one of the Randall children is a livewire, from almost-13 Kristine — the only girl — to the sixth and youngest boy, 18-month Kevin. Stairstepping in between are the five other boys — James, Darin, Michael, Sean and Jeffrey.

Using beautifully designed study materials published by their church, the Randalls set sail Monday through a carefully structured evening rippled with sudden squalls and unexpected incidents. In fact, said Jim, the unexpected is normal for their family.

Michael, 6, led off with a free prayer.

"Thank you for this nice day . . . that we can have this family night . . . that we can be in the newspaper . . ." Everyone waited patiently for the thoughts and words to struggle into consciousness.

Jeff, a three-year-old blond bombshell, led the first song, his voice fading in and out, but his swaying body keeping perfect time as he hung onto the side of the piano.

Kristie played the piano. On the wall she had hung crayoned words to the song so the rest of the family could join in. Later, she was to lead the evening lesson on the Fifth Commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Some Serious Questions

After Michael, Sean, 4, and Darin, 10, took their bows for the puppet show, Randall asked his oldest son, Jimmy, 12, some serious questions. They were the same questions asked of Jimmy last Sunday when he was found to be worthy of entering the Aaronic priesthood.

Next Sunday he will be ordained a deacon by his father. There are no paid priests in the Mormon church. Every adult male who is found worthy, who studies his faith and lives according to its principles, becomes a priest.

"Jimmy, I'm really proud of you," said his father after the question period.

"You're breaking the chair," Susan tells one of her lively sons in the only reprimand of the evening. Mormons believe in the power of praise and example — and if necessary, the wooden spoon.

During the family lesson, Kevin occupied himself by turning his small chair into a slide. Back and forth he went over the plastic seat, stomach first, bothering no one and happy in his self-created play.

It was getting late. Black-haired Sean, a carbon copy of his daddy, leaned over and whispered, "Do you know what I got for Christmas?"

"What?"

"A play desk and truck."

"I got a basketball," offered Michael.

"Come on, you guys," said big Jim. "Back to the lesson."

Before the evening was over, the children had offered more than ten reasons why they should honor their father and mother.

"They have to give us food and stuff . . . they treach us the gospel . . . they love us . . . teach us to do right . . ."

"How do parents teach us to do what is right?" asked the father.

"Very carefully," answered his oldest son. The serious mood vanished and a tired family celebrated with homemade strawberry ice cream.

Event to Focus on Children's Worships

Seward — A two-day event focusing on children's worship will be held here April 21-22 at Concordia College and St. John Lutheran School.

Two pastors from St. Louis, Dr. George W. Hoyer and Dr. Edward H. Schroeder, will be guest speakers at the meeting, which begins at 3 p.m. next Sunday with an address by Pastor Hoyer on "Children's Worship in Church." At 7:30 p.m. he will speak about "Children at Worship in School."

Sunday's program also includes a 5:30 p.m. recital by the Concordia music faculty, a 6 p.m. Holy Eucharist and a 9 p.m. recital by Concordia music students.

At 10:10 a.m. Monday, Pastor Schroeder will speak on "The Search for Certainty in America Today."

In the afternoon the visiting pastors will join Dr. Harvey Lange and Dr. Norbert Streufert in a dialogue on the value of tradition and the value of innovation in worship.

Professors Charles Ore, Robert Lehmann and Robert Clausen of Concordia, and Arlen Meyer of St. John School, will give worship demonstrations employing traditional, innovative, visual and dramatic materials.

Accepts Call

Joseph Mogle of Austin, Minn., has accepted a call as director of Christian education and choir director of Temple Baptist Church, the Rev. H. E. Garland, pastor, announced this week.

Mogle received his B.A. from Grace College in Omaha and his M.A. from the Theological Seminary in Winona, Lake, Ind. He is married and the father of two small daughters.

The Rev. Norman L. Correll will speak tonight at 7 at the Havelock Assembly of God Church, 70th and Kearney.

Norman Correll

During this special rally, he will explain the purpose of the International Correspondence Institute (ICI), which is a literature program for teaching and evangelism, according to the Rev. J. Robert Birdwell, pastor of the church.

Correll recently has been appointed dean of Evangelism and Spiritual Development of ICI and will be headquartered in Brussels, Belgium. He will participate with missionaries in ICI conferences in the Far East, Latin America, Eurasia and Africa, said Birdwell.

A former missionary to Tanzania, East Africa, Correll has served since 1968 as national secretary of the Assemblies of God Youth Department in Springfield, Mo.

Anglicans in Uganda

Louisville (UPI) — Uganda holds fourth place among nations of the world with the largest number of Anglicans, according to the Rt. Rev. John Howe, world Anglican executive officer, following England, Australia and the United States.

Bishop Howe said that more than one-third of all Anglican confirmations in 1972 took place in Africa, while less than 25% were in England.

April Crusade Under Way

Cancer Story Told To Fourth-Graders

By Steve Kadel

If you smoke just one cigaret a day, will it hurt?

When you're smoking and you can't stop, is that worse than alcoholism?

Is it harder for women to stop then men?"

Those were a few of the questions thrown at four Lincoln High students who put on an anti smoking program for Randolph School fourth-graders recently. The program, "The Trouble With Smoking," is one of the preventive projects of the American Cancer Society's Nebraska Division during its April Cancer crusade.

Shown were slide pictures of healthy and cancerous lungs in cancer patients who died at Lincoln General Hospital. All were longtime cigaret smokers, such as one man who smoked two packs a day for 34 years.

When asked if their parents smoked, nearly three-fourths of the 40 students said yes. And between 15 and 20 indicated they themselves has smoked at least one cigaret.

Many children said their parents' smoking worried them. Said one girl: "We didn't want our mom to smoke, so we threw her cigarets behind the refrigerator."

5 Years Old

The fourth-grade program was established five years ago by Dr. John T. McGreer III with the cooperation of the Cancer Society. Dr. McGreer used to present the show himself, but now trains students from each of Lincoln's five high schools.

The students design a presentation of their own in addition to the slide show. Skits and puppet shows have been used.

Fourth-graders are studying the lungs and circulatory system in the Lincoln schools, and Dr. McGreer's idea is that children learn best from their peers.

But that's only part of the Cancer Crusade.

The society's major goal will be $54,000 in contributions for cancer research, public education and patient services. Door-to-door canvassing begins Saturday.

In accordance with American Cancer Society policy, 60% of the income remains in Nebraska for state use and 40% goes to the national organization for research projects.

This year, $24 million has been allocated nationally for cancer research.

Free Examinations

An oral cancer detection clinic is scheduled for April 23 from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the University of Nebraska College of Dentistry in Lincoln.

A free examination will be given to anyone who wants it. This is especially important for persons who are over 50 or who wear dentures, Cancer Society officials said.

The current rate of cancer cure is one in three cases. One in two cases could be cured with early detection, according to the society.

A fund-raising golf tournament is planned. Golfers can enter as many times as they wish at any Lincoln course. For $1, they can play between April 20 and April 27 and match their scores against those shot by Dick Perry and Dorothy Schwartzkopf on April 27.

Participants in Thursday's Cleanup for Cancer will be sponsored by Lincoln businessmen, who will pledge donations for each piece of litter collected.

A quit-smoking clinic will be held Tuesday at Bryan School. Former smokers Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davidson and Judge Donald Grant will lead discussions, and Lincoln doctors will present health information.

A leading cancer researcher predicts that at least one form of human cancer will be traced to a virus this year, but another scientist says such a conviction is unwarranted.

Increasing Evidence

There has been increasing lab evidence during the past few years to link viruses and cancer. Confirmation, however, so far has eluded scientists. Proof could lead to an anticancer vaccine and mark a major step in the war against cancer.

The subject of viruses and cancer was discussed recently in a series of reports at a science writers seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society. Most researchers including Dr. Albert A. Sabin of Polio vaccine fame, were optimistic.

Dr. Sol Spiegelman, director of the Institute of Cancer Research at Columbia University, predicted that laboratory would isolate the first human cancer virus before the end of 1974. "Thus far, it really looks good," he said.

He also predicted that within three years, researchers looking for cancer viruses will be able to give doctors a highly sensitive and specific test for different types of cancer. "If you have a battery of tests, you'll have something that will save thousands of lives," Dr. Spiegelman said.

However, Dr. Paul H. Black an associate professor at Harvard Medical School, was more pessimistic. "Such conviction that viruses are the cause of cancer seem unwarranted and presumptuous at the present time," he said. "I feel we must pause and consider the available evidence with a more skeptical attitude."

Lincoln High School students Judy Johnson, Whitney James, Nancy Fiedler and Jane Schwab answered Randolph School fourth graders' questions about cigaret smoking after a 20-minute slide show entitled "The Trouble With Smoking."

Dyas Slated At Precinct Meets

First Congressional District Democratic candidate, Hess Dyas, today announced he is beginning the first phase of his campaign canvassing effort.

Dyas said in a prepared statement that he will begin attending precinct coffees in his behalf Monday.

The first two precincts Dyas will be going into are 12-B-6 and 12-C-5, both in the extreme eastern part of Lincoln. At future dates, following the coffees, Dyas plans to personally canvass the precincts.

Lady Bird Wins Award

Arbor Day Celebration Set

Nebraska City — The arrival of spring would not be complete without the Annual Arbor Day celebration. This year the event will be Saturday and Sunday in Nebraska City.

The awards banquet is set for Saturday at 7 p.m. at Steinhart Lodge. An estimated 150 persons are expected to attend.

Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson leads the list of award recipients. However, she will not be able to attend because of another commitment. She will receive the J. Sterling Morton Award. The award is presented to the individual who has done the most to perpetuate Arbor Day founder J. Sterling Morton's love of trees.

Other awards will be given in the areas of corporations, media and associations. The newspaper award will go to Dick Brooks, author of the syndicated cartoon that featured the Jackson Twins in a "save the tree" segment. It ran for a seven-week period last fall in more than 300 daily and Sunday newspapers.

Gordon MacRae will be on hand to sing a medley of songs during the banquet. Mistress of ceremonies will be Mrs. Frank B. Morrison, national coordinator of the Arbor Day Foundation.

Speakers include Gov. J. J. Exon and Rex Resler, associate chief of the U.S. Forest Service.

College Notes

Med Center Grant — An assistant professor of anatomy at the University of Nebraska Medical Center will receive a $5,000 Health Sciences Consortium grant. Dr. J. Graham Sharp will use the money to develop self-instruction units for classroom work.

Doane Registrar's Paper — Loyd C. Oleson, registrar of Doane College in Crete, will present a paper concerning academic calendars during a session of the 60th annual meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers in Atlanta, Ga., Monday-Thursday.

Wayne Titlist — Lana Peterson of Alliance will be Wayne State College's contestant for the Miss Nebraskaland title. The pageant will be held in North Platte in June.

Concordia Indian Awareness — Indian Awareness, set for April 18-21 at Concordia College in Seward, is designed to give the non-Indian population of the college and the community an opportunity to study Indian culture.

Creighton Alumni Honored.— Eight outstanding Creighton University alumni will be honored at the annual Alumni Merit Awards Banquet Saturday, April 20, in the Brandeis Student Center. They are Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Leo Dulacki, Arlington, Va.; Frederick Rahn, Omaha; Mary Jenkins, Omaha; Sister Mary Schuller, Colorado Springs, Colo.; John Butkus, Ralston; John McCarten, Alexandria, Minn.; John Hartigan, Omaha, and John Johnson, Bellevue.

Merle Hansen New President Of Peace Group

Merle Hansen

Syracuse — Merle Hansen, Neman Grove, was elected president of Nebraskans for Peace (NFP) at their board meeting Saturday.

Other officers are Betty Olson, vice president; State Sen. Steve Fowler, secretary; and Gwen Powell, treasurer. All are of Lincoln.

NFP will participate in Environmental Day at Gateway Shopping Center April 27, calling into question the effect of the proposed B-1 bomber on the environment as it would relate to sonic boom, engine noise, fuel consumption rates and fuel cost.

NFP will participate in an impeachment rally to be held on the north steps of the capitol building, also on April 27.

The board adopted a resolution offering the organization's assistance to the Nebraska Fellowship of Churches in the supportive role the churches plan to play when American Indian Movement (AIM) trials begin in federal district court in Lincoln after May 1.

UNL Student Accepted by Naval Academy

Washington (UPI) — Nebraska Sen. Carl T. Curtis, said Saturday the U.S. Naval Academy has accepted the appointment of a University of Nebraska student.

Curtis said Jerry C. Swartz, Omaha, was among those nominees for the academy's 1978 class.

Swartz, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Swartz, entered the University of Nebraska-Lincoln fall, 1972.

He is a Benson high school graduate.

Victory March For Arthritis Scheduled

An estimated 1,800 marchers will canvass Lincoln April 29 to May 5 collecting for the nation's number one crippler: arthritis.

The door-to-door Victory March is being held in support of the Nebraska Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation.

Funds raised will be used for the Nebraska chapter's programs of research, patient services and public education. Sixty-five percent of all funds collected will be used for local services. The remainder will help pay for national research and training programs seeking the cause and cure of arthritis.

East Europe Is United Nations Meeting Topic

Dr. William Gibbon, professor of modern languages and literature at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will speak at the chapter meeting of the United Nations Monday noon.

The meeting will be in the fifth floor of the Lincoln Center Building.

Gibbon will discuss his experiences in Eastern Europe in 1973 with the social, economic and political conditions of the average citizen.

Gibbon spent 1973 in Europe as an exchange research professor at the Ethnographic Institute in Budapest, Hungary.

Omahan Dies In Shooting

Omaha (UPI) — A Omaha man, 45, was shot to death by police early Saturday evening in an incident, Douglas County Atty. Donald Knowles said he believed was "justifiable homicide."

Police said Stanley Ostrowski pulled a gun on three officers, patrolmen Allen Abbott, Jack Caniglia, and Eugene Uryasz, after he was stopped for a routine traffic violation in South Omaha.

In a statement following the shooting, Knowles described the sequence of events: Ostrowski pulled a revolver on officers after he was stopped by them. Officers tried to coax him to put the weapon down and to leave his car, but Ostrowski refused.

When he locked the car doors and rolled up the windows, police employed tear gas in efforts to get him out.

Ostrowski then left his car with his revolver "cocked and loaded," and headed for a nearby house which Knowles said was occupied. When he began beating the front door, officers fired several shots at Ostrowski, hitting him in the back and legs.

He died shortly afterward.

House of the Week

Tudor Style for Split Level Home

By Andy Lang, AP

The imposing appearance of Tudor styling is combined with comparatively recent split level design in House of the Week R-59

The visual variety of the 15th century English architecture is immediately evident, including stucco, stone, brick, rough timbers, a textured shingle roof and the impressive two-story, stone-veneer tower with a heavy oak entrance door.

Like the split levels of the years following World War II, this one, designed by architect William G. Chirgotis, can be built on flat land as well as on a sloping lot, the originally intended site of the first houses of this type. It can be built on less land than a ranch with the same amount of inside square footage.

The tower at the center of the facade permits a circular entrance foyer featuring an open, winding wrought-iron stairway leading to the upper bedroom hall and down to the recreation room and garage.

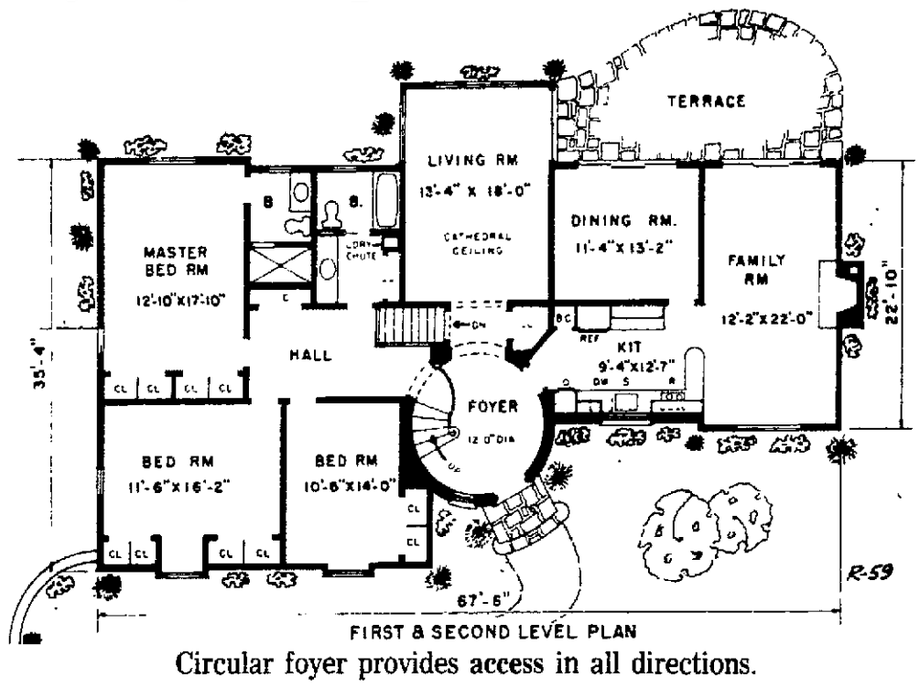
The cathedral ceiling living room, directly to the rear of the foyer, has a three-sided glass wall; on one side, sliding glass doors lead from the living room to the terrace and garden. Adjacent to the living room is the dining room, which has a separate and convenient entrance to the kitchen.

With its full complement of cabinets and appliances, the kitchen is completely open on the family room side to accommodate informal living. The family room is dominated by a decorative fireplace and wood-paneled walls. Both the dining room and the family room have sliding glass doors to the rear terrace.

The bedroom level has three sleeping rooms, each with plenty of wall space and closets.

Should only two of the bedrooms be needed, the smallest of the three could be used as a den or study room.

The master bedroom has a private bath with a tiled stall shower. The hall bath is compartmentalized — a full-wall mirrored vanity in the outer section, a bathtub and water closet in the other.



FIRST & SECOND LEVEL PLAN

Circular foyer provides access in all directions.

A lavatory and laundry room are located nine steps below the main foyer, adjacent to the wood-paneled recreation room and a few steps from the garage, future multi-purpose room and full basement.

There are 2,050 square feet in the living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, bedrooms, and circular foyer on the first and second levels.

Below the foyer are the lavatory, laundry room, recreation room and, a few steps from the garage, a multi-purpose room and full basement.

The over-all dimensions of 67 feet 6 inches by 35 feet 4 inches include all the levels.

Chemicals Controls For Weeds in Lawn

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

Almost everyone uses a pre-emergent herbicide to prevent grabgrass in his lawn. A number of chemicals have proved satisfactory for this purpose and are marketed under various trade names.

One of the best crabgrass preventatives is dacthal. In tests it has given consistant results under a variety of conditions.

Other chemicals on the market include betasan, tupersan and some balan. Betasan has certainly been satisfactory and balan gives good weed control but, if applied in rates in excess of recommendations, the bluegrass may be seriously injured.

Tupersan is an unusual material in that it gives good crabgrass control without injuring bluegrass seed or seedling. Tupersan can safely be applied at the same time the grass is seeded.

Herbicides must be applied prior to the time weed seed starts to grow. The annual grasses such as crabgrass start growth in early May and herbicide applications in April give good results.

The chemicals need to be applied evenly over the lawn. It's easy to leave strips when spreading in one direction. Best results are obtained from applying half the herbicide traveling in one direction with the spreader and the other half in the opposite direction.

Care is needed to apply the chemical at the proper rate. Too little chemical will not control weeds; too much is expensive and may damage the grass. The manufacturer's suggested settings for spreaders are approximate but useful as guides. However, the first 1,000 square feet should be measured to permit careful calibration of the applicator.

Watering the lawn after application gets the chemical down where it will do the most good. Many of the compounds are lost if exposed to air or sun over an extended period of time.

Build Your Well and Get Your Wish

By Steve Ellingson
Special Writer

If clothes make the man, accessories make the yard. You don't have to be a buff of Early American antiques to appreciate this handsome wishing well. In addition to its decorative and rustic charm, it can also be a very practical garden center. The bucket may be planted with flowers or the artificial variety may be used.

Whenever you have an informal outdoor party, the well makes a novel and ideal centerpiece from which refreshments may be served. The old oaken bucket (pictured here with flowers) makes a dandy container for ice. The ledge around the edge may be used for hors d'oeuvres, beverages, glasses and things of that kind.

The full-size pattern lists the necessary materials along with step-by-step directions and photographs showing all steps in building. The well shown was made of standard lumber sizes available from all lumber dealers. Redwood or red cedar are recommended; they require practically no maintenance over the years.

To obtain the wishing well pattern No. 371, send $1.50 (add 25¢ for postage and handling or 50¢ for airmail) by cash, check or money order to:

Your Nurseryman Speaks

The Lily's Easter Lesson

Today is Easter. For Christians, this is, in essence, a festival of life — ever-renewing, ever-regenerate, everlasting.

In this celebration, one flower plays an important traditional role This is the Easter lily (lilium longiflorum).

In recent years, it's been fairly well established that plants not only have feelings, but also the beginnings of a very crude, primitive thinking apparatus.

If that Easter lily in the church sanctuary could speak, what would it say?

First, it would point out that plants can most assuredly relate to the harrowing experience that Jesus Christ went through.

In summer, a plant receives nourishment, warmth and acceptance from its environment (this is Palm Sunday relived.) Then, with the arrival of autumn, this support is, little by little, withdrawn.

The sun, source of all energy, comes around less often. Since it's moving farther away, its rays are less comforting. In fact, for reasons impossible for the plant to understand, it now finds that its very life is threatened.

When the warm refreshing zephyrs of summer have been replaced by the bitter cruel winds of winter, the plant must say to itself, "What have I done that this should be visited upon me? What great crime did I commit that I should suffer like this? Why? Why? Why?"

The plant feels no spikes. It does not hear the jeers from Calvary's crowd, but it does suffer the worst of all possible hurts —REJECTION.

In its tiny, little world, it no longer has worth. Its friends, the sun, the rain, the soil, have, for no discernible reason, seemingly turned away leaving it with the excruciating agony of lonesomeness

That plant now understands the central lesson of the Crucifixion — the loneliness of the Cross — the death-like chill that comes when all have deserted you.

For the plant, winter is death — and obviously in Nebraska — much longer than three days.

Yet after this time of oblivion — of nothingness — the plant feels stirrings within itself. Its great friend, the sun, has returned. The warm rains of spring have come washings away the aches of winter.

The plant is now, once again, accepted by its environment. Life, in its annual battle against death, has emerged victorious. And another of a million billion miracles has been performed.

That Easter lily in that church sanctuary would no doubt conclude its little sermon by observing that in rejection is death — and that in acceptance is life.

And that man, since he's the most advanced of all life on this earth, has a special responsibility towards all the other life that surrounds him — whether it be plant — or animal — or other man.

INTEREST DOWN-COST UP

Are you waiting until interest rates drop before you buy a home? Do you think that this will save you money? The home you have your eye on will cost you more in monthly payments two years from now-even if the interest rate drops one percent.

For example, take a home that costs $25.000. With a 20% down payment and financed with a 25-year, 8½% mortgage, the monthly payment would be $161.00 plus taxes and insurance. But two years from now, if prices keep rising at the average rate, the now $25.000 home would likely cost $28.-000. If, miraculously, the interest rate decreased to 7½%, not only would the down payment be $600 more, but the monthly payment would increase to $165.54. If the interest rate stayed at 8½%, the payment would come to $180.32.

So, it's obvious that the overall value of the home-not the interest rate-makes the biggest impact on your monthly payment.

Social Security

Benefits Up 343%

There's real financial muscle in railroad and Social Security retirement benefits these days, according to Finance Facts, a newsletter of the National Consumer Finance Assn.

The purchasing power of a railroad retirement annuity in mid-1974 will be worth 80% more than at the end of 1950, and Social Security retirement benefits will be worth 125% more, the newsletter says.

The average railroad retirement benefit of $83.22 in 1950 increased 256% to $296.66 in 1973, according to the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board. The average Social Security benefit in 1950 was $45.67, and increased 343% to $202.26 in 1973. During the same period, the consumer price level increased by a smaller 85%.

NLRB Elections Up in '73 But 'Victories' Decline

During 1973, more National Labor Relations Board elections were held among white collar employes than in any other year, but both the number of elections won by unions and the number of employes organized fell short of 1972's record.

The Bureau of National Affairs Inc. notes that 1,031 elections were certified in previously unorganized white collar units in 1973. Unions won 548 elections in which 15,965 employes were eligible to vote, and were defeated in 483 units comprising 28,375 employes.

Comparable figures for 1972 were: 574 victories in units of 21,780 employes; 436 defeats in units of 26,000 employes.

'Many Only Short-term Loans to Beat Inflation'

In periods of high inflation, a firm should invest excess funds in short-term securities, says Dr. William Silber, economist for the National Association of Credit Management.

"How can the 'poor folks' who must get rid of excess funds in the credit market hedge against inflation?" he asks. "Forget the stock market, and make only very short-term loans.

"The rate of interest earned will compensate you for expected inflation." The price level (inflation) increased by 8.8% during 1973.

Business Notes

New Officer — Patrick Smythe has been named a Small Business Administration management assistance officer and will be responsible for instituting workshops and seminars for small businessmen in Nebraska. He will also direct a new counseling program called Small Business Institute, which utilizes the research talents of graduate business students in Nebraska colleges.

Seminar Set — The National Institute of Credit's Nebraska Chapter will sponsor a credit seminar — "Profitable Credit Management in Today's Business Environment" — at the Radisson Cornhusker April 25. It will be conducted by William H. Bassett Jr., assistant treasurer and corporate credit manager of Reynolds Metal Co., Richmond, Va.

Purchases Told — Nebraska residents purchased $68,692,825 of individual and group life insurance from New York Life Insurance Co. in 1973, according to Perry L. Strombeck CLU, general manager of the company's Lincoln general office. New York Life paid out $9,084,963 to Nebraska policyowners and their families in 1973.

Research Officer — Raymond Ashmun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Ashmun, 2640 Sewell, has been named market research officer for United States National Bank of Oregon. The statewide bank, with 130 branches, headquarters in Portland.

New Partner — H. Bruce Hamilton and Douglas K. German announce that John L. Robinson, a Lincoln city councilman, "has joined the law offices and legal clinic as a partner in the practice of law under the new name of Law Offices and Legal Clinic of Hamilton-German-Robinson", with law offices at 1030 Q and legal clinic at 122 No. 12th.

Expansion Told — The Omaha office of Bahr Hanna Vermeer and Haecker, Architects, is expanding and relocating its office to 535 Nebraska Savings Building in downtown Omaha. The firm also has a Lincoln office, at 1030 Q. James B. Hohenstein, a University of Nebraska graduate, has joined the firm.

Goldbugs and Silver: Epidemic?

By Gene Kelly

"It's the screwballs and the goldbugs who have been right." Take it from Nelson Bunker Hunt, multimillionaire son of Texas billionaire H. L. Hunt.

He means rampant inflation, dollar devaluation and gold selling at $150 an ounce, or more.

"Just about anything you buy, rather than paper (currency) is better," he told a commodities writer for Barron's Weekly. "You're bound to come out ahead, in the long pull. If you don't like gold, use silver, or diamonds, or copper, but something. Any damn fool can run a printing press." (To print more money, of course.)

Does the fact that gold is selling at about $170 an ounce mean that the prophets of gloom are right? Has today's rate of inflation — galloping along at between 8 and 10% — devalued the dollar so much that Americans are in the midst of a deep depression, that few are aware of?

Whoa. There are a good many Lincoln people around who would like to sell you gold mining stock, silver medallions or silver futures contracts. Speculative silver futures are traded on the New York Commodity Exchange (the Comex) and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Rampant suspicion of paper money has caused millions to be made and lost this spring in speculation. And although Americans can't legally buy gold bullion, you can easily invest in a South African mine through a local broker.

People like Hunt can apparently afford to gamble on the fluctuations of the precious metals market, in an effort to corner it. But can you?

Hunt reportedly owns about 20 million ounces of silver and may own contracts for as much as 27 million more. For these he apparently paid from $2 to $6.50 an ounce.

Can you afford that range of fluctuation? One of the big appeals of the glamour metals cult is the claim that they can be converted to cash (that's currency) instantly in almost any big bank — especially in western Europe. You would get, of course, the going price. That may be the tarnish on the gold, or silver.

For the Long Term?

Or is it? Should you invest in these shining commodities only for the long term? Only as a hedge against the destructive impact of inflation?

Consider the recent rapid rise and fall of silver prices: On Feb. 26 the New York price was $6.70 an ounce. The record that day was $6.77 in London. On Jan. 23 the domestic price was $3.76 for bullion.

"A lot of little people were talked into converting their savings at the height of the market," notes Budd Duvall of Lincoln, commodity market manager at First Mid America. "I know of one elderly couple who sold a farm and invested in silver coins. At today's open market prices, they may have blown 25-30% of their assets."

Despite Duvall's fears, the price being offered at Lincoln coin shops for silver dollars has remained near record levels. Depending on the amount of wear and the rarity of the coin, they're still bringing $3 to $4.40 each.

Before recent declines, the market experts were confused by the absence of profit-taking.

Perhaps silver is being bought more for the long term.

V. Robert Nilson, a Lincoln agent for Liberty Metals Inc., says that conservative hedging with silver is his philosophy. "The futures market is for the speculator.

"Although paper assets are tremendously vulnerable, I'd suggest no more than 10-15% of your investments be put into small silver pieces and metal currency."

Nilson sells medallions, limited edition commemoratives and small bars, "as protection devices . . . we're more concerned about insured delivery to the purchaser than the speculation aspect," he stresses.

A $50 Shoeshine

But he feels that "in times of inflation, people have a right to be suspicious of paper currency.

"I remember at the end of World War II, having to give $50 worth of paper money for a shoeshine on mainland China."

What can a potential investor in silver look for as a guarantee of quality and weight? "An assay mark from a Swiss refinery or an internationally-known hallmark," Nilson says.

Some pieces are serialized with certificates of ownership and origin.

Duvall, however, states flatly that "the ratholers who are hoarding bullion are finding out now that precious metals don't just keep rising in price.

"The real wealth of the U.S. is in the productivity of its people and the converting of its resources into something you can use.

"Hoarding never made a nation great. Storing things under the bed is a disservice to the nation. Money is only of value when it's in circulation, when it's working — not put out of commission in coins or bullion."

He asks rhetorically: "If silver is so valuable, why is a broker able to discount it 50% in offering to buy it from you or me? They're making one hell of a markup on the fears of people.

"So watch out for those ads that offer to buy your silver way below the New York price."

Check the current listings of Handy & Harman and Engelhard Minerals, this nation's leading refiners and distributors of precious metals, for such comparisons, he suggests.

Duvall said First Mid America doesn't buy or sell real silver, but does handle futures trading. "But I've never seen anything like this spring's silver fever."

'A Panicked Public'

Worldwide, the demand for silver vastly exceeds the supply, despite widespread reclamation of silver from industrial scrap. During the 60s the U.S. Treasury began to sell its huge stockpile of silver, eventually dumping more than two billion ounces of silver into the supply pipeline.

But many analysts say that it is primarily the sellers of silver who have generated higher prices and a frenzy of demand, not the normal industrial users.

Walter Frankland Jr., executive vice president of the Silver Users Assn., an industrial group based in Washington, D.C., is critical of "the exaggerations you see in the many silver sales ads" that have come from firms formed to sell high-priced silver bars and "baubles to a panicked public."

A major report on silver from Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith says silver prices probably will decline in the long run because "the dramatic price gains scored during early 1974 were prompted mostly by emotional and psychological considerations."

Merrill Lynch expects silver prices to run from $4 to $5 an ounce during the remainder of 1974 and into 1975.

Industrial users have cut back their silver use in some cases, and major consumers like Eastman Kodak have accelerated their search for alternate film materials, as prices have increased.

Another factor which may effect prices is the recent repeal of India's ban on silver exports. (Although it's been traditionally hoarded, there was a big market in smuggled bullion.)

And if the silver price stays about $4 an ounce, mines all over the world that were considered unprofitable will be worth the digging.

How to Guard Against Silver Fraud

How can the average consumer check on the reliability of someone who offers to sell silver currency or bullion?

If he claims to be a bonded representative of a firm, call his home office and check that angle.

Nebraska statutes do not specifically say that agents must register with the Banking Department's Bureau of Securities. This presents them and the consumer with a problem. The bureau does maintain investigation-complaint files that you can make inquiries about.

But if stock shares are being touted, registration is required at the state level.

The Denver Regional Office of the Securities and Exchange Commission has filed fraud charges against several companies this spring for selling silver bullion illegally.

If you have an inquiry, you can contact Donald J. Stocking, regional administrator, Securities and Exchange Commission, 7224 Federal Building, 1961 Stout St., Denver 80202.

Conventional Auto Needs New Power Source

Alternate Engines Real, But Years Away

By Dan Jedlicka

(c) 1973, Chicago Sun-Times

The conventional auto engine, which has powered cars since they were invented, must be replaced.

It no longer can meet federal antipollution standards without costly bolt-on devices including catalytic mufflers which have questionable long-term durability. They will cause engines to consume far too much fuel at a time when energy resources are dwindling and also cause severe "driveability" problems such as stalling and lame throttle response.

Fortunately, there are alternate types of engines for powering cars that can be substituted for the conventional engine, although one would be suffering from severe myopia to think that any of them suddenly can be thrust beneath hoods of American cars.

Detroit manufactures millions of autos annually, and, put simply, it is not feasible for giant automakers, working largely with money from shareholders and on a long "lead time" basis, to equip all its cars with a radical new power plant.

Thus we see the gradual phasing in by General Motors Corp. of one of the alternate engines — the Wankel rotary engine. It will appear in some 1975 GM Vega subcompact models.

Besides the Wankel, alternate power plants are: the diesel; the gas turbine; the steam engine; the Stirling-cycle engine; the electric engine and the stratified charge engine — which also is rather frighteningly called the compound vortex controlled combustion (CVCC) engine.

Other engines you may have heard about are, under close examination, utterly impractical considering their mass production. Many are as silly as the "200 mile-per-gallon carburetor."

A shorthand summary of these alternate engines should be beneficial because one then has a glimmering of what might be powering his future car — though "future" is a word which, in the context of this article, is difficult at the moment to define. The Environmental Protection Agency last April granted American producers of cars sold in the U.S. more time to meet the strict 1975 federal auto pollution standards which called for near-elimination of hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emmissions from cars.

Postponements

The 1976 federal standards call for almost complete elimination of nitrogen oxides from auto exhausts, but even the EPA is seriously questioning the reasons for severely trimming these emissions.

Most automakers aren't happy with EPA's interim 1975 standards, so it's possible that they will push for further postponements, delays that could keep the conventional engine with us that much longer — partly because Detroit has a small fortune tied up in conventional engine tooling.

Despite delays, the conventional engine still must go. The best bets for its replacement are the Wankel rotary engine, which for years has been powering the Japanese Mazda auto, and the stratified charge engine, which may be put in a 1974 Japanese Honda subcompact auto called the Civic.

Mazda says its engine will comply with the original 1975 clean air act emission standards without the use of catalysts or the need for unleaded gasoline. The stratified charge (CVL) engine also has a good chance of meeting the 1975 standards without the use of catalysts.

GM is laying out $50 million for the rights to put the Wankel in its cars and, with about one-third the parts, one-half the size and one-half the weight of a comparable piston engine, it's an attractive package.

But the Wankel is a radical engine, compared with the CVCC. The latter engine is quite similar to a conventional engine, while the Wankel has no pistons, valves or camshafts — just rotors spinning like a top inside combustion chambers.

The big difference between a stratified charge engine and a conventional power plant is that the stratified charge engine sports a precombustion chamber for each cylinder. The normal engine has no such chamber. The precombustion chamber in the stratified charge engine guarantees that fuel is burned as completely as possible, minimizing hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions. At the same time, the combustion process cuts over-all combustion temperatures, reducing oxides of nitrogen.

Stratified Charge

The similarity between a stratified charge engine and a conventional engine might have been what prompted Lee Iacocca, Ford Motor Co.'s president, to state that Ford would make a commitment immediately to put an alternate engine — "some variant of the stratified-charge engine" — into production "as soon as possible" if the government establishes a less stringent standard for oxides of nitrogen emissions.

It should be noted that Ford has no Wankel engine program comparable to GM's program. So it makes sense that GM isn't all that enthusiastic about the stratified charge engine, compared with the Wankel. William G. Agnew, technical director-engineering research for GM's research laboratories, noted that the Honda's CVCC engine may be fine for powering a small Honda car and that "this engine technology appears to be applicable to Vega-size (subcompact) cars (but) it is not known whether" the stratified charge engine could meet 1975 emission requirements "in average-size production U.S. cars."

Despite all this, Honda is said to have taken a large GM car and successfully converted its engine to a stratified charge design.

Considering fuel economy, the Stirling-cycle engine, which also has drawn much interest from Ford, is the most enticing power plant. It delivers more mileage than a Wankel, can burn various fuels (liquid or gaseous), is smooth running and gives instant throttle response.

Stocks Lower in Light Trading

By LEE MITGANG
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — With rising interest rates looming larger as a market depressant, stock prices moved lower last holiday-shortened week in very light trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.73 to 844.81, indicative of the noncommittal attitude most investors have taken, faced with a 10 per cent prime lending rate, rising short-term money market rates, inflation, and the growing possibility President Nixon may face impeachment.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index declined 0.89 to 92.12. There were 1,126 losers, 592 gainers among the 1,956 stocks across the tape.

The week's sales totaled 43,190,040 shares, compared with 58,298,010 a week earlier, and with 76,173,505 shares the year before. On Thursday, trading dwindled to its lowest level since last August, totaling only 9,970,000 shares.

The nation's securities exchanges were closed Friday in observance of the Good Friday holiday.

The move by major banks raising their prime lending rates to the record-equalling 10 per cent level held the spotlight throughout the week. On Monday, Bankers Trust of New York kicked off the increase, and the Dow reacted with its biggest loss of the week—7.58 points.

The 10 per cent prime began to spread among the nation's lending institutions Tuesday, but the stock market enjoyed its best day of the week. The Dow rose nearly seven points, but there was little conviction behind the advances, as gainers just barely outnumbered losers, and sales totaled about 11 million shares.

In the last two sessions, investors sat on their hands, and the market showed little movement as Wall Street wondered whether a continued rise in short-term money rates would force the nation's banks to boost the interest rate charged to best business customers past the record 10 per cent level.

Many analysts, including Larry Wachtel of Bache & Co., expressed the fear that, if the prime moved beyond the current 10 per cent, "the stock market will crack."

Inflation also kept investors sidelined. On Tuesday, budget director Roy Ash said—to no one's surprise—that the first quarter inflation rate will be "considerably higher" than 1973's five per cent overall rate.

And on Thursday, the House Judiciary Committee and President Nixon appeared headed for a showdown, The House unit subpoenaed 41 taped conversations concerning the Watergate affair, and failure to comply with the order could lead to Nixon's impeachment.

Stocks whose operations include Canadian mining were sold heavily, following a decision Wednesday by the Canadian government raising mineralization taxes in the province of Ontario. Dome Mines plunged 21, Campbell Red Lake 14¼, and Texasgulf, Inc. 3½.

Texasgulf's losses occurred despite news the company earned 85 cents a share in the first quarter, compared with 29 cents the same period the previous year.

Burroughs tumbled 11⅝, with investors apparently unimpressed by the company's first quarter results. Burroughs earned 55 cents a share in the period, compared with last year's 43 cents.

Mountain Fuel Supply advanced 6⅝. On Monday, the firm said it discovered oil and noncombustible gas at its Brady unit well No. 9. 14 in Wyoming.

Walt Disney slumped 4⅞. Early in the week, a Wall Street columnist cited analysts' fears Disney might report lower earnings for the year ending Sept. 30. On Wednesday, the company said second quarter earnings totaled 32 cents a share, against 36 cents in the comparable period last year.

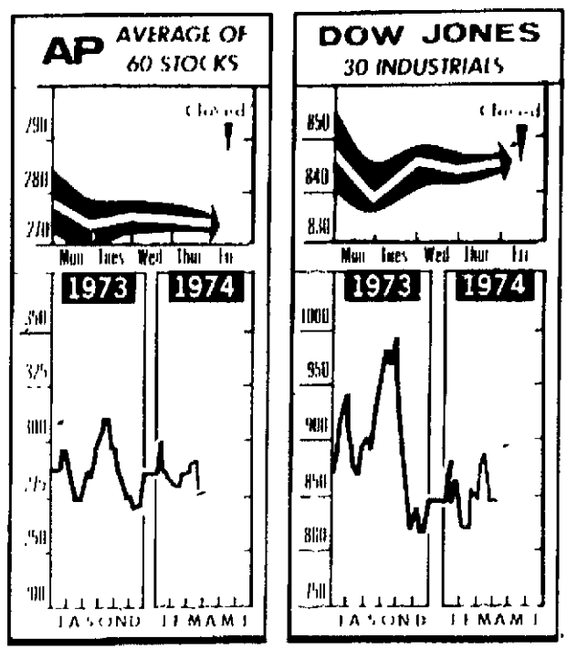
Natomas, a firm involved in oil and natural gas production, said Wednesday first quarter earnings soared to $3.18 a share, up from one cent the comparable period in 1973. The stock climbed 4⅝ on the week.

IBM reported its net income grew by 26.8 per cent in the first quarter but, in the market's current mood, the Big Board's premier glamor fell 4.

Economy Is 'Basically Sound'

(c) New York Times

New York — The embattled American economy emerged from this year's puzzling and traumatic first quarter with more scars than expected as well as some rather surprising accomplishments. The general economy appears to be basically sound at this point, though not yet quite ready to stage that significant rebound the economists have been predicting after its brief period of negative real growth.



The stock market, as measured by the averages, turned in a slight decline in slow trading last week.

The government's preliminary estimate of what happened in the economy during the first three months of 1974 will be made public during the coming week, and it will undoubtedly show that business activity, in the aggregate, followed a recessionary path.

On the basis of an advance indication by Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, the upcoming economic report will reveal that the United States' Gross National Product fell by "more than 5%" at an annual rate during the first quarter.

At the same time, he suggested, inflation was running at 10% or more, a sharp upturn from the elevated 8.8% annual rate that prevailed in the final three months of last year.

The overall inflation figure is hardly surprising in the light of previous monthly reports on the high rates of wholesale and consumer prices for the first quarter, but since no monthly figures are made public by government agencies on the total GNP the estimate for real growth is slightly surprising. Most private economists had been calculating it in the area of minus 3 to minus 4½% after its tiny 1.6 (plus) growth in the fourth quarter of last year.

On March 22, for instance, Chase Econometric Associates, which tracks the economy monthly, had estimated the overall inflation rate at 3.3% for the first quarter. It had figured the period's total GNP at an annual rate of $1,356,000,000,000 in current dollars, indicating a rise of only $18.5 billion from last year, an inflation rate of almost 9% and negative real growth of 3.3%.

Other aspects of the first quarter's performance that produced some surprises were:

The depth of the impact from the energy shortage on automotive production and sales.

The conservation achieved in oil and electricity consumption, which also pulled down total economic activity.

The limited impact of energy stringency elsewhere in the economy.

The stability of the unemployment rate in the face of those restrictions.

The sharp rebound in housing.

The renewed upward surge in interest rates, which is still unchecked and causing disarray in the bond market.

The huge rise in business loans at the major banks.

The wide variation (gains and declines) in corporate profits.

On the basis of early reports and the factors that have been affecting the economy, it is likely that oil, metal, heavy-equipment and forest product industries, as well as financial corporations, will show substantially larger earnings than in last year's solid first quarter, while auto, retail and some consumer-product companies will not fare too well. Rising costs, shortages of materials, declining productivity and the effects of the energy situation will be reflected in many lines.

What is also disturbing is that there has probably been an 8% decline in real retail sales (subtracting for the effects of inflation) and a 6% decline in the real disposable income of workers during the first quarter.

Another highly disconcerting fact is the continuing high level of inflation in the economy. As economist Leif Olsen of First National City Bank put it the other day: "There's a lot of foam and not enough real liquid in the economy these days."

There has been wide disappointment that more inflation was not wrung from the economy in this period of reduced growth. The current period is a rather unique one in postwar economic history in that the contraction now underway does not result from any relapse in total demand but rather from deficiency of supply — in fuel, food and other materials — touched off by the economic boom here and throughout the industrialized world in recent years.

Kiffin Fires Up 'Black Shirts,' Humm Sparks Offense

Big Plays Key NU Scrimmage

By Virgil Parker

Long bomb touchdowns and goal line stands highlighted a spirited and hard-hitting scrimmage at Memorial Stadium Saturday afternoon which climaxed the second week of spring football practice for coach Tom Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers.

The Dave Humm directed first offense opened the two and a half hour session against the second defense, scoring on two of three possessions.

After I-back Jeff Moran and fullback Tony Davis picked up nine yards on the first two plays. Humm ran eight yards on a keeper before hitting split end Dave Shamblin with a 42-yard touchdown toss

A 15-yard pass from Humm to Davis got a second drive going, but Jim Burrows picked off a Humm aerial intended for split end Bobby Thomas.

A third try was climaxed by a 23-yard scoring strike from Humm to wingback Don Westbrook.

When the first offense went against the 'Black Shirt' defensive starters it was a different story, however.

Linebacker Bob Nelson made a great play to break up a third-down pass intended for Moran on the first possession.

On the next try — the offense got the ball at its own 40 each time — Humm directed his club to an apparent first down on the three yard line, but defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin — firing up his 'Black Shirts' on every play — talked the officials into saying the fourth-down play had fallen short — without a measurement.

The march of 57 yards was highlighted by a 17-yard pass from Humm to Shamblin and five carries by I-back John O'Leary, who took over for Moran.

On the final possession, Humm hit Thomas for a 35-yard gain, but the defense stiffened to prevent a touchdown.

"You saw some terrific defense from those first two units," Kiffin declared. "There was some real hitting."

Humm, who broke a blood vessel in his right forearm when tackled on a keeper play, agreed.

"All our scoring and long gains came on big pass plays," he recalled. "We want to get more consistent on making short, steady gains right down the field. We should be able to work it in when we get down close. But both sides were really fired up There was a lot of hard hitting out there."

Though disappointed in not scoring from close in, Osborne pointed out that the offense hasn't yet worked against a goal line defense.

"We would like to jam it in when we get down close," the head man admitted, "but we haven't worked against some of the things the defense was doing down there near the goal line."

Osborne expressed pleasure in the job of the first offense and the first three defensive units, but was less than cheerful about the inconsistency of the second and third offenses.

"It's obvious that we have some fine players down on those second and third defensive teams," he noted, "but the offenses couldn't keep anything going."

Earl Everett took over the signal calling duties with the second group followed by Randy Garcia, Glen Ray, Terry Luck and Ed Burns were with three later units.

"Everett runs real well and Garcia did some good passing," Osborne noted, "but Earl needs to improve his throwing and Garcia has things to learn. Burns and Luck did some good things too, but were inconsistent."

Osborne called Humm "the only Big Eight caliber quarterback we've got right now. He's the only one you'd want out there if we had to play a league game tomorrow.

Garcia did connect to Chuck Malito with a 41-yarder and pitched a strike to Tim Lackovic for 21 more.

One of the offensive highlights from the lower units was the running of I-back Dave Gillespie. The sophomore speedster rambled for 15 yards through the first defense on one occasion and gained 19 more on a later try.

"He has good speed," Osborne acknowledged, "but he needs to learn when to run around people and when to try to smash through them. Sometimes he's dancing when he ought to be drilling."

Osborne pointed to the play of linebackers Bob Nelson, Tom Ruud and John Starkebaum while praising the defense.

In reviewing the question mark middle guard spot, Jeff Pullen and John Lee drew special mention.

Defensive tackles Ron Pruitt and Stan Waldemore made their presence known and in addition to Burrows, Dave Butterfield and Steve Markus picked off a pass while patroling in the secondary.

"You'd have to call it a good scrimmage," Osborne admitted. "There were fewer mistakes than we've had previously and there were no serious injuries."

Frontline performers who missed the session because of previous injuries were middle guard Willie Thornton, defensive tackle George Mills and wingback Ritch Bahe. All are expected to be back in action this week.

The Huskers will work out four times each week (Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday), with scrimmage action on the menu each Wednesday and Saturday.

The 20-session spring practices conclude with the annual Red-White game on Saturday, May 4.

Fonner Wins to Andrullah, Bet's Robin Jac

By Mark Gordon

Grand Island — Andrullah and Bet's Robin Jac employed different methods to achieve similar goals here Saturday afternoon at Fonner Park.

While Bobby Crowder's Andrullah rallied from off the pace, James A. Woodward's Bet's Robin Jac led throughout to capture the split divisions of the 12th running of the Fonner Mile.

"That was my biggest win on him," noted jockey Tom Greer after steering Andrullah to his third straight Fonner triumph in the first division. "I just rode him the way I thought was best. Just as we came to the far turn, I started to let him run a little.

"It's hard to get a horse on the lead to relax," he added. "I like to lay off the pace a couple of seconds . . . but not too long since it can cost you the race."

As it was, Andrullah scored a head verdict over D. R. Coberly's Maskyourmanners, who was another half-length over the pacesetting Pro Raja, who finished third after tiring near the wire.

Andrullah came six horses wide in his closing bid after Greer saved as much ground as possible through much of the chase run in a 1:41 4-5 clocking over a track listed as fast.

"I thought the five and the seven (Maskyourmanners and Pro Raja) were the two horses I had to outrun," Greer said. "He's (Andrullah) a great horse and I really like him."

Greer, making his first non-Arizona racing appearance in only his second year of racing, said that his three-win streak on Andrullah is his first "streak."

"That's right in there as far as being my biggest win," says the native of St. John's, Ariz. "This is the first time I've been away from Arizona. I sort of came out here on a longshot since I didn't know if I was going to get very many horses."

As the fourth betting choice of the crowd of 7,246, Andrullah earned $2,500 of the $5,000 purse for his Byro, Okla. owner, He returned $10 60, $4 80 and $4.40.

Maskyourmanners, who scored his second place-effort in three outings this season, returned $5.20 and $4.00 while Pro Raja, who edged Ben's Whiz for third by a nose, showed for $4.80.

In the second division, Bet's Robin Jac upset favored Stumpy The Boy by one-half length and earned jockey Eddie Werre a new hat.

"I told him (Werre) if he won for me, I'd get him a new hat," said Woodward. "He was exercising her in real cold weather when she first came here (to Grand Island) in January. He was wearing a real battered hat.

"What kind am I going to get him," he asked. "Whatevers the best."

The race, run in 1:40 2-5, materialized almost as Woodward said he had predicted with O.J. Becker's Union Grey providing the stiffest challenge to the winning mare.

"She (Bet's Robin Jac) likes to run in front," Woodward said. "I thought Union Grey would be the toughest Don't get me wrong, I knew Stumpy The Boy would be strong, too."

Like the first division, the second division was also a tight finish. Stumpy The Boy turned back Real Style by a head.

Bet's Robin Jac, who tallied his first victory this season after two seconds in four cuts, returned $9.00, $3.80 and $3.20 as second betting choice. Stumpy The Boy placed for $3.20 and $2 80 while Real Style showed for $3.80.

Woodward said he was afraid when Bet's Robin Jac was hard-pressed throughout by Union Grey that a repeat of last summer's Executive Board Handicap at Lincoln's State Fairgrounds was forthcoming.

In that race, Bet's Robin Jac finally turned back the challenge of Terrage, but then tired trying to defeat the eventual winner of the mile and 1 16th chase, Swift Capture.

"Sure, I was afraid the same thing might happen, but it didn't," Woodward said.

Two accidents, neither of which proved to be serious, marred the program

In the first race, jockey Jim Bazer was thrown off his mount, Funny Stone, around the first turn of the 6-furlong scamper. Although Bazer did not take any of his future scheduled mounts, he sustained only minor injuries

Dave King was tossed off his mount, Jen Mae, in the starting gate of the fourth race although he declined to ride her (she eventually won), he accepted his remaining mounts after suffering only minor bruises

King, who is gradually increasing his lead in the jockey standings, scored three victories He won with Clark Eudson's Little Sac ($7 80) in the first and J O Hill's Quinnimont ($22 80 in the sixth

He was boosted into the win position in the third race when stewards disqualified House Speaker from first to third and placed second-place Perhaps A Tease into the winner's position

Spassky Gains Tourney Win

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R (AP) — Boris Spassky defeated Anatoly Karpov Saturday to take a 1-0 lead in their semifinal match of the World Challengers tournament.

Spassky, seeking another shot at the world championship he lost to American Bobby Fischer, forced the 22-year-old Karpov to resign on the 64th move.

In the other semifinal played in Odessa, Viktor Korchnoi mated Tigran Petrosyan on the 36th move to take a 1-0 lead. They meet again Monday with Petrosyan playing white.

Stockton Holds Off Challenge

Player's Charge Falls Short

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Dave Stockton has handled the challenges of Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead and he's cooly confident he can find the answer to Gary Player's bid for the 1974 Masters crown.

"I've got everything together," Stockton said Saturday after his two-under-par 70 was good enough to stand off a brilliant drive by Player in the third round of the famed golf tournament that ranks among the world's premier sports events.

"I'm playing good enough to win," Stockton insisted. "The only thing I'm concerned about is playing the course."

Stockton met Palmer in a head-to-head confrontation for the 1970 PGA national title. And he won. Just three months ago Snead tried some gamesmanship with one hole to go in the Los Angeles Open.

"You know," Snead, who had just birdied the 17th, observed to Stockton, "I birdied the last two holes here in 1950 to beat (Ben) Hogan."

Stockton replied with what he called "my career shot," a three wood out of the rough that set up a winning birdie.

Now it's Player, winner of more than 90 international titles and one of only four men to sweep the game's Big Four titles, who's threatening the master putter from Westland, Calif.

Player's driving, dramatic finish Saturday fell just short of a share of first place and Stockton buoyed by some early heroics, managed to retain a one stroke lead.

Player, the muscular little Black Knight from South Africa, birdied five holes in a row in his challenge over the back nine, put together a brilliant, six-under-par 66 and moved to within a single stroke of the lead.

He may have had that but for a tragedy while he was lining up the potential tying putt on the final hole.

A spectator collapsed and died of a heart attack.

"It was a very bad feeling," Player said. "He fell on the ground and was breathing very badly and people were screaming for an ambulance.

"It was scary.

"I didn't know whether to putt or wait or what to do."

He missed the putt and finished at 208, eight under par and one behind Stockton.

Stockton, the second-round leader, pitched in for an eagle three on the second hole, once held a four-stroke lead and finished with a 70 and sole control of the top spot at 207.

Jim Colbert, the chipper little journeyman who led the first round, birdied three of four holes at one stretch over the back nine and, with a 69, tied Player for second going into the last round of this chase for the famed green jacket.

Northeast Tops Lincoln Meet Field

Team Scoring

LNE	129	GI	75
East	90	LSE	39
LHS	87	Beatrice	24
South	80

By Steve Gillispie

Using balance Lincoln Northeast had little trouble Saturday afternoon at East's Stuart Stadium in winning the Lincoln Invitational Boys Track Meet.

The Rockets of coach Max Hester scored 129 points with the host Spartans second with 90, Lincoln High third with 87, Omaha South fourth with 80, Grand Island fifth with 75, Lincoln Southeast sixth with 39 and Beatrice seventh with 24.

Although several meet records were broken, only three were allowed because of the excessive winds.

Northeast's two-mile relay team of Steve Leach, Burt Thompson, Dennis Luft and Gary Gustafson won in 8:26.0 to better the old mark of 8:26.1 set by a Grand Island team two years ago.

The Links' Jerry Kletchka won the 440 in :50.9 to break the old mark of :51.0 set by Northeast's Alan Belka in 1972.

The Rockets' mile relay team of Mike Kubes, Craig Mundt, Chuck Sales and Terry Novak, won in 3:31.1 to better the old mark of 3:31.3 by a Hastings' foursome in 1971.

Kletchka was one of three individual double winners in the meet as he also won the 880 in 2:02.5.

One of the best individual efforts of the meet came from East's Doug Caulkins who won the 100 in :09.6 and the 220 in :22.0.

Caulkins won the preliminary heat in the 220 in :21.8, but all his times in the springs were run when the wind was above the allowable limit.

The other double winner in the meet was Northeast's Gary Stansbury who won the long jump with leap of 22-3 and triple jump at 43-2.

Stansbury and South's Greg Yates had identical jumps of 22-3, but Stansbury had a better second mark.

"We scored well except in the springs," Hester said of the Rockets' win. "We also had some good outstanding individual efforts, which were a little surprising."

Hester was referring to Jon Leastman's third place finish in the shot put, Gustafson anchoring the winning two-mile relay team after a half hour rest from placing fourth in the 880 and sophomore Scott Resz coming from behind to win the mile.

On The Track

Sports Signals

Money talks!

That's why the new World Football League has been making the headlines with its player raids on the established National Football League

And, even though there are some skeptics around the NFL, it's clear now there's a real war on for talent to fill the rosters of the new league.

This war is taking off in a different way than in 1960 when the American Football League got started

The AFL chose to try to sign mostly rookies who had just completed their collegiate eligibility and the plan was a success. That first year the new league signed the entire All-American backfield of the previous fall.

Going For Superstar

The WFL, however, is going for the superstar, the big names, to help bolster what undoubtedly will be weak attendance at the start.

Established stars cost money, but apparently there is plenty of that available by the franchise holders in the WFL. If not, the bankruptcy courts are going to be busy in short order.

It has been estimated that each team will have to draw around 30,000 paying fans a game to break even Based on the planned $7.50 ticket price, a 75-25 split to the home team, and a 20-game schedule (10 at home), the gross take would be around $2,250,000

One club, the Chicago Fire, estimates its cost of operation will be about $2 million. With a gross just a quarter of a million dollars more than that, it's obvious 30,000 fans a game wouldn't pay the expenses.

The answer, of course, is a lucrative television contract That's the thing that put the NFL on easy street, but right now all the WFL has in potential TV money is between $80,000 and $100,000 for each team a year. It's contract is with TVS, an independent company.

A 'plus' for the new league is that it plans to play its games on Thursday nights between July 10 and Nov. 28. That means prime TV time will have to be cleared if there is to be enough exposure to make it attractive enough for potential sponsors.

To Boost Fan Interest?

Whatever happens, the WFL might be a big boost to fan interest. With the talent diluted all over, games aren't likely to be as technically good in either league, but the average fan won't know the difference Goodness knows, the NFL has gotten so perfect in all aspects that most games are boring to watch

Sid Gillman, general manager and coach of pro football's worst team (Houston Oilers), doubts there is enough talent to go around. Maybe that's because his team has very little of it

"I don't think there's a guy left who can play in the country," Gillman told the Associated Press last week. "I feel the country has been saturated cleaned out"

Gillman could be right, but like I said, diluted talent might make for a more interesting game for the fans.

This was the case when the AFL got off the ground There were some wild and wooly games and when the fans started watching them on television they realized it was exciting and started buying tickets

So, the real key is a television contract that comes close to bringing in the kind of money the NFL is getting In the meantime, the battle will be interesting to sit back and watch

Cyclones Sweep Two From NU

REGIONAL

Ames, Iowa (AP) — First baseman Don McClannahan had five hits and drove in four runs as Iowa State swept a Big Eight baseball doubleheader from Nebraska 4-0 and 10-3 Saturday.

McClannahan homered for the Cyclones in the opener to help right hander Jerry Winter to the victory. Winter allowed just three hits.

McClannahan had a single, run-scoring double and two-run triple in the nightcap. Third baseman Mike Curran contributed a two-run double during the Cyclones' four-run first inning

The swept left Iowa State with a 4-4 conference record and 10-8 season mark. Nebraska fell to 0-8 in conference action and 4-17 over all.

The two teams have a 1.30 p m single game scheduled Sunday

Kansas Whips Cowboys

Lawrence, Kan (AP) — Upstart Kansas pinned a critical Big Eight baseball loss on Oklahoma State Saturday, whipping the Cowboys 4-1 in the rubber game of their three-game weekend series

The loss dropped Oklahoma State's conference record to six victories and three losses and put the Cowboys two full games behind Oklahoma at the top of the standings. Kansas is three and six in the Big Eight.

Oklahoma State went to work quickly, getting to Kurt Knoff for one run on Gary Brandenburg's walk. Dan Massari's single to right and a deep sacrifice fly off the bat of Dan Burns. After that, the Cowboys left eight runners stranded

Besides yielding only six hits. Knoff also played a key role in three of the four Kansas runs.

In the second inning he walked, went to second on Mike DePlue's sacrifice and scored on the mishandling of Carl Heinrich's single Heinrich got to third on an error and scored on a fielder's choice.

In the fifth, Knoff's triple scored Alan Whitfield, who had singled Knoff then scored on a wild pitch

Buffs Hit K-State

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Colorado capitalized on five Kansas State errors to whip the Wildcats 4-1 Saturday and sweep their three-game Big Eight weekend baseball series.

Three of the Buffaloes' four runs were unearned. Colorado now stands 13-11 over-all and 4-5 in the conference. Kansas State is 14-13 and 5-4.

Bob Nickeson and Dave Singles hit singles to score Colorado's two runs in the fourth, and both Buffalo scores in the ninth were unearned on three Wildcat bobbles.

Colorado Relays Canceled

Boulder, Colo. (UPI) — A wet clinging snowstorm swept through Saturday morning and dropped 12 inches of snow, forcing cancellation of the 50th annual Colorado Relays.

"Back in the early days they might have had some problems but I can't remember anything like this before," said Colorado track coach Don Meyers, host of the meet which had 14 colleges and 64 high schools entered

"It's shaping up pretty well out here right now but this morning it was just plain ungodly," said Meyers. "We had to make an early decision so we could get the word out to area schools that were going to drive up for the meet We're exploring rescheduling the meet but can't say anything for sure"

Meyers said he would check with the Colorado High School Activities Association on possible dates for the prep events Monday but was not optimistic about still holding the meet

Among the schools entered were eastern New Mexico, which was expected to battle Colorado for the team title. New Mexico State and Oklahoma Christian

Sooners Win Hit Carnival

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma and Missouri stroked 43 hits Saturday in the last of their three-game weekend series, but the Big Eight Conference-leading Sooners prevailed, 17-14

Oklahoma, improving its conference position with an 8-1 record while second-place Oklahoma State lost to Kansas, was leading Missouri, 12-2, going into the bottom of the eighth inning The Tigers rallied for eight runs on seven hits and two Oklahoma errors, making it 12-10 as the Sooners came to bat for the last time

In their half of the ninth, Oklahoma got five more runs

The Oklahoma lineup was led by five batters with three hits each First baseman Kelly Snider had five runs-batted-in

For Missouri freshman Mark Thiel also had five RBI's, coming on two homers and a double

Montreal Splits Twin Bill

By Associated Press

Big innings were the order of baseball's day Saturday—eight-run innings for the Montreal Expos and Cleveland Indians, six runs for the Boston Red Sox and a pair of four-run frames for the Texas Rangers.

Ron Fairly's fifth career grand slam home run climaxed Montreal's eight-run fourth inning that gave the Expos a 13-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs and a split of a doubleheader. Billy Williams homered and doubled, pacing the Cubs' 7-4 triumph in the first game.

Dave Duncan touched off an eight-run third inning with a home run and later added a r u n-scoring single, pacing Cleveland to an 8-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

Designated hitter Tommy Harper triggered a six-run first inning with a leadoff double and the Boston Red Sox went on to an 8-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers as Rick Wise pitched a six-hitter in his American League debut.

Texas pounded Oakland's Vida Blue for seven runs in 1 13 innings, three on a homer by Jeff Burroughs, and coasted to a 10-3 victory over the A's. Tom Grieve added a two-run homer for the Rangers while Oakland's Gene Tenace hit two solo shots off Jim Bibby.

In other American League contests, Milwaukee nipped Baltimore 3-2, and Kansas City got by Minnesota 6-5. In the National League, St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh 6-4, and the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies were rained out

Teenage shortstop Robin Yount, whose error allowed Baltimore to tie the score in the top of the eighth, cracked his first major league home run in the bottom half of the inning, helping the Brewers past Baltimore.

Vada Pinson's two-out single in the 10th inning gave the Kansas City Royals a close victory over the Twins. Paul Schaal's two-run homer tied the game for the Royals in the seventh.

Reggie Smith and Joe Torre scored when an attempted double play throw went wild in the sixth inning, carrying the St. Louis Cardinals past Pittsburgh, the sixth consecutive loss for the winless Pirates.

The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Houston Astros 6-3, and Atlanta routed Cincinnati 10-3 in night games.

Dave Lopes and Bill Buckner each drove in two runs in a five-run fourth-inning that carried the Dodgers past Houston in a National League contest. Dodger starter Don Sutton, after a shaky start, settled down to register his third consecutive victory.

Dave Johnson slammed a three-run homer, Marty Perez and Mike Lum each added solo blasts, and Ralph Garr drove in four runs with a double and triple in Atlanta's romp. The Braves got 13 hits in the in the NL contest and Carl Morton picked up the victory with relief help from Jack Aker in the ninth.

In West Coast night action, San Francisco was at San Diego and the Chicago White Sox were at California.

Sheppard Sparks Bruins

Toronto (UPI) — Second-year center Gregg Sheppard continued his splendid playoff play Saturday night, scoring a pair of second period goals and setting up linemate Johnny Bucyk for another to lead the Boston Bruins to a 6-3 NHL playoff victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The win gave the Bruins a commanding 3-0 edge in the best-of-seven quarterfinal, with the fourth game to be played in Toronto Sunday night

The Bruins' other goals came from Andre Savard, Wayne Cashman and Bobby Schmautz while Bob Neely, Darryl Sittler and Eddie Shack were the Leafs' scorers. Rookie Neely also picked up a pair of assists.

The Leafs grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first period when Neely took Tim Ecclestone's pass and let a slap shot go from outside the blue line which seemed to hit Bruin defenseman Darryl Edestrand, change direction and sneak past the outstretched glove of Gilles Gilbert in the Bruin cage.

In the second period, the Bruins took advantage of many Toronto defensive lapses to score four straight goals before Sittler beat Gilbert with 30 seconds left in the period, once again from a long shot.

Sittler was the victim of the Bruins' tying goal at 1 59 when he tried to head off Savard as he broke in on net and instead kicked the goal past goaltender Eddie Johnston.

Sheppard, who had scored only 16 goals during the regular season, notched his fourth goal in three games with a pair of tallies from in front of the net and then took advantage of an errant Jim McKenney pass to set up linemate Bucyk who drove a shot in off Ecclestone's skate. It was the second time a Leaf had scored on his own net

Cleveland Tops Toros

Cleveland (UPI) — Defenseman Wayne Muloin scored his first goal of the playoffs at 4:17 of sudden death overtime Saturday night to give the Cleveland Crusaders a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Toros and their first win in the WHA playoffs

The series now shifts to Toronto Monday night where the Toros, who lead 3-1 in games, can wrap up the quarterfinal series

Brian Gibbons opened the scoring for Toronto midway in the first period with a long shot and Cleveland took a 2-1 lead on second period goals by Russ Walker and Ron Ward, the latter on a power play.

Tom Martin tied the game with a rebound with 4 55 left to play in regulation time. The teams set a playoff record with 239 minutes in penalties during their four games as referee Bill Friday called 16 minor and four major penalties.

Aeros Rip Winnipeg

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston center Larry Lund scored four goals, two in the first period and two more in the third period, to lead the Aeros to a 10-1 blitz of the Winnipeg Jets Saturday night and a 3-0 lead in their World Hockey Association quarter-final playoffs

The Aeros could eliminate the Jets with another victory Sunday night in their best-of-seven series

The winner of the Aeros-Jets series will play the winner of the Minnesota-Edmonton series for the WHA Western Division championship

Lund, the Aeros' No 2 scorer behind Gordie Howe in the regular season, helped Houston break away in the free swinging first period in which two players drew five-minute fighting penalties and one received a 10-minute misconduct penalty

A fight broke out only 31 seconds into the game with Houston's John Schella and Winnipeg's Danny Johnson going to the penalty box for fighting The Jets' Jim Hargreaves received a 10-minute misconduct

Gordie Howe scored a shorthanded goal at 1 25 of the first period to start Houston's big explosion At 2 47 Lund took a pass from Mark Howe and scooted the puck past the Jets' Frank Blum

Gordon Labossiere got Houston's third goal before Lund got his second goal of the period at 10 17 and Ted Taylor made the score 5-0 with one second left in the period

Canadiens Stop New York, 4-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Yvan Cournoyer was credited with two unassisted goals, one of which was actually shot home by Ranger defenseman Rod Seiling, to lift the Montreal Canadiens to a 4-2 victory over New York Saturday night and a 2-1 lead in their quarterfinal National Hockey League playoff series

Cournoyer's second goal of the game and fifth in the last two contests was a pure gift, courtesy of the usually reliable Seiling.

It occurred in the opening minute of the second period when Cournoyer, veered the right boards, and sent the puck across the goalmouth. Seiling, stationed in front of Ed Giacomin, whirled around and swatted the puck past his bewildered goaltender.

The Canadiens, who now have won two games in a row after dropping the opener of the best of seven series, jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Peter Mahovlich, Steve Shutt and Cournoyer

After putting together what could have been their two worst periods of the season, the Rangers finally showed some life in the final session as Peter Stemkowski scored on a power play at 8 06 and Jean Ratelle followed 3 ½ minutes later But Rookie Montreal goaltender Bunny Larocque effectively held off the New York attack the rest of the way

So ineffectual were the Rangers in the opening periods that Giacomin on several occassions came far out of the net to clear the puck or check a Montreal player

Mahovlich's goal with the game only 3 38 old came on a breakaway and Shutt's was on a powerplay

Irving, Nets Top Colonels

UNIONDALE, N Y (AP) — Dynamic Julius Erving threaded his way through Kentucky's defense for 35 points and Billy Paultz virtually shackled big Artis Gilmore, keying the New York Nets to a 119-106 victory over the Colonels Saturday night in the first game of their American Basketball Association playoff series.

Game 2 in the best-of-seven series for the ABA East Division title will be played here Monday night

The Nets, with Dr. J—that's what they call Erving—operating on Kentucky for 13 points in the decisive third quarter, blew out the Colonels in the period, outscoring them 38-24 for a commanding 90-75 bulge.

Paultz, a bulky 6-foot-11, 240-pounder, not especially known for his defense, put a clamp on the 7-2 Gilmore, limiting the Colonels' giant to 13 points—only three in the second half.

Gilmore had averaged nearly 30 points per game in Kentucky's opening-round four-game playoff sweep over Carolina

Meanwhile, Paultz was one of six Nets in double figures, contributing 16 points Rookie Larry Kenon hit for 20 Another rookie, John Williamson, added 17 Mike Gale had 12 and Wendell Ladner 10

Dan Issel paced the Colonels with 22 points, one more than Louie Dampier Walt Simon, an ex-Net, came off the Kentucky bench in the final period and connected for 12 points, but it was too late

The Nets, hitting on better than 54 per cent of their field goal attempts led 52-51 at the half on Kenon's hook shot with two seconds left in the second quarter

Kennedy Denies Buffalo Protest

NEW YORK (UPI) — National Basketball Association commissioner Walter Kennedy today rejected a protest by Buffalo concerning Friday night's game with the Boston Celtics.

The Braves contended that one second remained on the clock after JoJo White sank two free throws to give the Celtics a 106-104 victory to clinch the series

In the opinion of the two referees—Mendy Rudolph and Darrell Garrettson—rule 5, section 3 applied. Under it, if a foul occurs at approximately the instant time expires for a period, the period officially ends after the free throw or throws are attempted.

Kennedy upheld the officials and denied the protest.

Love, Ray, Walker Help Bulls Gain NBA Semis

NATIONAL

CHICAGO (AP) — "I knew this one was going down to the last basket, even with our big early lead," said coach Dick Motta Saturday after his Chicago Bulls survived a firstround playoff for the first time in their National Basketball Association history.

The 50-point combined shooting by Bob Love and Chet Walker and brilliant all-around play of Cliff Ray enabled the Bulls, ahead by as many as 19 points, to shade the Detroit Pistons 96-94 in the decisive seventh game of their Western Conference semifinal series.

The Bulls, who wound up their seventh first-round playoff try without injured star Jerry Sloan, now move against the Milwaukee Bucks in the opener of the Western Conference final playoffs in Milwaukee Tuesday night

Detroit coach Ray Scott said "Ray's performance was phenomenal in everything he did." Ray, who scored 15 points, mainly on stuff shots, consistently out-maneuvered Bob Lanier the big Piston ace, who finished with 23 points after a poor first half

Ray, who had averaged less than six points in the six previous playoff games, said "I finally figured out what to do about Lanier. What he does is come down court and set up. So I started coming in where he sets up and that was the difference."

Ray out-rebounded the 275-pound Lanier, 9-8.

The Bulls, who had moved to a whopping 19-point lead at 64-45 early in the third quarter found themselves in danger of again succumbing to a furious second-half piston surge.

In the final quarter, Detroit chipped away at the Bull lead and with 2:04 left had forged into a 92-92 tie on Lanier's two free throws.

But Walker, who led the Bulls with 26 points, popped in a long shot and Norm Van Lier dropped in two free throws to nudge the Bulls ahead 96-92.

Dave Bing's basket for Detroit with 21 seconds left shaved the score to 96-94 but Detroit failed to get the ball in bounds with three seconds left

Motta said "We missed Sloan's defense against Stu Lantz, but we like Lantz shooting rather than Lanier or Bing "

Lantz topped the Pistons with 25 points, 11 of them on free throws.

"The way it worked out, Sloan's injury didn't hurt us as much as it would if we were playing Milwaukee today rather than next Tuesday night," Motta said.

"If we would have won in six games against Detroit, we would have opened at Milwaukee at the same time today So it turned out just right."

Motta said it was uncertain whether Sloan, who has a torn foot muscle, would be available against the Bucks Tuesday or in next Thursday night's game in Chicago.

Indiana Topped By Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Willie Wise whipped in 34 points to spark the Utah Stars to a 105-96 victory over the Indiana Pacers in the first game of their American Basketball Association Western Division playoff series.

Wise scored 17 points in the final period as the Stars, who had led by as much as 14 points, fought off a last-ditch Indiana rally.

The second game of the best-of-seven series for the division championship will be played here Monday

Utah overcame a shaky start and then romped to a 31-24 lead at the first quarter. The Stars' offense iced up momentarily in the second period and Indiana, behind big George McGinnis who scored 39 points in the game, caught up a 33-33.

Ak Adds Color TV

Omaha — The 1974 Ak-Sar-Ben Races will be more colorful than ever with the addition of a complete closed-circuit television system.

The 55-day Ak-Sar-Ben meeting opens Tuesday, April 30 and ends Saturday, July 13.

General manager Dick Becker said Sunday that Ak-Sar-Ben's fans will be able to see the actual running and instant replays of each race on the 20'x30' screen in the Coliseum. In addition, 46 color television monitors will be located throughout the plant.

Criterion Video Patrol, Inc., will provide the new closed-circuit color system. The equipment is being moved here from Santa Anita in California. The color on the big Coliseum screen is being provided by Theater Network Television of New York City, which provides the closed-circuit television of major sporting events for theaters throughout the nation. "We are continually striving to provide our racing fans with the best possible facilities," Mr. Becker said, "and we believe this color television system will add a new dimension to our racing program."

Ak-Sar-Ben also has installed a Master Control Room on the main line which will serve as the nerve center for the system. The public will be able to view the operations in the Control Room.

A four-position video tape patrol system also has been added. The new system provides the Stewards with a quick playback of the race from four camera angles. In addition, the Stewards can review video tape of the horses as they are warming up before the race, in the starting gate, and as they pull up after the race.

"We believe this patrol system will be of great assistance to our Stewards in providing complete surveillance of all the action on the racetrack," Mr. Becker said. "This is another step to assure our racing fans that they are being given the finest and most up-to-date operation possible."

Johnson, Green On Injury List

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland A's placed designated hitter Deron Johnson and second baseman Dick Green on the disabled list Saturday.

Johnson has a pulled hand muscle, Green an ankle injury. Johnson was put on the 15-day list, Green on the 21-day list, both retroactive to Thursday.

Infielder John Donaldson and pitcher Leon Hooten joined the A's from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League to replace Johnson and Green.

Opperman Top Hulman Qualifier

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP)— Long-haired Jan Opperman, self-proclaimed hippie of U.S. Auto Club racing, led the way Saturday in qualifying for Sunday's fourth annual Tony Hulman Classic sprint car race.

Opperman, the current USAC sprint division leader, does most of his racing in the Pennsylvania area but lists his address as Beaver Crossing, Neb. He drove Terre Haute Action Track's half-mile dirt oval in 23.43 seconds on the best of his two qualifying laps.

Tom Bigelow of Whitewater, Wis., was second at 23.51. George Snider of Bakersfield, Calif, the 1971 Hulman winner, was third, followed by 1972 winner Bruce Walkup of St. Paul, Ind., and Thad Dosher of Topeka, Kan.

Defending Hulman champ Joe Saldana qualified ninth, while A.J. Foyt of Houston, the top racing name in the field, was 11th in the 28 cars which qualified for Sunday's heat races.

Those races will pare down the field to the 20 cars which will start the nationally-televised 40-lap feature race at 4:30 p.m., EDT.

Rich Leavell of Elwood, Ind., the 1973 USAC sprint rookie of the year, won Saturday's 12-lap consolation race, nipping veteran Larry Cannon of Danville, Ill. Those two are the alternates for Sunday's 28-car field.

Location of Fremont with respect to other Big 10 and I-80 Conference schools.

Fremont Becoming 'Orphan'?

Prep Panorama

By Randy York

Fremont (pop. 22,962) may be ideally situated between Nebraska's two metropolitan areas. But its Class A high school is beginning to feel like an athletic orphan — on the outside, looking in.

Fremont officials admit openly they want to abdicate from the Big 10 Conference. Their written application to join the Eastern I-80 Conference, which begins operation this fall, will be acted upon in May.

Using an Eastern I-80 Conference kickoff banquet in Omaha last week as a barometer, chances appear slim at best that the new 7-school league will accept Fremont's application for membership.

Initially, it seemed apparent that Lincoln's four public high schools were opposed to adding Fremont while the three Omaha suburban schools (Papillion, Millard and Ralston) supported such a move.

But opposition to Fremont may be even more widespread than that. The majority of superintendents, principals, athletic directors and head coaches in the Eastern I-80 understandably don't want to "panic" in adding Fremont, then regret the decision.

AD Issues 'Panic' Caution

"I think admitting Fremont now would be a case of panic," says Papillion athletic director Dennis Smith, acknowledging that adding Fremont would not only alter the structure of the Big 10, but also dissolve the 7-school Trans-Nebraska and Apollo conferences.

When Fremont was experiencing problems lining up a football schedule early in the year, schools lended a sympathetic ear. "But I understand now that Fremont is getting a lot of offers from Omaha to fill its schedule," says Smith.

Fremont football coach and athletic director Jack Bryant, however, signed football contracts with Vermillion (S.D.) and Junction City (Kan.) for next fall, apparently before some Omaha schools (Benson and Boys Town) beckoned with offers.

The Eastern I-80's reluctance to admit Fremont baffles Fremont activities director Lee Clopper, who says: "I don't know why they (Eastern I-80 officials) aren't out here beating on our door. We're close, offer great crowd support financially and we're competitive. We'd make it a strong 8-team league."

Millard superintendent Don Stroh also believes Fremont "would round out the Eastern I-80 into eight good schools." He contends "it's time we look down the pike a little, forget about the past and quit splitting our loyalties to two conferences. It doesn't work. I'd rather have one strong tie."

All seven Eastern I-80 schools will function within two conferences this fall. The four Lincoln schools also belong to the Trans-Nebraska, which includes Grand Island, Hastings and North Platte. And the three Omaha suburban schools also belong to the Apollo, which includes Columbus, Beatrice, Norfolk and South Sioux City.

Although supporting the addition of Fremont to the I-80, Millard's Stroh points out that within five to 10 years, Millard will build another high school and could be the best possible expansion prospect.

Millard School Site Sought

"We're looking for a new school site right now," says Stroh, noting that the increased number of homes built and sold in and around Millard this spring "indicates the growth we've hoped for and expected."

Lincoln High principal William Bogar believes Fremont applied for membership to the wrong conference. "They should have applied to get into the Trans-Nebraska instead of the Eastern I-80," he offers.

"That's their best avenue of hope," according to Bogar. "They already play three Lincoln schools and Grand Island and Hastings. They pick up one more game and they're in business. But it's been their reluctance to travel which is hurting them now. They have not been willing to travel to Kearney or North Platte like Lincoln schools or to Scottsbluff like we do. It's been their own undoing."

The seeds for the predicament in which Fremont finds itself were planted years ago, according to the Lincoln High principal.

"They were filling their schedule without any problems," notes Bogar, "but the expansion of the Metro and the creation of the Eastern I-80 dried up their possibilities and they have no place to go.

"Two years ago, Lincoln was scratching for games," recalls Bogar. "But the Eastern I-80 and the Trans-Nebraska guarantee Lincoln full sports competition within reasonable distance of travel. It's a built-in solution. Lincoln is in remarkable scheduling shape.

"Lincoln has attempted to get into league alignments before with Fremont," he adds. "Now, putting Fremont in the Eastern I-80 would destroy the Trans-Nebraska, Apollo and part of the Big 10. Some are asking why break up three conferences to make space for Fremont, especially when the Trans-Nebraska and Apollo are financially sound?"

Should the status of the Big 10 be jeopardized with weakening loyalties and intentions involving Fremont in the East and McCook and Alliance in the West, South Sioux City and Beatrice likely would want to project themselves into a possible realignment picture.

Meanwhile, until conference complexities and possibilities, crystallize, Fremont remains on the outside, looking in — keeping its fingers crossed in hopes of landing in a nice, secure foster home. Is anyone going to take them?

Prep Thinclad Activity Hotter

Prep track activity intensifies this week, especially in Southeast Nebraska with three important meets scheduled Tuesday.

The second annual Syracuse Invitational, a co-educational meet, awards separate boys and girls championship trophies, but also offers a grand championship to the school with the best combined score.

Boys and girls teams from 11 schools will compete. They include Lincoln Pius X, Falls City, Plattsmouth, Tecumseh, Norris, Blair, Omaha Paul VI, Omaha Gross, Weeping Water, Tekamah-Herman and Syracuse.

Special events include the 330 intermediate hurdles for boys and the mile for girls. Field events start at 2 p.m. and running finals at 3 p.m.

The fifth annual Crete Sertoma Relays also is slated Tuesday with field events starting at 2 p.m. and the relays at 4 p.m.

The Crete meet's another co-ed event with six competing boys teams (Crete, Ashland, York, Fairbury, Waverly and Seward) and seven competing girls teams (Crete, Aurora, Tecumseh, Fairbury, Waverly, York and Central City).

Six schools will participate in the 15th annual Ed Weir Invitational track meet Tuesday at Superior. Preliminaries start at 1:30 p.m. and finals at 6:45 p.m.

Hardy, Sutton, Blue Hill, Nelson, Red Cloud and Superior will compete in the meet, honoring former Superior athlete and Nebraska all-American football player Ed Weir, who will serve as honorary referee.

Colorado Hires Sager To Coach

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Mike Sager, former NCAA wrestling champion from Oklahoma, has been hired as wrestling coach at the University of Colorado effective immediately, officials announced Saturday.

Sager has been head wrestling coach at the University of Cincinnati two years and was wrestling coach at Marshall University from 1970 to 1972. He coached a Tulsa, Okla., high school team before that.

Sager replaces Shelby Wilson who resigned last month after six years at the job.

Sager, 29, was the NCAA champion at 137 pounds in 1964, and was a runnerup in the same division in 1966, the year he was graduated from the University of Oklahoma.

Colorado was 2-12-0 and finished last in the Big Eight Conference championships.

NSAA Advances Prep Playoff Plan, Girl's Basketball Tourney

State-wide playoffs for Nebraska prep football teams became a distinct possibility Wednesday when the Nebraska School Activities Association Representative Assembly advanced the playoff issue to a referendum among the state's 374 high schools by a 40-9 vote.

The state's high school administrator's will decide the fate of the issue via mailed ballots which they will receive sometime this summer.

In another decision expected to have state-wide effect, the NSAA representatives approved a motion to add a girls state high school basketball tournament, as well as state-wide events for girls' tennis, gymnastics and golf.

Huskers Scrimmage

The Nebraska Cornhuskers held their second scrimmage of their spring practice sessions Saturday, and although not yet showing the offensive consistency Coach Tom Osborne would like to see established, they did show an explosiveness which is bound to excite a lot of fans.

The Huskers' first string offense opened the scrimmage by scoring on two of its first three possessions against the second team defense, utilizing 42 and 23-yard scoring bombs.

The top NU defensive unit also flexed its muscles, as it made a goal line stand against the first offensive unit and then almost completely stymied the second and third offensive squads.

Slingshots Try Image Change

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer

Columbus — Overcoming a bad image is a struggle. Chuck Saunders believes he's made a tiny dent, however, in his efforts to erase one unfavorable image.

Saunders, head of Saunders Archery and Slingshots in Columbus, has been in the slingshot manufacturing business for 19 years. Just now he thinks he's getting his message across.

"We knew when we went into the business we would have this problem," Saunders said. "We recognized the slingshot had a bad image. When you think of a slingshot you picture kids shooting telephone insulators off telephone poles.

"We had the same image problem as AMF when they tried to improve the pool hall image for their pool tables. We tried a number of things to overcome this bad image."

The first thing Saunders and company did was print a booklet on the techniques of shooting a slingshot. He simply applied the techniques of archery to slingshots.

"You have all the problems in slingshot shooting as you do in archery," Saunders pointed out He said body position, consistent length of pull, an anchor point at the extent of the pull and the release as common to both sports

"The only additional trouble area in slingshot is in the length of time spent at full draw. The rubber on a slingshot loses part of its cast the longer it is kept extended With a bow, you can hold the draw as long as you like without affecting the shot," Saunders explained.

To further improve the image of slingshots, the soft-spoken Saunders incorporated target shooting into the new, favorable image.

Saunders developed a home target for the family looking to slingshots as a recreational outlet. The target can be used in the basement or backyard without difficulty.

The company president said the home target concept was a little slow coming along, however. When slingshots were first brought into the picture for the Columbus plant, the home target failed

OUTDOOR NEWS

Now new interest is being developed. One large department store chain has expressed interest in Saunders coming up with a low cost model for its promotion.

Much of this new interest is related to the Saunders U.S. Open Indoor Slingshot Tournament each year in Las Vegas. The $1,000 tournament finished its second year, running along with the Saunders co-sponsored archery meet, now the largest of the archery target competitions in the nation.

The slingshot tournament idea mushroomed from Saunders' display space at the Vegas archery tourneys. Archers and familys often turned to slingshots for fun and relaxation after the grueling archery competiton or while another member of the family shot archery.

So many folks gathered around the slingshot ranges. Saunders struck out with the U.S. Open idea. It proved to be a success.

He built an automatic target called "the socko." It amounts to six targets on a swivel arm The arm separates targets on each side. As one competitor hits his or her target, the target pops up on the opponent's side of the center bar.

The idea is to get all the targets onto the opponents' side Saunders further initiated what he calls "The Las Vegas speed round" which sets a 90-second time limit for the competiton. At the end of the time period, the winner is the competitor with the fewest targets left on his side of the center bar

The socko even holds potential for archery in a similar manner, according to Saunders.

"This creates excitement," he said of the socko. "It's not just the precision shooting as in a typical target shooting competition. This adds the time element. A competitor can't fall too far behind. He can't lose his cool or all is lost."

The new interest in slingshot target shooting is finding its way into university and college classrooms. Instructors are looking to slingshots for physical education courses to supplement archery or as a means of introducing archery technique to students.

"It's easier to teach them the practices of safety and the principles of technique with slingshot," Saunders said. "It simplifies the problems and it is inexpensive. It takes a fraction of the cost of getting set up in archery."

Slingshots look to a variety of interest groups. The young or old hunters can use slingshots on rabbits and squirrels. The individual who doesn't appreciate his neighbor's animals, but wishes to scare rather than injure, can call on the slingshot. The family can have fun with target shooting.

There's nothing wrong with that, is there?

Bike Race Set

The Lincoln Park and Recreation Department is joining hands with the Husker Road Club to sponsor a Pioneers Park Criterium Bicycle Race Saturday, April 20, at Pioneers Park.

Registration for entry can be made at Pioneers Park Saturday, beginning at 7 a.m., or by contacting one of the local bicycle shops for a registration blank.

Competition begins at 9 a.m. with an open race for novices or fun cyclists. It will be a five-mile race through the park.

Amateur Bicycle League of America (ABLA) sanctioned juniors and seniors races follow. The juniors race will be 15 miles starting at 9:30 a.m. and the seniors will race over a 25-mile course beginning at 10:30 p.m. Both races will be run under ABLA regulations.

No entry fee is required for the open race, but will be required for the sanctioned races. Some $650 worth of prize money and prizes will be awarded.

Entries are scheduled to come from as far away as Colorado, Minnesota, Iowa and Kansas.

Each class must have at least three entries competing to qualify for prizes.

Pioneers Park will be closed to the public while the races are underway.

Lincoln's Bill Lammers, member of the Husker Road Club, is heading the project and can be contacted for further information.

The City Park and Recreation Department is also sponsoring a youth bicycle safety clinic beginning May 2. The clinic will be held at Auld Pavillion, running four consecutive weeks.

Safety instruction will include street riding safety, maintenance, and possibly, an overnight bike hike for those who graduate from the safety series.

Contact the City Park and Recreation Department for further information and registration for the safety course.

Two Rivers Trout Provide Fun, If Lacking in Size

Valley — "Yes, sir, I think it's a keeper," Frank Kelly chuckled as he set the hook. But then they are all keepers at Two Rivers State Recreation Area near here.

Kelly had set the hook on a "monster" trout. It took a few short tugs to wrestle the six-inch beauty onto the banks of the Two Rivers trout lake.

Kelly and fellow Journal composing room foreman Bernie Pavelka coaxed me along to a return trip to Two Rivers. The Lincoln pair had not been there for five or ten years and wanted to see how things were.

Two Rivers is a favorite spot for retired anglers, youngsters and families wanting to catch a few fish. The put-and-take trout pond had opened a few weeks before and was freshly stocked with 10-inch (average) trout from the state fish hatchery.

Kelly must have caught a shrunken trout.

But the pond shores at Two Rivers are seldom empty. More often fishermen line the banks. On weekends it's shoulder-to-shoulder fishing for a limit of five trout on the $2 fee.

For those interested in giving it a try, take along anything that looks good for bait. The key to catching trout at Two Rivers is finding what the fish want — and don't let anything surprise you.

I learned my lesson at Two Rivers a year ago. Taking a couple of youngsters along, we had a tough time catching fish until eavesdropping on the 10-year-old fishing next to us. He was nearing his limit with pieces of Velveeta cheese he'd taken from his dad's sandwich.

Someone in our group just happened to have a cheese sandwich and we too were in business.

Well, Bernie started things off with the marshmallow number. One of the older set fishing next to us gave some fatherly advice as soon as we arrived, saying marshmallows were "it."

Frank took corn — no insinuation intended. I tried yellow salmon eggs. Bernie caught the first fish and it wasn't long before he was into number two.

I switched to fluorescent red salmon eggs and caught five fish in the next half hour. Meanwhile, Frank switched to marshmallow with corn for a gourmet meal and caught a couple of trout, including his "whopper."

Frank left that fish in the water for a few extra minutes, hoping it would unhook itself. No luck, and what you catch is what you get. Rules are rules.

Frank just hid it under his sweatshirt while he unhooked it. Then, nonchalantly, put the "tadpole trout" on the stringer cringing at the catcalls of his "friends."

My success convinced my partners red was the thing and we ended catching our 15 trout within two hours after arriving.

On the way out, displaying the shrewdness which has made me near famous, a couple of dismayed anglers quickly pulled up their spot and moved to our "hot" spot.

I convinced them it was the bait, not the spot so they naturally tried to buy the remaining salmon eggs Being a financial wizard of sorts, I threw out a price and they took the bait.

Only later did I find I'd lost $1 on the exchange. I guess Bernie had the last laugh.

At least Two Rivers' trout fishing is a fun way to spend part of a nice spring day.

Regent J.G. Elliott Dies; Served NU 20 Years

J. G Elliott of Scottsbluff, longtime member of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, died early Wednesday in an Omaha hospital. He underwent heart surgery Tuesday, at the NU Medical Center.

Mr. Elliott was serving his 20th year on the Board of Regents. He was Board president in 1960, 1962 and 1967

Mr. Elliott was instrumental in promoting NU use of facilities at the defunct Hiram Scott College. He felt this would open new agricultural opportunities for the Panhandle.

After a committee appointed by Gov Exon recommended against NU's taking over the campus, Mr Elliott moved at a Regent's meeting that the University of Nebraska-Lincoln operate the Scottsbluff facility for agricultural purposes.

The motion passed, and shortly thereafter Mr. Elliott was on hand with western Nebraska officials to accept the property.

NU President D. B. Varner said "the entire University community is saddened by the news of Regent Elliott's death."

Varner said Mr. Elliott "served this University with great effectiveness and enormous loyalty for 19 years. He brought that extraordinary balance of good judgment, dedication to the University and commitment to improving the well-being of the people of the state of Nebraska."

Texas Southern Captures Three Titles at Texas Relays

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The 47th Texas Relays recorded its first sub-four minute mile Saturday and wound up in confusion over a disputed mile relay duel between Baylor and Texas Southern.

Former North Dakota State ace Mike Slack shattered the four-minute barrier for the first time in the history of the track festival with a sparkling 3:59.7.

Just minutes later, Baylor and Texas Southern flashed to a photo finish in the final running event of the day, the mile relay. Both were timed in a record 3:06.64.

The judges, after some delay, ruled Baylor the winner. Texas Southern launched a protest and 30 minutes after the race, the rules committee declared the two teams co-winners. The unusual ruling elevated Texas Southern to the lofty position of owning two relay victories outright and a share of a third.

Texas Southern was competing for the first time in the university division.

The drama captured on camera showed Ron Jenkins of Texas Southern and Tim Son of Baylor slashing through the tape at the same moment.

That shot away the 3:07.0 record set by Texas in 1968.

Slack's record breaking run in the mile erased the 4:00.5 mark set in 1955 by former Kansas great Wes Santee. Slack was clocked in 56.4 seconds in the final quarter.

Dean Owens of Southern California broke the university-college high jump record with a leap of 7-2 but Dwight Stone, the world record holder was less than spectacular.

Stone, the Pacific Coast Club ace who set the world mark of 7-6¾, could do no better than 7-1 in the open competition.

Owens' leap wiped out the record of 7-1 set by Ken Lundmark of Brigham Young in 1970.

A total of nine running records, none national, tumbled during the mammoth two-day extravaganza that concluded on a crystal clear afternoon punctuated by mild gusts of wind and the cheers of some 11,000 fans.

Kansas State staved off fierce bids from South Carolina, Texas and Oklahoma State to add the two-mile relay title to an earlier landslide triumph in the four-mile relay.

The heralded duel between world shot put record holders Al Feuerbach and George Woods never materialized but Feuerbach did exceed his own record here with a put of 70 feet 1½ inches.

NATIONAL

The effort, well off his world mark of 71-7, erased the standard of 69-8¾ which he set last year. It came on his first throw.

Woods, Feuerbach's teammate on the Pacific Coast Club, scratched on all three throws and yielded second place to former Southern Methodist ace Sammy Walker. Walker's best throw was 61-3¾.

Kansas State's Lenny Harrison spurned a trio of challengers on the final lap of the two-mile relay and took the event with a time of 7:24.2.

South Carolina, clocked at 7:24.7, was second with Texas a step behind in third.

The Wildcats swept to an 80yard triumph over Texas in a non-record time of 16:35.00 in the four-mile relay.

Keith Palmer, running the second leg, posted a 4:04.5 mile to open an unsurmountable lead for the Wildcats. His time was nearly ten seconds better than the Longhorns.

Texas Southern's two relay victories came Friday night in the sprint medley and the 880 yard relay.

Texas chalked up a shutout in the relays after winning four of the premier events last year and walking off with the outstanding team trophy.

University of Texas-El Paso joined Kansas State and Baylor as the other university division relay winners Saturday, taking the 440 yard event in 39.8 seconds.

UTEP added a field event triumph in the open pole vault as Larry Jessee sailed 17 feet and took first place from Roland Carter of the Texas Striders on fewer misses at that height.

Dana LeDuc of Texas sounded the first muted noise for the Southwest Conference by capturing first place in the university shot put with a heave of 64-8¾ inches.

The SWC was blanked in the victory column until LeDuc's toss nudged runner-up Anders Arrhenius of Brigham Young by less than four inches.

Baylor followed with a record 57.1 second triumph in the 480yard shuttle hurdle relay, lowering the 57.7 mark set by Texas last year. The Longhorns finished second in 57.3.

Jay T. Hollins of Ranger, Tex. Junior College nosed Marvin Baker of South Plains, Tex., Junior College in a record 9.7 second 100-yard dash.

Baker's 9.8 clocking also bettered the 9.9 standard set in 1972 by Guy Abrahams of New Mexico Junior College.

In an unusual occurrence, the six contestants who placed in the university pole vault all cleared 16 feet even and Alabama's Tim Hamilton seized first [illegible] Kansas State's Don Marrs on fewer misses.

Golf Contest Slated

Lincoln golfers will have the chance to beat cancer and Dorothy and Dick at the same time next week.

The American Cancer Society has announced a special competition involving Dorothy Swartzkopf, many-time city and state women's champion, and radio personality Dick Perry.

From April 20 through the 27th, golfers at Holmes, Pioneer, Hillcrest and LCC will be invited to donate to the Cancer Society and then record their net score. (After deducting handicap.)

On the 27th, Dorothy and Dick will play a round and all those who have topped their score will go in a hat for the drawing of prizes.

Both golfers may be tough to beat. The mayor's wife, even without the six strokes her handicap allows, will be difficult to top for most area distaff golfers.

And Perry, nicknamed 'Sandbagger' by some of his friends, will deduct 18 strokes (his handicap, he says) from his total score.

"It's a good cause and there are some good prizes," Cancer Society golf event chairman Bill Roper promises.

Oilers, Oaks Set To Defend Titles

By Associated Press

The Tulsa Oilers and the Iowa Oaks are ready to defend their division championships in American Association baseball which gets underway Tuesday night.

The Oilers won the West crown last season and went on to win the playoffs. Iowa took the East title.

Even Manager Ken Boyer, making his Tulsa debut, admits the Oilers "have a wealth of talent. It's just a question of finding the right place for some of them to play."

Iowa, with Manager Joe Sparks back at the helm, has many of its players returning. Sparks says the Oaks "will be all right."

There is some optimism elsewhere. Manager Red Davis, new boss of the Oklahoma City 89ers, thinks his club will "score at least four or five runs every day" and adds that he likes "our pitching staff. I think htat's going to be our strong point, that and power."

Denver Manager Frank Verdi asserts the Bears "will be a contender for the title" despite their last place finish in the West last year.

Omaha Manager Harry Malmberg says the Royals are "the kind of club you love to have . . young, talented, a lot of raw talent."

The other clubs and their managers are Evansville, Fred Hatfield; Indianapolis, Vern Rapp, and Wichita, Mike Roarke.

Tuesday night's opening schedule sends Tulsa to Oklahoma City, Denver to Wichita and Omaha to Iowa. Indianapolis and Evansville open at Evansville Wednesday night.

REGIONAL

Boyer points to the fact the Oilers have some outstanding young players, including Hector Cruz, Keith Hernandez, Marc Hill and Ed Kurpiel and several with big league experience.

Heading the returning Iowa players are first baseman Sam Ewing, second baseman Hugh Yancy, third baseman Bee Bee Richard and pitchers Dave Leisman, Stan Pezanowski, Jim Geddes and Dave Menonds.

Sparks says he doesn't know about the Oaks' chances of repeating.

Davis says the 89ers will have power in Ossie Blanco, Ron Lolich, Rick Manning and Ted Ford and that Manning and Tom McMillan "are going to be on base a lot when the others hit home runs."

The 89ers' top pitching prospects are Bill Gogolewski, Bob Rauch, Eric Raich, Jim Korn and Terry Ley.

Denver also is blessed with left-handed pitching talent, Jim Crawford, Mike Cosgrove and Russ Therman.

The accent in Omaha will be on youth. George Brett and Frank Ortenzio are certain to see plenty of action in the infield and Tom Poquette and Rockne Craig in the outfield.

Four Omaha pitchers are expected to be standouts, Denny Leonard, Mark Littell, Bob McClure and Steve Mingori. Mingori may return to the parent Kansas City Royals after he works out his arm problems.

Evansville has two potential stars, shortstop Tom Veryzer and right-handed pitcher Fred Holdesworth will start Wednesday night's opener.

Indianapolis' biggest asset is its outfield, Ed Armbrister, Roger Freed and Joel Youngblood. The Indians' leading pitchers may be Dick Baney and Tom Carroll.

Wichita has converted Pete LaCock from right field to first base at the request of the parent Chicago Cubs. The Aeros also have Jim Tyrone, a center fielder who hit .412 with the Cubs in spring training; left fielder Cleo James and Gene Hiser

The Wichita pitching rotation probably will include Jim Todd and Tom Dettore.

"We always go into the season with the idea we're going to win," insists Roarke.

Softball Loop Seeks Umpries

An umpries meeting will be held Wednesday, April 17th at 7 PM at the Park and Recreation Department, 2740 "A" Street. Anyone wishing to umpire softball games this summer should attend this meeting or get in touch with Al Hawthorne at the Recreation Department, 475-6734.

Gal's Softball Deadline Soon

Monday has been set as the deadline for entering a Gal's softball team in the Lincoln Parks and Recreation League for 1974

An entry fee accompanied with the team roster should be presented when registering at 2740 A Street.

Portland Wants Healthy Walton

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — UCLA superstar Bill Walton will have to pass a Trail Blazers' physical examination before he signs a contract with the Portland National Basketball Association entry, Harry Glickman, Blazer vice president, said Friday.

Glickman made his statement in the wake of reports from Los Angeles that Walton had played much of the 1973-74 season with what was technically a broken back. Walton also has been troubled with knee problems.

Glickman said the requirement for a physical was nothing new "It's the same thing we did with (Geoff) Petrie and (Sidney) Wicks before we signed them," he said.

Glickman added, "At this time the cracked vertebrae are not a real serious consideration as far as we care concerned." He said Portland's interest in Walton is still high.

Portland won the right to draft first in the NBA this year and team officials have said they will take Walton and expect to sign him.

Glickman said the team has been negotiating with Walton's representatives but "I don't think we're close at this time."

Chi Sox' Acosta Sent to Iowa

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox announced today they had optioned relief pitcher Cy Acosta, to Iowa, their farm club in the American Association.

A club spokesman said that the righthander had "developed a tender elbow" and that his optioning would make room on the roster for righthander Stan Perzanowski, who had been with Iowa.

Acosta had pitched only a few innings this year, the spokesman said.

College Plan

13 'Super Board' Is Topic

By Jack Kennedy

Creation of a "super board" including all of Nebraska postsecondary education will be discussed April 16 by the Public Postsecondary Coordinating Council.

The U.S. Office of Education has informed Gov. J.J. Exon that the state must set up such a board by April 25 if it wants between $18,000 and $30,000 in federal planning funds allocated but not yet appropriated.

Nebraska does not have to establish the socalled "1202 commission if it doesn't want the money, but some educators nationally fear a move to mandate higher education planning at the federal level if states want any future federal funding.

Some educators question putting profitmaking or proprietary schools on the commission, but it must include them as well as public and private institutions.

Despite defeat this week of a move by Sen. Terry Carpenter to place all four state colleges under the University of Nebraska, observers predict some type of overall body will come into being. The question, they say, is how soon and under how much federal or state pressure.

Nebraska educators and officials would not speculate publicly on whether the federally mandated 1202 commission could ultimately become the single agency for coordination of Nebraska higher education.

The voluntary postsecondary council, which does not include private or proprietary schools, will consider three options outlined by John Ottina, U.S. commissioner of education.

They are: Creations of an entirely new commission, designation of an existing state agency or commission if it met the all-inclusive criteria, or "expanding, augmenting or reconstructing" an existing agency like the University of Nebraska Board of Regents to include private and profit-making schools.

A major commission functions would be to plan postsecondary education in the state. All concerned state agencies then would use the planning results to carry out their own individual administraative responsibilities.

The commission could become the authority through which funds could be channeled for community services and continuing education programs now administered by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development.

It also could be the authority to receive federal equipment, construction and instruction grants, some of which now are administered by the Higher Education Facilities Commission in the Department of Administrative Services.

Dr. Edwin Nelson, executive secretary of the State College Board of trustees: Robert Schleiger, State Board of Technical and Community Colleges and Anne Campbell, University of Nebraska system official, have drafted two 1202 recommendations

One is that the governor create a commission composed of the postsecondary coordinating council plus two each from private and proprietary schools and the general public.

As an alternative the governor would designate the programming and planning division of DAS as the agency with an advisory council with the same makeup.

Lincoln to Host State Funeral Director Meet

Rabbi Earl A. Grollman Wednesday will discuss the psychological and emotional impact of death at the 88th annual convention of the Nebraska Funeral Directors.

Rabbi Grollman currently serves the Beth El Temple Center in Belmont, Mass. and has written a number of books on death

Wednesday evening, Cornhusker head football coach Tom Osborne and wide receiver Frosty Anderson will discuss the success of the 1973 season at a banquet.

The three-day convention will begin on Tuesday at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel.

Art Show Work of Retarded

By Helen Haggie

It will be a very different type of exhibition opening at the Haymarket Gallery, 119 So. 9th. About 40 artists will have work in the show — and all the artists participate in Jubilee Workshop.

Jubilee is a unique organization of volunteers who provide an art workshop for retarded teens and adults. It is designed to be recreational as well as an educational experience for all who participate, according to Diane Volk, coordinator.

The whole program is an imaginative one. For a visitor it is exciting, for the volunteer it must be rewarding and for persons receiving instruction it seems to be a very happy one.

About 40 retardees from community hostels, apartments and boarding homes attend the two-hour workshops on Saturdays. The art produced is not the crafty, busy-work type so often attributed to exceptional persons.

Any Saturday afternoon finds some participants drawing with live models as subjects.

Some may be painting tempera works of still life arrangements. There may be a group working on papier mache sculpture or some persons doing creative weaving. A person may be working alone on a painting.

And to help guide the artists are volunteers who work either with groups or individuals.

There's an air of joyous accomplishment in the large basement room at the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) as everyone in the group achieves his particular goal.

Janell Lenser also is a workshop coordinator. Each week she and Mrs. Volk conduct the session with help from a dozen teacher volunteers

The outline for volunteers says that they are not required to have previous art or teaching experience, although such background is valuable: the volunteer may work on a one-to-one basis or in a group situation with the students; a volunteer may participate as a group leader in charge of the organization and execution of art projects, serve as an assistant to other group leaders and may participate at his convenience as frequently as he chooses.

Mrs Volk said there are 12 University of Nebraska art students and nine other persons in the volunteer corps. Watching the volunteers work with the students gives an outsider a sense of the rapport between them.

The concept of the Jubilee Workshop is that every individual has a need to create — to produce something by means of his own abilities. Volunteers and coordinators believe the workshop gives the students an opportunity to fulfill that need.

The project has been sustained on a shoestring though support is received from LOMR and Captiol Assn. for Retarded Children, Mrs. Volk said.

She hopes there will be more money forthcoming for several reasons. One is that the group have its own facilities This would allow more frequent classes, a display area for finished work, an area for private tutoring, permanent work areas for special projects.

Another hope if Jubilee acquires a facility is to open

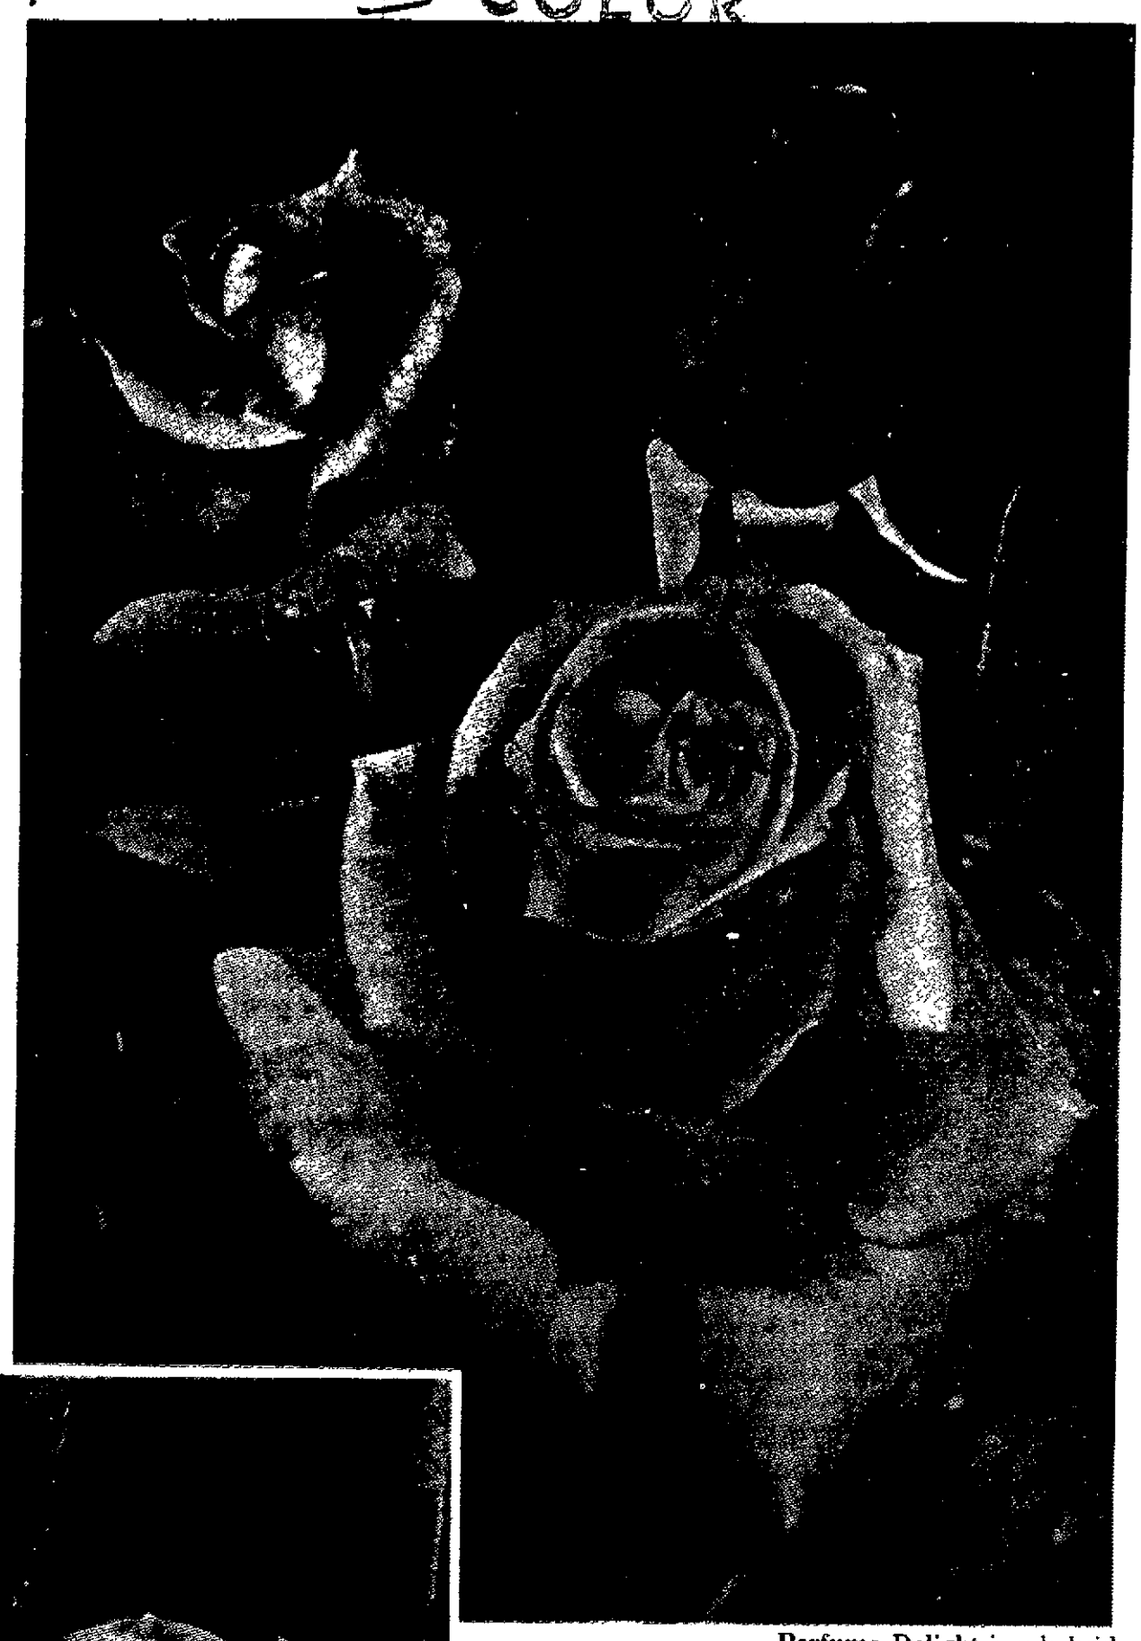
Fragrance, Beauty in Award Rose



Perfume Delight is a hybrid tea variety of exceptional fragrance.

After a winter of political turmoil, mideast wars and economic crises, the relieving gentle beauty of spring is here

To many gardeners, this season means the exciting adventure of new roses to purchase, plant and care for. As these plants quicken with the strengthening sun and warming weather, there comes the pleasure of the first sight of new and different blossoms.

Of the multitude of new roses offered each spring always the question arises, which of the many are the best and worth the asking price One guide is offered in the award-winning varieties named by All-America Rose Selections AARS, which has its headquarters in Shenandoah, Iowa (and whose information director has the improbable name of George Rose), carefully tests new varieties in 23 trial gardens throughout the United States.

The AARS says its stringent rules cannot help but disclose the virtues and the weaknesses of the roses under test, to the trained eyes of the judges Roses showing major faults are automatically eliminated

For 1974 the three roses chosen to receive the All-America awards from among the many entrants completing their two year trials are Bahia, a floribunda Bon Bon, a floribunda and Perfume Delight, a hybrid tea

Bahia is the hybrid of a well known American plant breeder, Dr Walter E Lammerts, and is the result of his crossing Tropicana and the floribunda Rumba This '74 winner's forebears include Peace, Goldilocks, Masquerade, Holiday, Floridora, Doubloons, Talisman, Margaret McGredy and others

This award winner being tall, floriferous and fragrant, will readily adapt to the back of a rose border, a bed where taller plants are needed, and as the center planting of a bed that may be viewed from all sides With masses of brilliantly colored flowers, it will show to advan-

Pick Activity; Cubs and Scouts May Have It

There was a time when a Boy Scout could get by on the ubiquitous square knot and a meal of meat, potatoes and carrots wrapped in foil and tossed into the camp fire.

Those things are still part of scouting but the Cornhusker Council's Scout Expo '74, scheduled Saturday from 2:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Pershing Auditorium, will exemplify the wide range of activities that scouting now encompasses.

Ken Peterson, member of the volunteer steering committee for Expo, said cubs, scouts and explorers from the 16 southeast Nebraska counties that make up the Cornhusker Council will participate in the public show at the Auditorium. He forecast that more than 100 units will be represented.

The show is intended to be both entertaining and informative for the general public. Awards for best booths will be made, with judging based on the quality of presentation as well as interest developed by the participants. Income from the Expo is used to further individual, unit and Cornhusker Council programs.

Each participating unit will have a booth in which to demonstrate a selected scouting activity. These activities are many and varied.

For instance, Cubmaster Fay Kapke's Pack 27 will be demonstrating tattoo painting. The design will be drawn on the skin and tempera painted. For the "customers" a little wary of permitting themselves to be tattooed in this fashion, Kapke promises that the designs will wash off easily when the wearer decides it's time.

A sampling of other activities promised by units that signed up early include a puppet theater to be staged by cubs of Pack 69, a turtle race promised by Pack 159, a ping pong contest promoted by scouts of Troop 9, and ecological awareness project, and a pinewood derby — in which scores of cub scouts will enter gravity-powered 4-ounce cars in races down an incline in a council-wide competition.

In addition to the cub (boys aged 8-10), scout (age 11-18) and explorer (coed, 15-20) activity booths, there will be a full program of stage presentations, according to Otto Manke, Expo committee general chairman.

The Pius X High School band will perform for the opening flag ceremony. The Wacisa Indian Dancers (members of Explorer Post 500) will dance after the opening ceremony.

At 3:30 the Mickle Misses, a girls singing group from Robin Mickle Junior High, will be on stage. They'll be followed by the Mickle Junior High band. Next up will be a singing group from Pound Junior High, the Squires and Squirettes.

Evening performances will be inaugurated at 6:30 when the Southeast High School Countesses and Noblemen sing. The Wacisa Indian Dancers will perform again in the evening.

A closing ceremony will be conducted by Zean Carney, Pack 59 cubmaster.

Quotable Quotes

By The Associated Press

"Frankly, my father's entire position on the tax matter has been one of trying to encourage the American people to support the Internal Revenue Service system. He did not have to pay $171,000 back taxes from 1969 because the statute of limitations had expired, yet he is paying that money just because he wants to take a stand." Julie Nixon Eisenhower, speaking in Memphis, Tenn., in defense of President Nixon's tax payments.

"This just opens the door for other agents to do the same thing. When someone gets hurt, when someone gets killed, then they are going to stop it." Evelyn Giglotto, whose home was raided by mistake by federal narcotic agents who were acquitted this week of violation of the victims' civil rights.

"I don't go out as much and I'm much lonelier." The Duchess of Windsor, commenting on her life since the death of the duke two years ago, as she arrived in New York for a month's visit.

"Sometimes I don't think that people want to hear about marriage and babies and success and happiness and stuff like that. The audience for pop records can identify with sad songs more than ones of exuberance and childbirth. So I don't know if what I have to say at the present time would be that popular; I can't quite understand it." Singer-songwriter Carly Simon, married to singer James Taylor and mother of a new baby.

"I'm exhausted. This time my decision is irrevocable. I have reached the end of the road and my decision has nothing to do with Dayan." Premier Golda Meir of Israel, announcing her resignation.

First Satellite Clinic Opens

Helping To Make Every Child a Wanted Child

By Linda Ulrich

Working toward the goal of helping make every child a wanted child, Planned Parenthood of Lincoln has opened its first satellite clinic at Bethel Baptist Church, 28th and S.

The Clinton-Malone Clinic will be open from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursdays in the church basement.

Because "family planning means having children by choice not chance," the clinic is designed to help provide services for Lancaster County residents unable to pay private medical help in family planning, according to Penny Hamilton, Lincoln Planned Parenthood information and education director.

The Clinton-Malone Clinic will serve only those residents qualifying for free services under Planned Parenthood residents qualifying for free services under Planned Parenthood guidelines. College students and residents able to pay for services will be referred to the Center at 3830 Adams. The federal government provides 80% of funding.

The satellite clinic proposal noted that "most men and women make some decision as to the number and spacing of their children, yet the poor, young or isolated are more likely to have more children than they want."

But, the proposal adds, large numbers of women do not have a doctor they can comfortably go to for contraceptive information.

"The causes of this situation include maldistribution of medical resources, inability to purchase services, judgmental or punitive attitudes on the part of physicians with regard to age, marital status, socio-economic status or racial or ethnic background," the proposal said.

The clinic's purpose, then, is to increase clinic services and educational programs to low-income residents and make these services more geographically accessible to them.

"Because transportation service to the planning center is poor, we've come here to help fulfill the needs in the community itself," Ms. Hamilton said.

In order to receive many types of birth control, a prescription from a physician or family planning specialist is required.

The clinic is run by family planning staff members and trained community volunteers. Pelvic examinations with an annual pap smear for cervical cancer, a check for gonnorrhea, medical and social history, blood pressure hematocrit and birth control supplies and information are among the services provided at the clinic. Pregnancy testing also is done.

The staff includes Sandra Zollicoffer, clinic coordinator; Ann Herman, family planning specialist; Jo Taylor, R.N. and Betty Leavitt, volunteer and L.P.N.

Because the maximum number of patients per clinic session is 20, appointments are needed. For more information, contact the Planned Parenthood Center.

Properly Trained Guard Dog Obeys On Command

Dear Ann Landers: I was very upset when I read the letter from the woman who was mad because strangers came near her guard dog and when they tried to pet him he lunged at their throats. She couldn't understand how people could be so "dumb."

That woman doesn't have a guard dog — she has a neurotic killer. A properly trained guard dog attacks only on command.

My advice to that stupid, addle-brained woman is to get rid of the vicious beast before he kills somebody and she finds herself with a great big lawsuit on her hands. If she wants a guard dog she should get one that is properly trained.

— Also Appalled

Dear Also: I received hundreds of letters from readers who expressed the same view. My thanks to all who backed me up when I said, "Get that dog off the street, lady. He's dangerous."

Dear Ann Landers: I let my boyfriend move in with me because I thought I was pregnant and felt sure he would marry me. It turned out that I was not pregnant and he is still here, and I am still paying the rent, the phone bill and buying the groceries.

I work long hours at a job, and I haven't the time or energy to go out during the week. I need every bit of strength to do the marketing, housework and laundry. On weekends I would enjoy an evening of diversion, if only a movie, but my boyfirend always has someplace to go that doesn't include me. He is hardly ever at home except to eat and sleep.

Last week I got fed up and told him to get out. He broke down and cried. I couldn't stand it. What should I do, Ann? I'm sure he is cheating on me but I am afraid to be alone.

Miserable Mary

Dear Mary: Get with it, kiddo. You ARE alone. I see no evidence whatever of companionship. That freeloader is getting room and board and laundry and you are getting used. Tell him he has 24 hours to clear out. If he cries, give him a box of paper towels and wish him luck.

Every time I read a letter like yours I say to myself, "That poor dame knows what she ought to do. She just needs someone to tell her to do it." So, I'm telling you.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please tell women who admire a dress and offer a compliment to refrain from asking, "Where did you get it?" A man would never be so tactless.

My husband and I are not impoverished, but we enjoy browsing in Goodwill, Salavation Army and Hadassah Resale shops. I sew well and can transform a garment that costs $2 into something that looks like an expensive original.

My husband says I shouldn't be ashamed to give an honest answer, but somehow I just can't bring myself to do it. I've considered saying, "I made it myself," but altering a dress is not the same as making it, so I would be lying.

I need a smart Ann Landers response. How about it?

Crafty Gal

Dear Gal: I don't agree that you need a "smart Ann Landers response." In fact you don't need ANY response to a question you don't choose to answer. Simply say, with a smile, "I'm not telling," and change the subject.

Sam the Tailor
Pittsburgh

Answer: The distribution of a particular suit in each of the four hands (4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2, etc. and the most rare, 13-0-0-0) The term may also refer to the distributional pattern of all suits in any one hand

MONDAY, APRIL 15

Your birthday today: Finds you on the threshold of sweeping changes related to the history of our times. Old answers no longer work, as this year's questions are entirely different from those of the past. After an early shake-up, relationships turn about and thrive in new patterns. Business requires concentration and definite actions at frequent intervals. Today's natives are fond of expansive theories. The men are thrifty; the women lively, intuitive, and good-humored.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Useful agreements are feasible, particularly in experimental or pilot projects. Get a second opinion on any technical questions or major purchase.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Defend your claims consistently at very moderate intensity. Partnership resources require attention, may increase with a little additional initiative.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Communication becomes more fluent, relates to distant places and people—leave the line open for incoming news.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Your personal prosperity builds readily in the general cooperation. Trial and error methods need close scrutiny, are likely to produce unusual results.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Place the accent on teamwork, round-table discussions. You can't have everything exactly how you want it, but much of it should come your way now.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Doing your best with already established ventures is more important than drifting off into diversionary experiments, no matter how intriguing.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Prime information that is needed is within your reach. Concerns of the younger set clamor for attention now. Pursue sentimental projects.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: In business, outstanding negotiations should be brought to conclusion, and a deal made At home, family problems come to easy handling.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Theory invites notice, but must be checked out for practical purposes. Fresh contacts promise an interesting outcome somewhat different from expectations.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Now you should have just about everything going for you. Don't get absentminded, however, and neglect the convenience and comfort of others.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Seek the finest technical advice possible if you are in a dilemma. Close relatives may be able to open a way for you where other connections failed.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Let old matters work themselves out in their own fashion. Put your quiet labors into adjusting financial arrangements for the long pull.

Easter Egg Well Anchored in Tradition

By Opal Y. Palmer

Eggs on Easter Sunday? Of course! The Easter egg is as established a symbol of Easter, as Santa Claus is of Christmas.

In my childhood, each member of our family got two eggs for breakfast on Easter morning instead of the customary one. And I still have a china Easter egg I received as a gift when I was eight.

It is unbroken, even though it was used for years as a "nest egg" to entice hens to sit still long enough to lay an edible egg.

No Eggs

At noon on Easter Sunday, I could have eaten three colored eggs if I had wanted them. But during the Easter blizzard of 1973, some homesteaders in Nebraska probably had no eggs on Easter Sunday, or maybe no food at all.

Everett Dick, in "Sod House Frontier" tells us that many people were lost in the blizzard, and many farmers were stranded in Hastings for Easter.

Although the origin of the use of the egg as a symbol for Easter is confusing, rituals for the beginning of spring with the egg as a symbol of fertility and the resurrection of new life have roots in mythology.

The egg is featured in Christian Easter festivities at an early date also. In early England, games and contests were held with hard-boiled, colored eggs on Easter Day.

A colored egg would be held by one person and struck at by another. The egg first broken was won by the striker, who ate it. The process was repeated until all eggs were disposed of.

In Switzerland and North England, children rolled brightly colored eggs down hill until they were broken. Then they were eaten.

In Lancashire, on Easter Eve, boys and men, called "pace-eggers," toured towns and villages begging for eggs, much as our children knock on doors at Halloween. Instead of witch and goblin costumes, however, the pace-eggers sometimes disguised themselves as "Old Miser Brown Bags."

Sacred Emblems

Eggs gathered in this manner were consecrated in the church and distributed as sacred emblems. In Oxfordshire the eating of eggs was forbidden during Lent.

At Chester, England, it is said that the bishop and the dean engaged in egg-throwing matches in the cathedral. They threw eggs back and forth with the choir boys.

On Easter morning, the dean would produce a ball and begin a dance while the antiphon was being sung. The ball was passed back and forth among the choir as the dancing continued.

James, in "Seasonal Feasts and Festivals", suggests this dance may have had some connection with the early belief that the sun danced on Easter Day.

That belief may be the origin of Easter sunrise services which some churches hold in parks and on hillsides, today, although the Easter egg may not play any part.

The use of the egg as a symbol of life did not begin with the Christian religion. The Phoenicians, Egyptians, Hindus, and others, believed the world was egg-shaped and that it had been hatched from an egg made by the creator.

Origins

It does not matter to a group of Ukrainians in Minnesota, where the idea of the Easter egg originated. In their homeland, they learned an intricate and delicate art of egg-painting. They produce designs on eggs which tell their religious faith in symbols rather than in words.

A triangle is the Trinity; dots are Mary's tears; the cross signifies suffering, death and resurrection. A wavy or straight design encircling the egg suggests eternity — without beginning or end.

This inspiring painting skill is passed down from Ukrainian mother to daughter.

Unlike the eggs broken in ancient games and then eaten, the Ukrainian works of art are bought as souvenirs. I am sure many of them will be cherished as long as I have kept my china egg.

La Sertoma, Sertoma Clubs Install Officers

Bill Roper was installed as president of Gateway Sertoma Club at the inaugural dinner Saturday at the Elks Club. Mrs. Carl Bodensteiner was installed as president of La Sertoma.

Other Sertoma officers are Emil Beranek, Paul Fitzwater and Frank Marrs, vice presidents; Sam Price, Sergeant at arms; Morris Huelle, secretary; Ron Ueberrhein, treasurer; George Reichenbach, Elmer Kohmetscher, Roy Carlson, Harry Rotthaus and John Scott, board of directors. Chairman of the board will be immediate past president Terry Doyle.

'74 Rose Winning Beauties

tage in front of tall, dark evergreens or shrubs, and would make an excellent medium height, fragrant flowering hedge. It produces clusters of well shaped blooms on long stems.

Where Bahia is tall, Bon Bon is low and compact. Bon Bon's flowers are slightly smaller, open, cup shaped. They create a massive display of pink and white just about hiding all foliage. It can be used in any planting where a prodigious mass of color is desired. Large, dense clusters of bicolor blossoms, richly fragrant, are produced continuously from spring until late fall.

Bon Bon shows good resistance to black spot and mildew

This award winner was produced by William Warriner of Tustin, Calif. and is the result of a cross between Bridal Pink and Yellow Seedling No. 58-6792.

The only hybrid tea to win a 1974 award, Perfume Delight is a clear pink rose with a rich tea fragrance.

Perfume Delight has long, pointed buds of rich, deep pink, gradually opening to a beautifully shaped, high centered flower of clearest pink.

This winner is a pink rose all the way from the outer tips of the petals, clear through to the heart of the bloom. The thirty petals have a thick, satiny texture and form roses some 5" across, usually on single stems.

Perfume Delight forms a vigorous well-branched, medium height plant, well clothed with large, leathery dark green foliage.

Always plant this rose in the front of a bed, along a walk, or by an entrance where its beauty and perfume can be readily seen and appreciated.

This hybrid tea winner was developed by O. L. Weeks of Ontario, Calif.

Bon Bon produces clusters of pink and white flowers that hide its foliage.

All glassed up and no place to go. That's the problem facing Lincoln environmentalists, who have 40 to 50 tons of glass to dispose of.

Ecology Group Ponders Ways To Cash In on Ground Glass

The trouble with ground glass is you cannot eat it, smoke it, drink it or turn it into a sport.

That's what the Citizens for Environmental Improvement have discovered and they're the authorities. They've got 40 or 50 tons of the stuff.

When they started grinding glass a couple years ago, there was a plan to ship it to Streator, Ill., to a construction company that would use it as sand is used in concrete.

The firm in Streator is paying $20 a ton for ground glass. It costs $23 a ton to ship, plus the cost of the special barrels needed to ship it in.

A local construction company will use it but won't pay for it, according to Susan Samson, recycling task force chairman.

But you can't give glass away for free what with the time and cost of the grinding operation in addition to the cost of liability insurance.

They haven't given up, Mrs. Samson said, but they will not be receiving any more glass after April 27.

What they will be happy to receive is suggestions for using their collection.

Bartlette Will Keynote NebARC State Meeting

Kearney — Don Bartlette will be the keynote speaker at the opening session of the Nebraska Association for Retarded Citizens (NebARC) at the 19th annual state convention April 26-27.

Bartlette, chairman of the National Association for Retarded Citizens (NARC) committee on poverty and retardation, will speak at 8:30 a.m. April 27.

The convention will be held at Ramada Inn.

Bartlette's topic, "Macaroni at Midnight," is taken from the book he is writing of his personal experiences as a French-Indian, poor, handicapped person.

Dr. Phillip Roos, executive director of NARC, will speak at the Saturday night banquet.

At that time NebARC will present awards to the citizen of the year, employer of the year, organization of the year and special education teacher of the year.

Workshops and presentations will include Nebraska's status in dealing with its mentally handicapped citizens in the areas of diagnosis, education, vocational training, public attitudinal change, civil and legal rights.

Dr. Richard Meile, Lincoln, is president of the association. John Foley, Lincoln, is executive director.

Dr. Alvin Brightbill sits at the 124-year-old organ rediscovered this week in the basement of the Church of the Brethren.

Rebuilt and Will Be Heard Today

Century-Old Organ Discovered

The music ringing in the sanctuary of the Church of the Brethren. 37th and Sumner Sts., today rejoicing in the Risen Christ will be coming from a 124-year-old foot-pump organ rediscovered this week.

Alvin Franz Brightbill, director of the Speech Laboratory at the Chicago Theological Seminary and expert in Carillon bells, was in Lincoln this week to assist in pre-Easter celebrations in the church

Mrs. John Cullen, 2320 Sumner, said someone happened to mention that there was an old organ in the basement of the church.

Brightbill went down to take a look at it, according to Mrs. Cullen, and proceeded to take it apart and clean it.

April seems to be an important month in the organ's history. Inside, Brightbill found a plate dating its construction to April of 1850, notations showed it was last cleaned in April, 1859, and Brightbill restored it in April, 1974.

It is a Sweetbrothers organ purchased from Montgomery Ward for $61, presumably by catalog. Brightbill says it is in excellent condition.

The organ was donated to the church in 1910 by Jeanette Cooper. Now that it has been restored, Mrs. Cullen says that it will again be used in church services.

Brightbill will play the organ at the 10:30 service today

Lincoln Bank Plans Regional Data Axis

First National Lincoln Corp. of Lincoln plans to establish a data processing center in Norfolk sometime this fall.

The 2,000-square foot center will be used in conjunction with a new two-way telecommunications system that will provide participating banks in northeast Nebraska with computer processing services for handling various bank accounting functions.

When processed by the computer, all encoded information will be transmitted via data phone to First National's computer center in Lincoln. There it will be correlated with all previously recorded coded information stored in the memory bank of the master computer.

In turn, all account information will be brought up to date and coded data for reports will be transmitted from the master computer back to the Norfolk Center. Another machine in Norfolk will then transcribe the coded information and print summary reports that will be forwarded, along with checks and documents, to the participating banks the following morning.

Each participating bank will be equipped with a mini-computer that will be connected directly to the master computer in Lincoln. This will facilitate immediate two-way communication between the participating bank and the Lincoln computer center.

First National board chairman Burnham Yates termed the investment in the project as "substantial."

The Norfolk Center will be staffed by four to six technicians. Norman K. Frey of First National's Lincoln computer center, will manage the Norfolk operation.

N. B. Pont, 79, Ex-Stanton Resident, Dies

Funeral services for Nathen B. Pont, 79, former co-publisher of the Stanton Register for 32 years, are pending in Pamona, Calif. where he died Saturday.

He was a member of the State Liquor Control Commission from 1955 to 1961.

Pont is survived by his wife, Eileen, two daughters, and several grandchildren.

Potato Price Relief Foreseen

Washington (AP) — Consumers may see some relief in potato prices in a few months if farmers harvest as large a spring crop as the Agriculture Dept. experts. Spring potato output was estimated at 22.7 million 100-lb bags, up 7% from 1973, as of April 1 indications.

Sutton Girl Wins State Spelling Bee

Omaha (AP) — Luann Griess, 13, Sutton, won the Midwest Spelling Bee here Saturday.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis O. Greiss, Luann, an eighth-grader, topped 71 other youngsters from Iowa and Nebraska, and won an expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., for the national contest, $100 spending money and an inscribed pen and pencil set.

Glenda Eames, 14, Falls City, was second.

Glenda misspelled "stalagmite" in the 30th round, while Luann correctly spelled the same word, then did the same to "cannibalism" for the championship.

Non-Game Animals Facing Greater Chance of Extinction

Loss of habitat outranks environmental pollution, disease, predation, and over-utilization for commercial and hunting purposes as a cause of endangered species

So said Game and Parks Commission endangered species specialist Ross Lock in addressing the Wachiska Audubon Society

"When you take away its habitat, its food, its cover, it's going to die out," said Lock, adding that "regulated hunting has never caused a species to become endangered."

An example, he said, is the black-footed ferret, a Nebraska species which has suffered from programs to eradicate the prairie dog

A predator, the black-footed ferret preys on prairie dogs and dwells in their villages Indiscriminate use of poisons and auto exhaust fumes to kill the rodent may also destroy an occasional ferret, he said

The number of endangered species — especially birds and fish — is increasing despite management programs, Lock said Endangered mammal species have increased from 33 in 1967 to 44 in 1972

Nebraska's endangered species include the lake sturgeon, swift fox, whooping crane, peregrine falcon and black-footed ferret, he said.

Restoring endangered populations requires not only protection from killing, but ongoing management programs such as pollution abatement, captive breeding and reintroduction, trapping and transporting to new habitat — and all take money, Lock said

Game species have generally fared better because hunters and fishermen have footed the bill for research and management through their license and tag fees, he said.

General fund money is hard to get, and other money-raising schemes — including wildlife stamps and special license plates — have not proven highly successful, Lock said. He asked the group to provide ideas for fund-raising methods.

"What it amounts to," suggested chapter President Bruce Kennedy, "is if we're going to have more non-game wildlife, we're going to have to start footing the bill the time has come when we have to come up with our own program and come up with our own money."

Kennedy said he thought conservation groups and their members would be willing to "fork over" to protect non-game wildlife.

Kennedy and chapter wildlife chairman Ed Crain have been urging introduction of an all-inclusive non-game wildlife regulation bill in the Legislature

A resolution sponsored by Sen Gary Anderson of Axtell establishing an interim study committee to study the proposal was passed in the closing days of the Legislature

Humphrey Points to New Election Issue Under Reform

By John Chadwick

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Senate-passed campaign reform bill becomes law, a new issue in elections may be: Who is taking the most in contributions from the public treasury?

Consider what Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., had to say.

"What you are going to find is that you are going to have your campaign on whether or not you are the dollar man or the public finance man, or whether or not you take 25 per cent from the public treasury of 50 per cent from the public treasury

"In the meantime, the public will have no one talking about inflation or health or education. It will all be on whether or not you can be bought for 25 per cent or 50 per cent or not bought."

"All of that is just painting ourselves into a corner," said Humphrey, the Democratic presidential candidate in 1968.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., former GOP national chairman, agreed with Humphrey.

Said Dole: "Every senator will be trotting around saying, 'I did not take as much as he did from the public treasury. I raised my money.'

"As I stated there will be T shirts that will have printed on them 'Your Tax Dollar at Work' and on the back will be printed 'total public financing'."

Humphrey and Dole were on opposite sides, with Humphrey supporting and Dole against use of tax funds to finance federal election campaigns.

But before the Senate at the moment was an amendment by Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., which was defeated later that would have provided for partial rather than full public financing of general election campaigns of presidential and congressional candidates.

Although major party candidates would be entitled to full government financing under the bill finally sent to the House, they could choose to rely exclusively on private contributions or opt for a combination of the two.

For example, candidate X might announce that he would not accept private contributions of more than $50 or $25 and finance the rest of his campaign with tax dollars.

But then his opponent, candidate Y, might say he wouldn't take any contributions of more than $10. Or he might say, he wasn't going to dip into tax revenues for any of his campaign costs.

Or as Humphrey told the Senate, a candidate could say "I don't think I'll take 50 per cent, because I hear that my opponent is going to take 50 per cent. I'll take 45 per cent. That makes me a 5 per cent better guy than the other fellow."

Humphrey said there ought to be standard rules, and he said that was the advantage of the Stevenson amendment.

Stevenson, who voted against the entire bill, emphasized that he is for partial but not 100 per cent government financing of campaigns.

He said that although the bill permits candidates to opt for private financing, "few would do so except for the doubtful purpose of waging a demagogic battle against those who dip into the public trough for their campaign funds."

As a result, Stevenson said the bill will effectively eliminate small contributions and thus a meaningful form of citizen participation in their government. And also he said it will unnecessarily drive up the costs to the Treasury and the taxpayer.

Said Stevenson in a statement explaining his vote:

"This bill says the citizen can contribute nothing to the candidate of his choice — work for him, yes, spend up to $1,000 in advertising of his own buying, yes — but to give him $5 or $1,000, no because to do so, this bill implies, might corrupt a candidate for President of the United States or the Congress."

"On the face of it that makes no sense," Stevenson said. "It is downright wrong."

Hamsters Give Meningitis to Humans

UPI TELEPHOTO

Pet hamsters are responsible for 42 new cases of meningitis infection in Georgia, according to the National Center of Disease Control (NCDC). The illness is transmitted from hamsters to humans in the animals' urine and feces. NCDC and state health officials are tracing down the disease-carrying pets so they can be destroyed.

Tunnel Start Excites French

By Clyde Farnsworth
©The New York Times

Sangatte, France — Emile Bailly looks down at the deep incision in the field of winter wheat and expresses pride that the boring of a tunnel between France and England has started practically in his own front yard.

Last Nov. 15, even before seeding time for the winter crop, trucks, excavating equipment and workmen began arriving at this village five miles down the coast from Calais to dig a hole that has excited the imagination of Europeans for two centuries.

Some 20 miles away at Shakespeare Cliff, Dover, British workmen have begun a similar initial phase of operations, while in London, British railways has already sold tickets on the train that some time in 1980 will take passengers for the first time under the straits of Dover.

Here and at Dover, the workmen are scooping out an access route to run 150 feet below sea level into the chalk bed, which will then be pierced by the main three-bore rail tunnel.

The tunnel will do lots of things, among them increasing the property values around Calais, which is one reason why Emile Bailly, who lives here with his wife and two children, is not averse to all the construction work.

Land values are already up with a heavy demand for housing.

The tunnel, which is to cost $2 billion at today's prices, has its problems, but there is a good deal more optimism that this project will finally be completed, even though it has been scuttled after similar high hopes in the past.

An engineer under Louis XV in the middle of the 18th century sketched out the idea and won a prize and some gasps in the court but little more.

Another engineer tempted Napoleon 50 years later with a proposal to build a tunnel, lit by oil lamps and aired by chimneys rising above the waves for the horse-drawn carriages of the day. Napoleon may have been interested but Britain wasn't.

Other plans flourished in the 19th century, leading to the creation of the Channel Tunnel Co. which actually began work digging a tunnel in 1878. Five years later London saw it as a threat not only to security but the British way of life.

Postwar British governments have maintained the tunnel no longer poses a problem of military security, but the chief opposition still comes from Britain — local authorities fear overcrowding in the already densely packed southeast; environmentalists want no more big trucks and cars fouling the countryside; shipping interests fear increased competition.

There is always the possibility that the new Labor government could scrap the project even though it was begun more or less under bipartisan sponsorship. While the access tunneling has begun, it will require a new decision to start the main tunnel cores, a phase that is expected to be reached in July.

That could be a convenient point for the British to hold up work if they decide to use their acquiescence to extract new concessions on the Common Market from France.

The 32-mile tunnel would shorten the rail trip from London to Paris by half — from more than seven hours to three hours and 40 minutes. By 1990 fully a third of the 100 million people then crossing the channel would be using it.

MD Charged After Abortion

BOSTON (AP) — A Harvard University medical authority says that a basic issue left unresolved by the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling on abortion may be decided following the indictment of a Boston physician in connection with a legal abortion.

Dr. Kenneth Edelin, chief resident in obstetrics and gynecology at Boston City Hospital, is charged with manslaughter in the death of a "baby boy" after an abortion performed at the hospital last October.

Hospital officials have suspended Edelin. Two other hospital physicians indicted on charges of illegal dissection of fetuses in a separate case also have been suspended.

Dr. Steven L. Saltzman, president of the Boston City Hospital House Officers Association, said Edelin was suspended without pay in an "ill-advised and inappropriate" move by officials.

"As far as we can ascertain, Dr. Edelin was performing his duties in accordance with accepted gynecological practices throughout Boston and the country and within the recent U.S. Supreme Court guidelines," Saltzman said.

The district attorney's office has refused to disclose "the manner and means" of the death of the 24-week-old fetus. Asst. Dist. Atty. Newman A. Flanagan said an investigation began after his office learned no death certificate had been filed for the fetus.

William J. Curran, professor of legal medicine at Harvard, said the issue revolves around the question of when a fetus can sustain life outside the womb and what the physician's responsibility is to exert every effort to keep an aborted fetus alive.

President OKs Bill For Indian Loans

Key Biscayne, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Saturday designed to spur economic development for American Indians by making it easier for them to get insured loans and grants of up to $50,000 for small businesses.

The loan guarantee provisions of this bill are especially significant. Nixon said in a statement issued by the White House as he signed the Indian Financing Act.

"The Bureau of Indian Affairs, which has been in the business of making loans to Indians for decades, can cite solid evidence showing that Indians are good loan risks. Unfortunately, the business community has not been fully aware of this fact.

"The loan guarantee program is the administration's way of backing up our conviction with federal money. I hope that enactment of this bill will greatly enhance the financial attractiveness of Indian borrowers in the private sector."

Under the bill, the secretary of the interior will be able to give federal guarantees for private loans to Indian organizations and individuals. A second provision establishes an Indian business development program to make grants of up to $50,000 per enterprise for small Indian-run businesses.

Nixon said he took "special pleasure" in signing the bill and said he hoped it would help to "create a new era in which the future of Indian people is determined primarily by Indian acts and Indian decisions."

The White House said Nixon had signed another bill Friday in Washington to provide money for the government to publish a seven-volume reference work entitled "Indian Affairs: Laws and Treaties," along with a Handbook of Federal Indian Law and a collection of Interior Dept. legal opinions on Indian affairs.

Bleak, Freezing Siberian Plain Booming With Young Russians;

WORLD

By Ray Moseley

Nizhnevartonsk, USSR (UPI) — Ten years ago, Nizhnevartovsk and neighboring Surgut were sleepy Siberian wilderness villages of wooden houses, inhabited mostly by fur trappers and fishermen.

Today each is a city of more than 50,000, and young people are pouring in at the rate of 7,000 to 10,000 a year, according to Soviet officials.

But how long will they stay? Once they have experienced a Siberian winter, can anything keep them down on the tundra?

These are crucial questions, for the future development of the Soviet economy will hang in part on how successful officials are in attracting young workers to the vast oil fields of this area and keeping them here.

Elsewhere in Siberia, population is on the decrease despite the lure of higher wages, longer vacations and other special benefits.

But in western Siberia, officials are investing billions in a gamble that they can hold the newcomers.

For some, the region clearly has its appeal.

"I came here two years ago from Karaganda because I wanted to see Siberia," said Viktor Grudachov, 34, a worker at a Surgut electric power plant.

"I like it much better here. I like to hunt in the pine forests and I like the fishing. Here the winter is a real winter."

For all who come, life is dominated by the fierce Siberian climate. Some find it challenging. Some are driven mad by it.

In the depths of winter, darkness hangs over the region as long as 20 hours a day, the snows pile up and oil drilling crews work in temperatures down to 68 degrees below zero.

In summer, the sun sets for only two hours and all day and all night there is mud everywhere. Mosquitos and gnats swarm out of the swamps by the millions, and men plaster themselves with insect repellent and work under mosquito nets.

In American terms, life here is somewhat comparable to living four months in the Okefeenokee swamp in Georgia and the rest of the year in the Alaskan tundra.

Spring Heralded

Spring comes to western Siberia when an icebreaker moves down the Ob, followed by a ship bringing supplies. Then there is a constant race to ship in as much as the river can carry before it freezes over again.

An icebreaker also heralds the winter clearing a path for the last ship out in September.

One of the special problems imposed by the climate is that almost everything necessary to life must be brought in from the outside, from heavy industrial equipment to materials needed for building houses.

There are no farms in this region. So almost everything eaten must be shipped in during the summer, or flown in during the winter. Some foods are not always available.

"We often have fresh milk," said Vladimir Litvakov, chief geologist in the Samotlor oil fields. "We always have meat."

Newsmen visiting a shopping center in one new housing complex in Surgut found plenty of canned goods and fish, a limited supply of pork sausages and bacon but no fresh vegetables or fruit.

Even culture has to be imported. A theater is being built in Nizhnevartovsk, but entertainment is provided now by troupes of actors sent out occasionally from Moscow, Novosibirsk and Tyumen.

Satellites carry Moscow television to the Siberians and each town has at least one movie theater.

"Romantic Siberia"

Soviet officials constantly appeal to young people through newspapers, magazines and other media to come to "the front line of romance" in Siberia, and in Nizhnevartovsk and Surgut the campaign clearly has had some success.

They say Nizhnevartovsk and Surgut will become "base" towns from which workers will be taken by helicopter to distant oil and gas fields to work and then flown back to their families.

In both towns, the old log houses of the original settlers are gradually being pulled down to be replaced by the featureless, high-rise apartments characteristic of most of the Soviet Union.

Officials also are planning to invest heavily in nurseries, kindergartens, schools, hospitals and shops to serve the new housing districts.

Hothouses will be attached to the apartment complexes, with each resident having one square yard in the hothouses to grow vegetables.

Hothouses already have been built at most schools to provide vegetables for the school lunch program.

While a large part of the new cities still is on the drawing boards, many workers are living two, three and four to a room in dormitory buildings, each room sparsely furnished only with beds, wardrobes and a colorful rug hanging on the wall.

Some of the workers evidently take refuge from their bleak surroundings in drink, a problem that is widespread among workers throughout the Soviet Union.

On a walk around Surgut one night, a newsman saw several young workers being helped out of restaurants by their friends, one so drunk that he had two friends supporting him on each side and one propelling him from behind.

Soviet Future

In this hostile land the Soviet future is being built.

Nizhnevartovsk, once a village of fur trappers, fishermen and political exiles, is the new capital of the Soviet oil industry. In the swamplands of Samotlor 18 miles to the north, lie one of the world's great oil fields, a reserve of several billion tons comparable in wealth to the Alaskan north slope discovery.

Russians Celebrate Easter in Church

By Hedrick Smith
©The New York Times

Moscow — To the world the Soviet Union is the nation that marks its main national holiday the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution with a military parade through Red Square.

Yet tonight thousands of candlelight processions circling churches at midnight attracted literally millions of people to witness the traditional Russian celebration of Easter — their numbers testimony to the modest religious revival here in recent years.

Over half a century after the revolution, religious tradition and belief remain deeply imbedded in the life of this officially atheistic nation. Churches claim more than twice as many followers as the Soviet Communist Party does members.

Crowds of curious young people cram the courtyards outside the onion-domed churches at Easter to glimpse the gilded robes of priests, the ornate church interiors and colorful rites and to catch an exotic whiff of incense or hear the chanting of the choir. However a large majority of church-going Christians are older people.

Among all religious holidays in this country Easter with its onion-dyed eggs, sweet, curdled cream cheese, raisin cake, family gatherings and religious pageantry is the most meaningful.

"Everyone celebrates Easter — believers and nonbelievers alike," commented a middle-aged Communist Party member who said visiting churches is one of his favorite vacation pastimes. A 30-year-old engineer who keeps an icon in the corner of his room, the traditional place of prayer, qualified that observation: "Not everyone, but very, very many."

Pravda and other party publications acknowledged their concern over what Communist, the party's ideological publication, termed "the vitality and tenacity" of religion.

Just a few weeks ago Pravda carried a long article calling for stepped-up atheistic indoctrination among the young because of "a notable increase" in religious interest among young men and women, coupled with disturbing "indifference toward issues of atheism."

"The dying off of religion under Socialism is not an automatic process," the party newspaper said, but requires increasingly sophisticated anti-religious propaganda.

Foreigners run into evidence of aroused interest in religion in many places. A foreign churchman was told by a Moscow priest that he has little time to counsel young people because he, like many other priests, is so busy doing 1,000 baptisms a year. An intourist guide asked an American businessman for a Bible. Another young guide joined a foreign group in lighting a candle at the Zagorsk monastery.

An athletic coach lamented to foreign visitors that his school was built on the site of one of the most beautiful churches of his city demolished a few years ago. A young woman with great curiosity drew out a visiting Roman Catholic priest to explain his religion and then, when he observed that she had her own ideology, responded "but not like yours."

Safe Lids On Drugs Required By FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — If they aren't doing it already, the nation's 55,000 retail pharmacists will have to put most oral prescription drugs in child-proof containers beginning Tuesday.

The federal requirement is designed to reduce the estimated 500,000 accidental poisonings from all sources that kill up to 500 preschoolers every year.

The sometimes tricky bottle caps won't be mandatory, however, for nitroglycerine and isosorbine dinitrate, drugs used by heart patients who may need them quickly.

And the requirement has been stayed for oral contraceptives, aerythromycine anhydrous cholestyramine and potassium supplements in effervescent tablets while the government considers proposals to exempt them permanently.

Those drugs generally pose little danger of poisoning and, in the case of birth control pills, child-resistant packaging would foul up the calendar built into the container, according to manufacturers.

Patients may legally ask their pharmacist to use noncomplying pill bottles, for instance, if they suffer from a handicap which would make opening the child-proof containers difficult, if no small children are at home or if they don't like the inconvenience.

About 16,000 children under age 5 accidentally swallow prescription drugs every year. About 1,230 children were sent to the hospital in 1972 and at least 56 died, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The commission took over responsibility for policing the Poisoning Prevention Packaging Act from the Food and Drug Administration last year.

About 1,000 volunteer housewives, college students and retired persons have been checking supermarkets, drug stores and other retail establishments for compliance with federal poison prevention packaging requirements already in effect. They cover aspirin and liquid furniture polish containing at least 10 per cent mineral oil or petroleum distillates.

Both products have been required to have child-proof packaging since last year, although supplies manufactured before the effective date of the federal regulations may continue to be sold.

Child-resistant closures also are required for 4,300 types of sedatives, barbiturates and amphetamines, and certain kinds of windshield antifreezes, liniments, oven cleaners, drain openers and lighter fluids.

Manufacturers are allowed to produce one size of each product in conventional packages for the aged and handicapped, provided that it is labeled with a warning.

Disaster Areas To Get Help Of Lincolnites

Two Lincolnites have joined the more than 4,000 Red Cross volunteers and staff giving aid in tornado stricken areas in the east.

Mellenie Estes, Red Cross nursing director, and Mrs. Ruby McArthur, volunteer nurse, have been assigned to the disaster operation and will report to Louisville, Ky., for further assignment.

Harold Hill, division manager of the Lancaster chapter, said Saturday that $716 had been contributed so far by county residents for the relief effort.

He said contributions can be sent to Aid for Tornado Victims, American Red Cross, 1701 E St., Lincoln.

Ellen Dewey Hopes to Prove Politics Is Fun

"Politics is for people — including the little ones."

Ellen Sim Dewey, candidate for the 26th District legislative seat, dressed up in a bunny costume Saturday and distributed Easter eggs to children in northeast Lincoln shopping centers.

Ms. Dewey said that interesting children in politics is one aim of her campaign.

"When the interest of children is aroused about government, children tend to carry that interest to adulthood," she said.

The Bellevue College political science professor said her own interest in politics began in her youth and added that she hoped to show that politics could be fun.

Tax Troubles

Drugs Program

Young Police Officers Get Rehabilitation Experience

By John Gleason

"We're going to let you be drug users tonight," said Dr. Olga Bom, director of Full Circle of the Lincoln Lancaster Drug-Project.

The two young police officers visibly relaxed when she added the usage part would be skipped and they would start at the rehabilitation stage.

The officers worked with the people at Full Circle most of an afternoon and evening as part of their training for the recruit class now being conducted by the Lincoln Police Dept.

Dr. Bom said they would be shown how to do some relaxing exercises to relieve tension and would go through some of the group counseling and therapy sessions.

Steve Worster, of the Lincoln Police Dept., and Don Jenkins, a newly recruited Lincoln park ranger, felt the sessions with the clients at Full Circle would help them to better understand people with a drug problem.

"It puts a human aspect into it. We can see they're people with problems," Worster said.

Dr. Bom said she feels the program is very worthwhile, and that it allows her clients to see the officers as people, not just uniforms.

She described a visit by officers from the last recruit class as a success. Some of the patients baked brownies as a treat.

Lt. John Miller, training officer for the Lincoln Police Dept., said the ten recruits now in training spent one day with local service agencies as part of their training.

He noted this has been tried once before on an experimental basis and that if its success continues, "we'll attempt to expand it into a formal part of recruit training."

Miller said that because of time limitations in the training there's only one day available for the field work with the agencies, but they have made some adjustments to get the most out of it.

Another agency visited by this recruit class was the Lincoln Information Service to the Elderly, under the direction of James Zietlow.

"This is the second group we've had, and we've found it to be a useful experience from our viewpoint," Zietlow said. "We know from our two years of experience that a good number of our referrals come from the police," he added.

Zietlow said an example of this was provided by the last recruits to work with his office. He said the officers came across an elderly woman with a housing problem on their way back to police headquarters and were able to notify his office so the woman could be helped.

Lt. Miller said the other agencies that were visited included the VA Hospital, People's City Mission and the Family Shelter, the Chemical Dependency Unit at Lincoln General Hospital and Cedars Home for Children.

Four Omahans Nominated for County Judge

Gov. J. J. Exon said Saturday he has received the names of three Omaha attorneys and one Omaha Municipal Court Judge for nomination to fill a vacancy on the Douglas County District Court.

Exon said the candidates selected by the Judicial Nominating Commission are John T. Grant, John J. Hanley, and Benjamin M. Wall, all Omaha attorneys; and Paul J. Hickman, an Omaha Municipal Court judge.

Exon said he would make his selection sometime next week.

The vacancy was created by the appointment of Judge Donald Brodkey to the State Supreme Court.

Rural Sites Ask County For Lights

Lancaster County Commissioners are expected to act Tuesday on a request for a street light in the village of Cheney discussed at last week's meeting.

In approving a request last week for a street light on Pinelake Road near the entrance of the Southeast Fire District station, the board members indicated there was a need for a policy on the street lights for rural areas. Until such a policy is established each request will have to be considered individually.

County Engineer Walter Hoppe said he is sure requests will continue to increase as rural areas develop.

Also on Tuesday's agenda is a special meeting to issue Industrial Development Act bonds for a SealRite project

Hyperactive Children

Schools Have No Room for Johnny

By Jack Kennedy

Johnny is only seven years old.

He has just returned to school after being "excluded" for a week, as the official notice to his mother said, "for his own welfare and best interest."

Johnyy is hyperactive. He is emotionally disturbed. He comes to school early and strikes at the windows, administrators said. Teachers "just can't control him in class," although he takes medication.

An administrator noticed just in time that he was walking railroad tracks near the school. At his previous school another administrator said "I have other kids to look after. I can't run him down all of the time."

The mother, a solo parent, goes to work early. Often Johnny is left with a junior high-age brother. At times the child must be tied with a rope to control his activity.

The terse two-paragraph exclusion notice hit the mother on April Fool's Day but "it wasn't a joke. It was for real," she said.

She was bitter toward the school system until she met officials and they decided Johnny could return to school. He is a victim, officials admit.

A victim of classes that were small (15) at one school and larger (22) at the latest — too large for a hyperactive, insecure child with a single parent working to keep both boys in school.

"I'm just as frustrated as she is," student services director Eldon Heskett said after the parent conference.

The youngster has been in several foster homes, where he could not be controlled. He has tried the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation.

If he becomes too much to handle in a conventional classroom, it was agreed he may be sent back again — to a house empty much of the time.

"We don't feel he should really be in a regular classroom," Heskett said, "but we don't have a classroom for him."

Admission to a special class for the emotionally distrubed has been approved, Heskett said, "but there just isn't any room right now."

Donald Sherrill, special education director for Lincoln schools, is equally frustrated by a waitng list of other Johnnies who need minute by minute supervision.

There has been enough space for the emotionally disturbed, Sherrill said. Passage last year of new special education legislation will bring more money and more classes, he said, but the school system may never catch up.

When Sherrill, former state special education director, came to the public school post six years ago there were two classes for the emotionally distrubed. "Now we have eight, and we have a longer waiting list than we had then."

Fifty-six children are in the special classes. At least 15 kids have pretty high priority, like Johnny, and 25 or 30 others should be in the program but are not, the director said.

He has asked for two more classes for the emotionally disturbed next fall but doesn't know if he will get them.

Sherrill also needs more room for learning disabilities classes. He wants to give regular classroom teachers more help and put a resource person in each school so such children don't have to attend special classes.

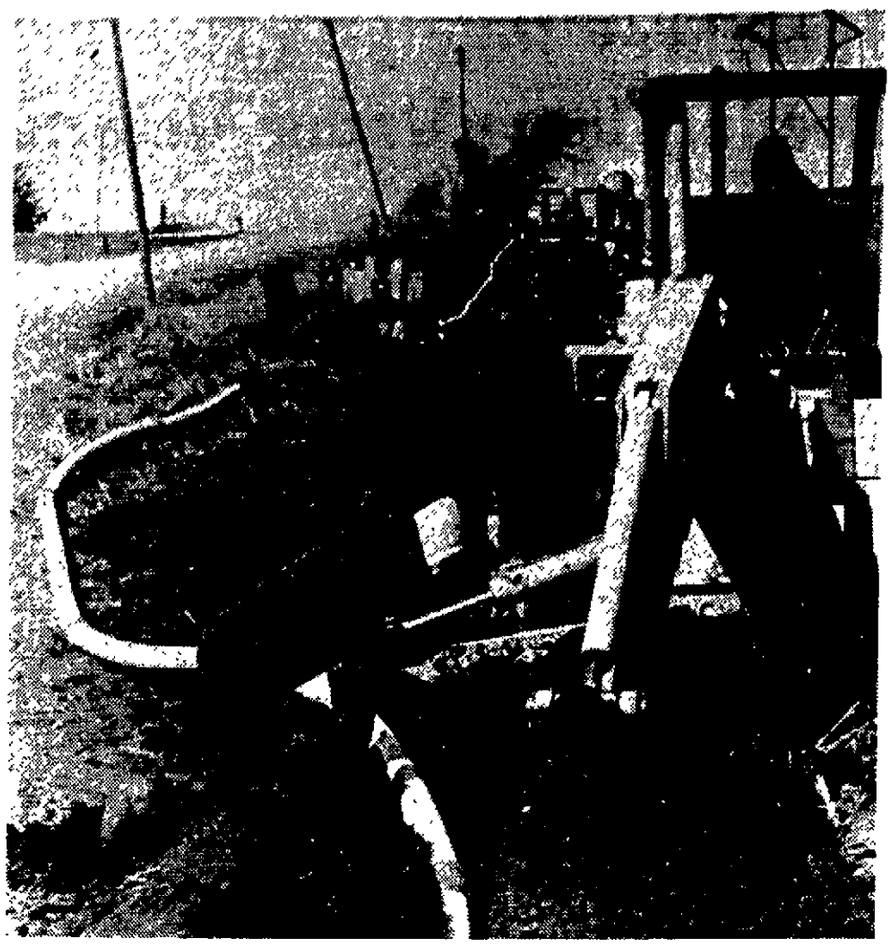
He questioned whether all children with problems should be "siphoned off" from regular rooms. Qualified teachers of the emotionally disturbed and those with learning disabilities are hard to find, Sherill said. Few colleges train them.

So the job is left to the regular teacher. She will work with Johnnny as long as she can. But she may have to eject him again because there is no room for him.

Theology Prof Joins CU Board

The Rev. John M. Ginsterblum, S.J., an associate professor of theology in the Creighton University College of Arts and Sciences, has been appointed to the CU board of directors.

Father Ginsterblum joined the Creighton faculty in 1957 and served as chairman of the department of theology from 1958 to 1965.



The arrival of real spring weather has helped bring construction of Rural Water Dist. 1 ahead of schedule.

Fall Completion Probable

Water District Progressing

Progress is well underway on Lancaster County's Rural Water Dist. 1, according to Dean Connett of Hoskins-Western-Sonderegger, engineering consultants for the $1.5 million project.

Designed to serve the towns of Bennet, Panama, Martell and Cheney and rural customers near Roca and Walton, the job is slated for completion on Dec. 7, but Connett says the contractor is ahead of schedule and should be finished earlier this fall.

Line laying will cover 180 miles when completed, with over 50 miles already done. Contractor on the project is Eatherly Contractors, Garden City, Kan.

Iowa Tax Relief Controversy

Food Sales Are Taxing Problem

By Val G. Corley

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Is the bill to exempt food and prescription drugs from the 3 percent Iowa state sales tax dead?

Many state legislators are saying privately that it is.

But Lt. Gov. Art Neu says the sales tax exemption has "not necessarily" breathed its last breath.

And Gov. Robert Ray still contends that the sales tax exemption is the best way for the state to go for tax relief.

Those legislators who say the sales tax exemption is dead agree that the legislature will grant some sales tax relief before it adjourns for the year, probably at the end of this month.

But they say increasing pressure from local grocery store owners to dump the measure is taking its toll along with the minimum of $31 million a year the proposal would cost the state treasury.

The Senate originally passed the measure to exempt food staples, prescription drugs and artificial limbs from the sales tax. The Senate version would retain the tax on such foodstuffs as cookies, candy and soft drinks.

The House, in its version, expanded the definition of food to exempt all grocery items that could be purchased under the federal food stamp program. That version would also exempt home heating fuels.

The Senate, concerned that exempting heating fuels would cost the state an extra $8 million annually above the $31 million for food and drugs, rejected the House version.

The bill was sent to a Senate-House conference committee to work out a compromise on March 3. That committee has not yet met.

And legislative leaders say the way the legislature has been spending the state's almost $200 million treasury surplus, there may not be enough money left to finance even the food and drug exemption.

So the conference committee has been given authority to study other, cheaper tax relief measures too.

Sen. Lowell Junkins, D-Montrose, says grocers have convinced him that exempting food from the sales tax would bring about higher food costs.

He said food stores in the larger cities have cash registers that can easily separate taxable from tax exempt food items. But the rural stores do not and would have to pass along their extra costs through price increases.

"That's a lot of baloney," said Neu. "Other states have it (the tax exemption) for food and it works all right."

The lieutenant governor said stores already have to separate grocery items for food stamps from other items they sell.

But Neu admitted the tax exemption program might have to be dumped because of the cost.

If it is, Neu said a tax relief package suggested by Sen. Tom Riley, R-Cedar Rapids, last week is "not a bad proposal."

Riley suggested expanding the eligibility for the property tax relief program for the elderly, exempting all Iowans who earn under $5,000 from the income tax, adopting the "Curtis plan" income tax standard deduction and increasing the inheritance tax exemption.

Riley said his tax relief package would result in an annual revenue loss to the state treasury of $19.2 million — almost $12 million less than exempting food and drugs from the sales tax.

Property tax relief for the low income elderly could be increased to cover those with an annual income of up to $8,000 at a cost to the state of only $3.2 million a year, Riley contends.

Currently, the state picks up to 95% of the property tax for elderly persons who have an income of less than $1,000 a year and progressively picks up less until it absorbs only 25% of the property tax for those with an income of between $5,000 and $6,000.

The Riley plan would increase the percentage of property tax picked up on all but the lowest step and would have the state pay 25% of the property tax for the elderly with incomes of between $7,000 and $8,000.

Riley said the state could exempt all Iowans earning less than $5,000 from the income tax at a cost of only $3 million a year. Currently income under $4,000 is tax exempt.

The Cedar Rapids Republican's proposal would include the inheritance tax exemptions already approved by the House but not considered by the Senate.

This would double inheritance tax exemptions for spouses from the current $40,000 to $80,000 and for children from $15,000 to $30,000.

And it would, unlike today, presume that joint tenancy property is the result of joint efforts of both the husabnd and wife.

Riley estimates this would cost the state $4.8 million a year.

Riley's last proposal, the Curtis plan — originally proposed by Sen. Warren Curtis, R-Cherokee — would raise the standard deduction on income tax from $250 to $750 or from 5% to 10% of the income. This would cost the state $8.2 million a year.

The Curtis plan is popular with many legislators and Neu admits that many Senate leaders are considering a combination package of that plan and a $12 annual sales tax rebate to low income Iowans.

"The Curtis plan has a lot to recommend it, but politically it is difficult to understand," Neu said.

"A lot of people would not understand what we did once we did it," the lieutenant governor said of the Curtis plan.

Although many Senate leaders would prefer the $12 sales tax credit and the Curtis plan, Neu admits that House leaders do not like the tax credit, because those who qualify would have to apply for it at the end of the year.

"From talks with House Speaker Andrew Varley and House Majority Leader Edgar Holden, it comes across clearly — they are against the credit," Neu said.

The lieutenant governor said the tax exemption compromise could be worked out as early as next week — or it could wait until the "last minute" of the legislative session.

"To some extent, how much we have for tax relief depends on what we do with appropriations," Neu said. And that won't be known until the final hours of the session.

The lieutenant governor said he still likes the sales tax exemption for food and drugs because "it does make the sales tax more progressive."

Omahans Uneasy About Iowa Ending Food Tax

Concern about elimination of Iowa's 3% sales tax on food is one of the items fueling Omahan uneasiness about the school aid bill passed by the 1974 Nebraska Legislature.

Financing that bill will require the Nebraska state sales tax rate to be increased next Jan. 1 from 2½% to 3½%.

Omaha's 1% municipal sales tax is in addition to the state's sales tax.

Thus, the Omaha sales tax on commodities, including food, would be 4½% next Jan. 1, as against the possibility of no sales tax on food purchases in neighboring Council Bluffs. Nebraska's sales tax has never been applied to drug purchases.

For several years, Iowa had a food sales tax credit system identical to the one employed by Nebraska. It was repealed when Republicans succeeded Democrats in control of the Iowa Statehouse in Des Moines.

The Republican-controlled Iowa Legislature this year turned down Democratic efforts to revive the food sales tax credit operation.

Jantzen Latest Move In Chamber Campaign

The decision by Jantzen Inc., national swim and sportswear manufacturer, to construct a distribution center in Lincoln is the latest nudge in what the Chamber of Commerce hopes will become a major push to establish similar operations here.

Duane Vicary, director of the Chamber's industrial development division, said the Chamber is "making a definite attempt to get such companies to move here. It fits in with what we want for the city."

In addition to the Jantzen move, the last decade has seen at least two other major companies settle their distributing centers in Lincoln.

Ace Hardware established a 340,000-square-foot facility here in 1971. The operation employs more than 100 persons, Vicary said.

In 1962, the Fleming Co. built a 200,000-square-foot wholesale food distribution center in the Capital City's South Industrial Park.

The $2 million Jantzen facility, to be located in the Union Pacific Industrial Park, will cover 153,000 square feet and will employ 150 persons.

Vicary said both Ace Hardware and Jantzen considered Lincoln's central location a major benefit. Ace Hardware wanted a location to serve the 17 or 18 central states, Vicary said. Jantzen's Lincoln operation will serve all 50 states.

In addition to the central location, Lincoln's access to trucking via the Interstate Highway system is attractive to wholesale distributors, Vicary said. He said Jantzen primarily will use truck transportation. Ace Hardware has used both truck and train for shipping products.

Easter Eggs Set for Xenia

Xenia, Ohio (AP) — The Easter Bunny may be wearing olive drab and riding in a jeep in tornado-stricken Xenia.

The Ohio National Guard said Friday its 178 military policemen in Xenia are preparing about 90 dozen eggs for the holiday. Saturday night patrols will be doubled, with four men on patrol instead of two, the guard said.

Two of the guardsmen will be dropping Easter baskets on doorsteps.

Agreement Reached on Campaign Finance Forms

Detailed new forms which all candidates for state and county political offices must henceforth use to report income and expenditures are expected to go to the printers next week

Deputy Sec. of State Ralph Englert reported basic agreement on what data the forms should contain was reached in a Friday meeting

Attending that advisory session, Englert said, were representatives of both state political parties, Common Cause, the League of Women Voters and attorneys knowledgeable about political campaigns.

It was a bill passed by the 1973 Legislature which directed improved political campaign financial reporting — Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner's LB267.

However, the secretary of state's office delayed development of a new reporting form until it became certain no further refinements might be required by legislation approved by the 1974 Unicameral. None were

Englert said the multi-page form should provide "a lot more information" to the public about where candidates get their money and how they spend it. There will even be requirements for disclosure of in-kind or non-money gifts, such as loaned use of equipment and vehicles.

Under Nebraska law, identification of a political donor is required only when the gift is $100 or more — or a thing of value in excess of $100.

That does not prevent disclosure of gift-givers of lesser amount, Englert noted.

All candidates who filed with the secretary of state for primary election ballot placement will be provided with the new financial forms as quickly as they come from printers. Then copies will go to county officials so candidates for county races may also comply with state laws.

To some extent, Englert said, the new state forms are modeled on federal campaign disclosure documents.

Besides vegetables, Rev. Wilson plants the seed of "an ecological approach to living." He practices what he preaches in a backyard organic garden, where "the earth's increase" includes potatoes planted above ground and picked like squash.

Columbus Minister: Organic Gardens Help Man Survive

By Joel Thorson
Outstate Bureau

Columbus — Booming interest in organic gardening has been explained as an economic alternative to high grocery prices; an increasingly popular leisure-time pursuit; a retreat to a simpler time; and part of the back-to-the-earth fad.

It's probably all those things. But it's more, according to the Rev. J. Graydon Wilson.

It's part of an awakening environmental awareness that will enable mankind to survive.

"I think we're on the threshold of learning how to live as a technological society on this planet, and do it successfully," said the Methodist minister, who besides preaching and gardening, teaches a Platte College community service course on gardening and heads an organic gardening club.

For Rev. Wilson, teaching organic practices is part of his ministerial calling.

"As a minister, I should say that we have a social and religious responsibility to preserve the environment for future generations," he said. Organic practices, "if done by enough people on a large scale, would make a significant contribution," he added.

"For the seed shall be prosperous," the Lord of Hosts is said to have told the prophet Zechariah in Zech. 8:12. "The vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things."

So Rev. Wilson said he sows the seed of "an ecological approach to living" whenever and wherever he can — because, responsibility aside, the remnant of this people are going to need the vine's fruit, the heavens' dew, and the ground's increase before long.

"If people are going to live strictly on a cash economy, they're going to have rough going unless they learn to enrich their own lives by their own efforts," Rev. Wilson said. "Inflation is becoming more of a threat."

Yet low-and fixed-income people aren't the only ones attracted to organic gardening. "I've got neighbors in what is a fashionable residential area spading up plots in their lawns," he said. "And there are young couples walking away from good-paying jobs and going onto the land and absolutely committing themselves to a homestead type of living."

"Homestead living" is Rev. Wilson's term for "a simple life rooted in the soil, with a minimum damage to the environment and maximum use of available plant and animal resources. It means supplying as much of your own food as possible, while disposing of as much of your own waste products as possible.

The key, of course, is that many waste products — grass clippings, manure, kitchen wastes, vacuum sweepings, feathers, fur, line — are organic and contain abundant plant nutrients. If "recycled" as compost, they can greatly enrich soil.

Widespread organic gardening would also reduce the demand for fossil-fuel fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides, while taking the strain off the municipal landfill, he said. It also provides therapeutic relaxation.

Not only do Rev. and Mrs. Wilson practice what they preach in their backyard vegetable, fruit, herb and flower garden, but they plan to commit themselves to homestead living on a 1½-acre plot in Fremont when he retires in a few years. A big organic garden will be supplemented by two or three beef cattle and perhaps some other animals.

The Fremont plot has already been under cultivation for eight years, Rev. Wilson says, which is important because "it really takes years to develop rich, well balanced soil."

After three years, the Wilsons' 3,000-sq. ft. backyard garden in Columbus "is beginning to show results," he says. In an eye-pleasing surrounding designed by Mrs. Wilson (including flowerbeds, a martin house, fruit trees, pool and fountain) the couple raise 32 vegetables, nine fruits and berries, and a variety of herbs.

The garden receives almost all of their kitchen wastes, and the Wilsons "practically live out of our garden in the summer," Rev. Wilson said.

Besides composting and mulching, Rev. Wilson said it is important to rotate crops, alternating legumes with non-legumes, above-ground crops with below-ground crops, to prevent pest infestations.

Companion plantings — for instance, onions or garlic with roses — further reduce the pest threat. Rev. Wilson mulches everything but onions with grass clippings, using the clippings as next year's compost base.

His potatoes show the value of mulch in providing shade and preserving ground moisture. Rev. Wilson plants them above ground and covers them with a thick layer of grass clippings. Last year's crop, which he said could have been better had he kept the mulch moister, was 100 pounds of potatoes in 75 feet of row.

And he didn't even have to dig for them.

Without disparaging farmers, who "have to make a living," Rev. Wilson hopes the current fertilizer pinch will show more of them they can make an adequate living without chemicals.

"I stress to my students that there are two ways of going about this," he said. "There's the chemical, and there's the organic. It's up to you to choose

"But I point out the virtues of organic gardening."

SPRING has SPRUNG
* And cautions been flung
Our lot's in full bloom
And it's high prices we'll doom,
Rare lovelies are all,
In them, drivin's a ball.
Such friendliness is beyond belief
And prices so low you'll feel like a thief.
The object of this rhyme is amusement not,
Really it's just to get you on our lot!
"BENT A PHRASE '74"

No Image Problem For Atkins

By John S. Wilson
(c) New York Times

New York — The recent well-publicized move of the Grand Ole Opry from its longtime home in musty old Ryman Auditorium in downtown Nashville to dazzingly modern quarters in Opryland on the outskirts of the city must have convinced even those who still think of country music in terms of "hillbillies" that something has happened to what was essentially backwoods folk music only a little more than 25 years ago. There have been — to quote a song that lives on the borderlines of Nashville music — some changes made.

Nashville is now the seat of one of the busiest music complexes in the world because what was once "country" music has reached such positive and universal popularity that President Nixon, in his search for favorable image-making settings, chose to appear at the gala opening of the Grand Ole Opry at Opryland, joining such luminaries of country music as Johnny Cash, Roy Acuff and the Carter Family.

But the man who epitomizes the change in country music more than anyone else in Nashville — and who has no image problems at all — missed the last Grand Old Opry at Ryman and the first show at Opryland.

Chet Atkins was giving a performance in Mobile at the time, playing the guitar that has taken him from a farm in the clinch mountains of eastern Tennessee to stardom not just at the Grand Ole Opry and before other country music audiences but, through jazz and classical music, to appearances with symphony orchestras — "although," he has admitted dryly, "when I play Bach it comes out a little country."

His fascination with the guitar began early, around age 6, as he remembers it. "My mother and I went to Knoxville and saw a blind man playing guitar on the street for handouts," Atkins once recalled. "He was happy, all alone and just 'digging' time and I loved him. It made me cry — not out of pity but out of envy. The most important thing in the world, it seemed to me then, was to be able to play guitar for a living, even if it meant being blind."

But Atkins's "mature" decision to be a guitarist did not come until he was 14 when his two-tube radio picked up Merle Travis playing guitar on WLW out of Cincinnati and "as soon as I heard him I knew what I wanted to do."

That was 36 years ago. Since then, in addition to his guitar virtuosity, which won him election to the Coun-

Mineral Output Up in Oregon

Salem, Ore. (UPI) — The value of minerals produced in Oregon in 1973 increased 8.77% over the previous year, the State Department of Geology reports.

Higher production of sand and gravel, nickel, clays and cement accounts for the increase.

The value of all minerals produced in Oregon was estimated at $83,231,000.

Fun, Frolic Among Musketeers

By Holly Spence

Richard Lester combines a lot of swash and plenty of buckle to come up with his energetic and fun-filled version of The Three Musketeers, now showing at the Douglas 1.

If you've seen Lester's two Beatles' films (A Hard Day's Night and Help!) you've got some idea about this satirical version of Alexandre Dumas' classic story.

This installment, subtitled The Queen's Diamonds, features the famous three, plus one trying to make the grade of Musketeer. After fumbling and bumbling around in a good natured way, they do get involved in a plan to get the queen's diamonds back from her lover in order to save her face.

But all the story lines seem incidental to the film's fun and frolic.

And part of the fun-poking must surely go to the credit of Lester, who has effectively miscast a whole bundle of familiar actors.

Michael York is D'Artagnan, the bumbling but gutsy young fellow who is on his way to becoming a Musketeer. And he falls for Raquel Welch as Constance who sews up the award for comedienne. Her slapstick antics are a delight, from start to finish.

The Three Musketeer characters are treated with frivolity by Richard Chamberlain, Oliver Reed and Frank Finlay. And their spirited pursuit of women, money, food and companionship instills frequent laughter.

Charlton Heston as the menacing Cardinal Richelieu is a step in a different direction for the actor Christopher Lee as Rochefort and Spike Milligan as Raquel's aged husband are terribly amusing.

Raquel Welch and Michael York as Mme. Bonancieux and D'Artagnan in The Three Musketeers.

Standing up against the robust quality of the dramatic-comedic content of the film are opulent settings and lavish period costuming.

Lester obviously has a lot of money tied up in the visual aspects of The Three Musketeers and a lot of time tied up in the gags.

Word is out that there was enough film footage to come up with a sequel. Some of the cast members are involved in a law suit over the sequel because they were paid for only one film.

Don't go to this movie expecting a probing look at Dumas' classic; go expecting a combination of the flourishing Fairbanks style and the crazy antics of the Ritz Brothers in the 1974 accounting. Lester's version is no more than fluff. PG.

Five Acts, Five Loves in 'Anatol'

Another act, another love That's Anatol, a play in five short acts which will be the next University of Nebraska Studio Theater production

Anatol, directed by NU Senior Dan Stratman of Omaha, will be presented at 8 p.m. nightly Friday-Monday, April 19-22

Anatol is a period piece written by Austrian psychiatrist turned playwright Arthur Schnitzler, Stratman said.

Schnitzler wrote Anatol in a series of seven acts between 1894 and 1906, Stratman said In the NU production the five acts used deal with five love affairs of Anatol.

The title-figure, played by Jim Sidik, is a well-to-do Austrian playboy who on his wedding eve recounts his affairs to a confidant, Max, played by Jerry Holman. Anatol's perceptions and attitude toward the opposite sex go through an evolution as he moves from woman to woman.

The sophisticated comedy almost becomes situation comedy, "with the predicaments becoming funnier than the lines," Stratman said

Anatol's lady loves include Cora (played by Judy Spareth), who is "the most domestic" of Anatol's ladies, Bianca, (Becky Dawson) a circus rider, Emily (Betty Dietz), a fallen woman raised by Anatol, Annie (Paula Reddinger), a ballerina, and Ilona (Judy Zimmerman), an actress

Because of the highly stylized era depicted in Anatol, Stratman feels that the production's success depends upon not only the actors but on painstaking attention to recreating the 1897 period in costumes and sets.

"Set designer Bob Moeller has made every attempt to reproduce the living environment of old Vienna," the director said "The costumes, designed by Nancy Myers, show a similar devotion to the period."

'Conrack' Gets Mixed Reviews On Island Where It Was Real

(c) New York Times

Daufuskie Island, S.D. — There is a strong sense of pride in the eyes of 84-year-old Mrs. Sarah Grant that belies her simple and meager existence. A midwife since 1932, she has delivered more than 100 children on this isolated barrier island in coastal South Carolina.

With no medical instruments and no doctor on the island, she assisted mothers in childbirth, using well water boiled on a wood stove. Later she smiled and waved at the children as they passed by her small shack on the way to the island's two-room schoolhouse.

A few days ago Mrs. Grant was among 29 Daufuskie Island adults and children taken by boat to nearby Beaufort to see the local premier of the movie Conrack, which depicts the classroom life of the children she delivered on Daufuskie Island.

The movie is the screen version of a book by Pat Conroy, a former Daufuskie Island school teacher in 1969 said he had found that most of his 18 students in the fifth through eighth grades could not count or spell and did not know the name of the continent on which they lived.

Conroy abandoned normal classroom methods and began teaching his pupils the elementary facts of music, science and geography. After a year on the island, he was discharged by the school system after he had left for a week to arrange a field trip to Atlanta for his pupils.

Eight of Conroy's pupils, who are now in high school, were in the audience to see the movie, which is stirring a controversy here.

All oc the pupils say Conrack includes exaggerated incidents, but there was embarrassed laughter as they recognized accurate portrayals of their experiences with Conroy.

"We didn't go to school barefoot or wear long raggy dresses," said 15-year-old Cynthia Stevens, a former pupil of Conroy's. "There were some kids who pronounced his name Conrack," she said.

Dr. Walter Trammel, Beaufort superintendent of education and the man who discharged Conroy, called the movie "a fictional farce, a typical Hollywood stereotype of the South."

"It's true that the fact of the island's isolation makes it a real tough situation," Trammel said. "It's almost impossible to operate a school there but under the same conditions I'd fire Pat again tomorrow."

Recently, Trammell refused to allow 300 pupils on the mainland to take a firld trip to see the movie during school hours because he said obscene language was used by the actors. "I'm not going to sanction such a movie, just like I don't sanction what's written on restroom walls," he said.

Conroy's former pupils now attend a high school on the mainland where the facilities are improved, but the conditions for elementary pupils on Daufuskie appear to be similar to what they have always been.

There are still two teachers on the island for some 30 pupils in the first eight grades. After graduating to school on the mainland, many of the pupils require individual tutoring to bring them up to the educational level of the mainland pupils.

Mrs. Grant is one of a vanishing breed. Population on the all-black island has dwindled from more than 700 in 1932 to 154 today. Water pollution from a nearby mainland industry wiped out the island's only economic resource — an oyster factory. Most of the islanders have slowly migrated to the mainland seeking other means of support, and those who remain depend on welfare.

"A bridge would mean much progress on the island, but we would lose our heritage," Mrs. Grant said. "But I guess you have to lose something if you want to gain something."

Mime Sgroi Here; Pupil Of Marceau

Mimist Mick Sgroi will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, in Kimball Recital Hall, 11th and R.

Combining elements of dance and acting, Sgroi performs the silent art of mime. One of the pieces he performs is entitled Evolution. It expresses his feelings about "the miracle of man."

Some other works to be performed include A Clown and the Telegram, a comic-tragic piece that comments on war, and The Ball, which Sgroi describes as a "fantasy trip."

Sgroi's training includes study at Marcel Marceau's Ecole Internationale de Mime in Paris. Sgroi, who has extensive teaching experience, will conduct two master classes Friday and Saturday at the University of Nebraska. Additionally, he will hold informal performance/rap sessions at 8 p.m. Thursday, at Smith Hall (1120 No. 14th) and at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Fedde Hall (35th and Holdrege). These performances are open to the public.

The Saturday night program is sponsored by Nebraska Union contemporary arts committee and the University's Women's Physical Education Dept.

Cheerful Giver

Medford, Ore. (UPI) — Galen Knox, Medford public accountant, has donated 10 gallons of blood to the Red Cross in the past 23 years. "They needed it and I gave it," he said of the 182 pints he has donated since 1951. "It makes me feel good that I am helping somebody."

Czech-Banned Film at Gallery

The Czechoslovakian film A Report on the Party and the Guests will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday in the Sheldon Gallery auditorium for members of the Nebraska Union Foreign Film Society.

Banned in its homeland, this film is an allegory about man's willingness to conform and to accept restrictions of his liberty.

Village Uncovered

Albany, Ga. (UPI) — Artifacts believed to date back 15,000 years were found recently when remnants of a prehistoric Indian village were uncovered. Boy Scouts reported finding arrowheads at the site and bulldozers later unearthed other artifacts.

Chet Atkins' Dual Role: Musician and Producer

try Music Hall of Fame last October, Atkins has made his mark as a producer of records and as a recording executive. He served as manager of RCA's Nashville office from 1957 until 1968 when he became vice president in charge of RCA's country music and Nashville operation, the first active performer ever to reach that executive level.

During the course of the years, Atkins has not only seen country music change from the basic, homegrown folk music that he started out playing to a polished, calculated commercial product, but he has been a highly influential factor in making country music what it is today. A music trade paper noted recently that, although the "phenomenal explosion" of Nashville's music business cannot be attributed to any one person, "No individual has been more responsible for this growth than Chet Atkins." As a producer, he has developed such stars as Don Gibson, Floyd Cramer, Waylon Jennings, Jerry Reed and Charley Pride, the first successful black country singer Even before he became a producer, it was Atkins who brought Elvis Presley to the attention of RCA.

"Chet has done something no other record producer has done," Boots Randolph, the saxophonist who has toured with Atkins since 1964, has pointed out.

"He is able to sustain his artists. Some people go up and down but Chet has the ability to keep people up. He has been a strong influence on others in different companies. They see what he's doing and try to emulate it. His artists know they're up against a perfectionist and they work hard to meet his demands."

A few days after the opening of Opryland, Atkins — a modest, softspoken, quietly elegant man — was in New York talking about his latest album, The Atkins-Travis Traveling Show, a set of unaccompanied guitar duets and songs with the man who was his original inspiration, Merle Travis.

Grand Ole Opry performance in Nashville's new $15 million Opry House.

"It's a great feeling to sit and play with your idol and have him braggin' about you," Atkins reflected as he picked softly on a guitar with the gentle, muted sound and springy beat that he learned from Travis. "This session with Merle was the first time I'd sung on a record since I made my first records in 1947. They said then that they wanted some vocals. I decided I could do it as well as anyone — which proved to be wrong."

Those vocal efforts convinced Atkins that he was no singer and he managed to destroy the masters of all of them. Since then, he has let his guitar make all the music until he found himself in the comforting, home-like surroundings of his session with Travis.

For someone who couldn't make it as a singer, Atkins came into country music at an inopportune time.

He remembers hearing the Grand Ole Opry on WSM in Nashville for the first time about 1937 on a neighbor's radio when he was living outside of Columbus, Ga. He had moved there with his father from a 50-acre farm in Luttrell, Tenn., where he was born on June 20, 1924. In school, his English teacher recalled many years later, "You could always find Chet with his guitar at lunch or recess in the restroom, picking away." It was her impression that young Chet did not have many friends but he says his solitary guitar picking was not caused by a lack of desire to make friends or because he was "excessively obsessed" with his guitar.

"We were poor," he explained. "and my clothes were inferior to those worn by the other kids at school. I had an inferiority complex."

By the time Atkins played on the Opry for the first time in 1946, vocalists were in full command.

The stars were Red Foley, in whose group Atkins played, Cowboy Copas, Pee Wee King and Bill Monroe. But the songs were still traditional — Wabash Cannonball and Old Shep, which was Red Foley's big song.

Atkins's dual roles as artist and producer have often created conflicts which are almost invariably resolved in favor of Atkins the producer, both in terms of demands on his time and in his willingness to pass along to other performers material that he might have used successfully himself.

"I knew it was interfering with my career," he admitted. "artists that you're producing get to look at you as a father figure. 'I've got to have you, Chet,' they say. If I'd really applied myself to the guitar, I could have had a lot more hit records."

He has done all right for himself (55 albums). In Nashville, where he and his wife, Leona, still live in a modest house they moved into many years ago (their daughter, Merle, named for his old friend, Merle Travis, lives nearby with her family). He is reputed to have done very well in areas other than music.

"He's deep, that Chet," his old friend, Boudleux Bryant, the songwriter, once said. "What I want to know is how he knew to buy up half of Nashville's music row before the dirt turned to diamonds."

Jack Valenti Can Afford Sound Sleep

By Irv Kupcinet
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Jack Valenti, who as a presidential aide once declared he was sleeping better because Lyndon Baines Johnson was in the White House, now is sleeping better because of the crescendo of the movie box office. The cacaphony of jingling money is soothing to the ears of Valenti, who left the White House to become president of the Motion Picture Assn. of America. Valenti reported the first two months of 1974 were the greatest the film industry has known since the MPAA started keeping box-office statistics 16 years ago.

Valenti credited such movies as The Exorcist, Sleeper, The Sting, Papillon, American Graffiti, The Way We Were and The Last Detail, all big attractions, for getting more people out of the home and into the theater. He predicted that Mame and The Great Gatsby, while failing to please the critics, will contribute handsomely to the soaring box office, which exceeded $1.2 billion last year.

A good portion of that total gross comes from the foreign market, where American films long have been popular. Valenti has the figures to show that our movies rank second in practically every nation in the world, topped only by each country's locally made films.

'Rude Mechanicals' at Playhouse Is Children's Theater Show

The Rude Mechanicals, a non-Shakespearean version of A Midsummer Night's Dream, will be presented as the children's theater production at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, 2500 So. 56th, beginning Friday.

Public showings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday, 10:30 a.m., 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. next Sunday.

The story involves an out-of-work carpenter, Peter Quince (played by Mary Zimmerman) who must dismiss his employes "the rude mechanicals," unless he can find them other employment.

When the Duke (Scott Boughn) offers a prize for a play to be performed in honor of his wedding, the rude mechanicals seize the chance to recoup their failing fortunes.

Other cast members are Loreda Shuster, Julie Lightner, Anne Hinshaw, Kathy Guthrie, Jill Gradwohl, Danny Brennenstuhl, Dana Pratt and Bruce McVey.

Evelyn Weymouth directs his play which is said to take liberties with the Shakespearean text in order to achieve its own comedy style.

Art at Kearney

Kearney -- Kearney State College graduate students Ruth Garrison, Kearney, and Nick Kripal, Lodgepole, have an exhibition of original ceramic works at the Phoenicia Gallery. Kripal recently won a first place in the Kearney state Kappa Pi art Honorary exhibition. His entry was a ceramic pot. Ms. Garrison won an honorable mention in the same show for a block print.

Surveyed, 1792

Wagner's 'Parsifal' On Radio

Richard Wagner's Parsifal, described by one writer as a "stage-consecrating festival drama" in three acts, will be broadcast Saturday over the Metropolitan Opera radio network.

The opera, which will start at 12 noon will be heard locally over radio station KRNU-FM (90.3mc).

Singing principal roles will be soprano Janis Martin as Kundry, tenor Jess Thomas in the title role, baritone Thomas Stewart as Amfortas, bass John Macurdy as Gurnemanz, baritone Morley Meredith as Klingsor, and bass James Morris as Titurel.
